FIFTY YEARS OF THE DRAMA.
1850—1900.

(COPYRIGHT.)

In these columns it is proposed to give a strictly alphabetical arrangement of the titles of plays produced during the last fifty years. It will be the most complete list ever published, and should prove invaluable to authors desiring to discover whether a certain title has ever been used, and when. To members of the dramatic profession it will be useful in determining the dates of plays in which they have achieved successes. Our readers are politely requested to advise us of any omission or inaccuracy which they may notice.

This list as soon as complete will be published in cheap book form.

Using the "Nutshell" Stropper.

Can YOU Strop a Razor
Not one man in twenty-five gets satisfactory results from an ordinary strop. It's the bugbear of self-shaving. It drives men to the barber—it even makes them buy "Safety" Razors, sometimes.
The "NUTSHELL" AUTOMATIC STROPPER
is a British invention which entirely disposes of this difficulty. Users have no trouble with their blades. Half-a-minute in the "Nutshell" before shaving keeps the razor in perfect condition. Regular use lengthens a blade's life.

PROHIBITING "THE MIKADO."

The prohibition of the performance of The Mikado by the Lord Chamberlain is an incident which cannot be allowed to pass without comment. In England, we are all of us wisely reverent of old institutions, and it is our practise to tolerate them as long as they do not reduce themselves to utter absurdity. On the whole, the Lord Chamberlain's office has performed its functions in the licensing of plays of late with judgment and discretion. When it has forbidden the presentation of a piece, it has usually been the case that the general public has not felt the deprivation, while the special minority which wanted to see the work was always able to gratify its desire by a "private" performance. But the most recent action of the office takes us back to the old days when the Censorship was exercised in a manner obviously ridiculous. Thus, in Charles II.'s day, the performance of BEAUMONT & FLETCHER'S Maid's Tragedy was prohibited, because "the murder accomplished by the heroine, Evadne, might supply a dangerous example to the Evadnes then shining at Court in the same rank of royal distinction." Later on, the Master of the Revels insisted on the whole of the first act of Richard III. being expunged from COLLEY CIBBER'S version, lest the distresses of King Henry VI., who is killed by Richard in that act, should "put weak people too much in mind of King James, then living in France." It must be admitted that there was more excuse for the objection of the authorities to FIELDING'S Pasquin, a satire on the political corruption of the day, in which Sir ROBERT WALPOLE was represented silencing noisy patriots with bribes, and even joining with them in a dance. This led to the introduction of the Licensing Act, which made it law that, for the future, every dramatic piece, including prologues and epilogues, should, previous to performance, receive the licence of the Lord Chamberlain; and that, without his permission, no London theatre, unprotected by a patent, should open its doors.

Coming down to later times, we meet with the celebrated Happy Land case. On February 3rd, 1873, a piece called The Happy Land was submitted for licence from the Court Theatre to the Reader of Plays. It contained a good many political allusions; but as they were generalities and not pointed at individuals, the licence was granted. It was afterwards pointed out to the then Lord Chamberlain that three members of the Government were actually represented in person on the stage. The Lord Chamberlain himself visited the theatre; and finding, on inquiry, that these personalities were not in the MS. submitted, gave orders that the licence should be suspended. This was mentioned to the manager of the old Court Theatre, who expressed regret; and the piece was allowed to be played on the understanding that the details objected to were removed. The real cause of the Lord Chamberlain's interference was that three of the characters, Ethais, Phyllon, and Lutin, were made up as Messrs. GLADSTONE, LOWE, and AYRTON respectively. Considering the license allowed to the caricature of public individuals in the illustrated press, the prohibition was marvellously inconsistent.

Its absurdity, however, is far surpassed by the forbidding of performances of The Mikado. The opera, instead of being a satire on Japanese government, is simply a piece of amusing whimsicality, the essence of its fun being general, not at all particular or national. Where is the harm in Mr. GILBERT'S libretto? We are all familiar with the story and characters of the "book"; and it is difficult to imagine where the "offence in't" lies. Is it possible that, by some curious coincidence, an incident in The Mikado has been paralleled in the recent history of Japan? We knew that Ko-Ko, having been a cheap tailor, was promoted to be Lord High Executioner; can it be that in Japan at the present day some prominent official has risen from the ranks, and that he has taken Mr. GILBERT'S satire as aimed at himself? Or is it that Ko-Ko's arguments to Nanki-Poo to induce him to be beheaded are held by the Japanese authorities to be a sly hit at their practice of public executions? "Observe," says Ko-Ko, "you have a month to live, and you'll live like a fighting-cock at my expense. When the day comes there'll be a grand public ceremonial. You'll be the central figure; no one will attempt to deprive you of that distinction. There'll be a procession—bands, dead march, bells tolling, all the girls in tears. Then, when it's over, general rejoicings, and a display of fireworks in the evening. You won't see them; but they'll be there all the same." Or is that some neglected Court lady has found a resemblance between herself and Katisha, and takes Mr. GILBERT'S allusions to her elbow as personally objectionable? It is difficult to imagine that the name-part in the piece is in any way offensive to the loyalty of the Japanese. The Mikado is represented as all that is dignified and regal; and the absolute wisdom and justice of his desire to make "the punishment fit the crime" is as admirable as it is famous. We feel certain that Mr. RICHARD TEMPLE'S Mikado was more truly reverend and gorgeous than any real Mikado who ever reigned in Japan. We are again thrown back upon the supposition of personal sensitiveness in Japanese subjects. But is it fair because some plump pluralist in the "Flowery Land" may have felt the part of Pooh-Bah "touch him up a little" that such a deduction from the gaiety of the English nation should be made? Where is this sort of thing to stop? Soon, we suppose, we shall have the Chinese objecting to a revival of The Geisha on the ground of the cut at the national character contained in the personage who was so comically embodied by Mr. Huntley Wright. We shall have Portia's description to her French suitor left out, by the Lord Chamberlain's order, to avoid any possible diminution of the entente cordiale; and Henry V. entirely tabooed on account of the war episodes which might be unpleasant to the French Ambassador. All plays based on Russian methods of government—including that invaluable melodramatic item, transportation to Siberia—will be out of the question; and the Prince of Monaco will insist on the gambling scene in The Prodigal Son being eliminated as reflecting on the main source of his revenues.

THE LATE DICK MANSELL.

Mr. Edward Compton, in sending a contribution to the "Dick Mansell Widow Fund," writes:—"I send you my cheque for one guinea. I only knew Mansell slightly, but I read with much regret of the straits to which he was reduced at the last, and the sad position in which the widow has been left. In regard to his meteoric career, and the many things he has been connected with, I have been surprised that no one has mentioned the fact that some thirty-five years ago (or it may be thirty-six or thirty-seven), he and (I think) his brother produced at the old Holborn Theatre a very literal, bald translation of the play of Kean, by Alexandre Dumas the elder. I was one of a very thin house on one night of its brief career, having, as a mere boy, stolen out and gone to the play; and, although there was very little to recommend the piece to English audiences, it yet lived in my memory so vividly that some dozen years ago I commissioned the late T. Edgar Pemberton to do me a very free adaptation of the piece, which he and I practically wrote together, though only his name appears. This I have been playing continuously in my répertoire since then, and am nearing the 300th performance.

"I may mention that in Mr. Mansell's cast the late Tom Swinburne played the part of Kean, and E. J. O'Dell—now still alive, and nearly ninety, I suppose—played the part of the old Prompter, created in my version by the late Lewis Ball. It is also interesting to note that in the original French play the part of Anna Danby was sustained by Mme. Sarah Bernhardt; she thus, I believe, making her first appearance on the regular stage. Both Salvini and Rossi played the piece in Italy a great deal, but, I believe, with the exception of the disastrous production of the Mansells which I have alluded to, I am the only English actor who has produced the work and played the part. I may say it is a great favourite with my audiences."

Twelfth Night, though it aims at the ludicrous rather than the ridiculous, is full of sweetness and pleasantry. As Hazlitt says: "Shakespeare's comic genius resembles the bee rather in its power of extracting the sweets from weeds or poisons than in leaving a sting behind it." How ingeniously planned is the Garden scene, wherein Malvolio is fooled to the top of his bent by the mischievous Maria. And with this wonderful bit of comedy may be contrasted the exquisite charm and poetry of the character of Viola, whose confession of her love to Orsino is a passage on which one always loves to dwell. This charm and poetry were fully realised in the revival of the Shakespearean comedy at the Waldorf Theatre on the evening of the 26th ult. by Miss Julia Marlowe, whose sentimental, romantic girl had all the shrinking timidity that one would expect in the duel scene with the fatuous Sir Andrew Aguecheek. The reception accorded to the actress proclaimed the enjoyment felt by Shakespearean lovers in an impersonation at once so interesting and so thoroughly in accordance with the best traditions. Mr. Sothern's embodiment of Malvolio was as sound a rendering of the character as the critic's mind has had to cope withal. Olivia's steward is a somewhat complex character. Naturally a coxcomb, with a lofty contempt for the humour of the tankard, he has something of the complacent noodle, and is yet armed with a show of dignity on occasion, as when his persecution grows in violence. Mr. Sothern makes the Malvolio of the Garden scene an exquisitely conceited fool, but his Malvolio of the madhouse closely approaches the regions of pathos, and his indignant yet tempered protest when released from durance vile insensibly excites a sympathy which removes the character altogether from the realms of comedy. Mr. Sothern moves us to the heartiest laughter in the famous cross-gartered scene, and the reading, if a trifle too grave in parts, is informed by the spirit of true comedy.

A delightful surprise was the appearance of Miss Kate Phillips as Maria. No better choice could have been made for the serving maid to Olivia. Her laughter became infectious, and the audience, by their reception of the popular actress, were in evident agreement with Sir Toby when he pronounced Maria to be "an excellent wench i' faith." Mr. Rowland Buckstone did not underestimate the value of the bibulous pranks of Sir Toby, and played with a breadth and drollery that his distinguished father might have put into the character. In the Garden scene Sir Toby was exceedingly funny. The fatuousness of Sir Andrew Aguecheek was excellently simulated by Mr. Crawley; the Sebastian of Mr. Eric made an excellent double of Viola; Miss Kruger's Olivia was somewhat lacking in distinction; and Mr. Reicher was a robust and mellow-voiced Feste. The music of the songs was sung to a mandolin and guitar accompaniment, but there was nothing very special in the rendering.

The revival of As You Like It at the Waldorf for two nights only was specially interesting, as it gave London playgoers an opportunity of seeing Miss Julia Marlowe in the character of one of the most popular of Shakespearean heroines. In the past a series of great actresses—among them Mrs. Pritchard, Peg Woffington, Mrs. Jordan, and Mrs. Siddons—played this favourite part, and distinguished modern actresses who have achieved success as Rosalind include Mrs. Kendal, Ada Cavendish, Adelaide Neilson, Mrs. Langtry, Rose Coghlan, Miss Litton, Ada Rehan, Julia Neilson, Dorothea Baird, and Lilian Braithwaite.

That such a highly accomplished actress as Miss Marlowe would present an interesting and attractive Rosalind could of course be taken for granted, and she did not disappoint her many admirers. Without attempting anything strikingly novel in her treatment of the character, Miss Marlowe succeeded in delighting the audience by a performance that was distinguished by many merits. It had in the first place the essentially feminine element of charm, added to which were those indispensable aids to success in such a part—high spirits, and a roguish enjoyment of the innocent deception which Rosalind practises on her lover. The scene where the supposed youth is overcome by the recital of Orlando's encounter with the lions and the sight of the blood-stained handkerchief proved one of the most effective of the evening, the sudden change from thoughtless gaiety to trepidation and faintness being depicted with all the skill and artistic finish of the experienced actress. Mr. Lewis was a youthful and handsome Orlando, and gave excellent support in the delightful forest scenes with Rosalind, bearing himself gallantly, and delivering his lines in good elocutionary style. Mr. Crawley did very well as Jaques; he played the part of the melancholy lord naturally, and was duly applauded for his delivery of the famous "Seven Ages" speech. Mr. Vibart as Touchstone showed a keen appreciation of its humorous points, with an occasional American intonation. Miss Lamison was a girlish and pleasing Celia; Miss Clement was well placed as Phebe; and Miss Alexander was a sufficiently awkward, uncouth Audrey. Adam was excellently embodied by Mr. Crompton; Mr. Mawson was a dignified Duke; Mr. Reicher successfully doubled the parts of Frederick and Corin; and Mr. Buckstone was an amusingly loutish William. Sylvius had a good exponent in Mr. Anderson; and other rôles were ably acted by Messrs. Aspland, Eric, Kelly, and Howson. Mr. Aspland, in the character of Amiens, sang in excellent style "Under the greenwood tree" and "Blow, blow, thou winter wind." The wrestling match between Le Beau and Charles in the first act was cleverly done. At the final fall of the curtain Miss Marlowe and Mr. Lewis were called in front of the curtain and loudly applauded. The Forest scenery was pretty, and the general production reflected credit upon the management.

Another of Shakespeare's works was staged at the Waldorf on Wednesday evening, Hamlet, not only the most famous play in the English language, but the one which has been the subject of more critical comment both at home and abroad than any other of the great dramatic creations bearing his name. "The figure of Hamlet," aptly remarks an eminent critic, "as it shaped itself in Shakespeare's imagination and came to life in his drama, is one of the very few immortal figures of art and poetry, like Cervantes' Don Quixote, exactly its contemporary, and Goethe's Faust." All the leading English actors of tragedy have played Hamlet, and the character has been portrayed by them in accordance with their various readings of it. In the representation of the most popular rôle in the whole range of the drama much must of necessity depend upon the actual personality of the actor, and whether he is in any degree handicapped in the successful accomplishment of his difficult task by disabilities which are of a physical nature, and therefore beyond his control. In the case of Mr. Sothern, the American actor now in our midst happily possesses the advantages of a good figure and presence, added to which he has expressive features and a fine, resonant voice. Speaking generally, we are disposed to give Mr. Sothern every credit for a thoroughly sound embodiment of the Prince, that satisfies the critical judgment as a whole, while at the same time it never quite reaches the dividing line between stage-work of very high quality and actual inspiration. In other words, it is a careful, interesting, and sincere exhibition of the actor's art without that touch of real genius which renders the portrayal of such a part as Hamlet a truly great performance. Mr. Sothern does not indulge in new readings of the most notable passages, and introduces but little novelty in the ordinary business. The "To be or not to be" speech was delivered naturally, without any striving after effect, and this remark also applies to other well-known passages. The scene with the Queen Mother was given with much passion and feeling. Miss Julia Marlowe's impersonation of Ophelia was chiefly distinguished by its quiet but wholly effective pathos. The poor girl's madness was shown by many subtle indications, finishing with the wild laugh of the maniac as she rushes off. Mr. Crompton, in his admirable rendering of Polonius, carefully avoided exhibiting the senility with which some actors endow the character, and he spoke his lines with point and due effect. Mr. Lewis was seen to considerable advantage as Horatio; and Mr. Eric deserves commendation for his manly Laertes. Miss Kruger as the Queen distinguished herself in the closet scene with Hamlet, the poignancy of Gertrude's feelings being expressed by heartrending fits of weeping. The lines allotted to the Ghost were sonorously rendered by Mr. Vibart; and the humours of the First Gravedigger were done full justice to by Mr. Buckstone, ably supported by Mr. Kaufman as the Second Gravedigger. Rosencrantz and Guildenstern had satisfactory representatives in Mr. Anderson and Mr. Taylor; and Mr. Howson was well placed as Osric. Mr. Aspland as Marcellus, Mr. Kelly as Bernardo, and Mr. Tower as Francisco all rendered good service. Mr. Reicher as the First Player spoke his lines forcibly, and able work was done by Mr. Nichols as Fortinbras and Mr. Turnley as Reynaldo. Miss Alexander appeared as the Player Queen. The play was excellently staged.

Romeo and Juliet was revived on Thursday evening, and a large and enthusiastic audience was attracted to witness the performance of Shakespeare's tragic play. Naturally, the chief interest centred in the Romeo of Mr. Sothern and the Juliet of Miss Marlowe. Those who had seen the American actress in other famous Shakespearean heroines were fully prepared for an admirable rendering of Juliet; and Miss Marlowe more than fulfilled their expectations. She struck the right note from the very beginning, expressing with rare art the passion and fervour of real love, the growth thereof quickened by romantic surroundings. There were many charming imaginative touches, which showed how much earnest study had been bestowed on the character. In the love scenes in the balcony the actress gave unbounded delight by her natural, unaffected rendering of the lines in which Juliet expresses with such "simple honesty the first passion of love." In the scenes with the nurse she gave further evidence of an exquisitely feminine perception of the character; while in the death scene she thrilled the house by the tragic intensity of her acting. As Juliet's lover Mr. Sothern quite upheld his reputation as an actor who can always be depended upon to go far, no matter what character he may undertake. His Romeo was marked by many excellent qualities, prominent amongst these being his admirable delivery of the passionate pleading of the lover. Very powerful, too, was Mr. Sothern's acting in the last scene of the third act. Mr. Lewis's Mercutio was made very acceptable by reason of its freshness, and the earnestness and sincerity displayed throughout. Mr. Crompton scored as Friar Laurence, and as the Chorus spoke the prologue with fine effect. Mrs. E. H. Brooke was specially engaged for the part of the nurse, a part that she played in delightful style. Miss Kruger did well as Lady Capulet, Mr. Eric was a capable Tybalt, and Mr. Anderson gave a satisfactory account of Benvolio. Deserving of praise also was the Capulet of Mr. Mawson, and the Montague of Mr. Reicher; Mr. Vibart appearing as Escalus, Mr. Howson as Paris, and Miss Clement as Lady Montague.

ROYAL OPERA, COVENT GARDEN.

On Tuesday night the Covent Garden season of grand opera opened with Das Rheingold, the prologue to Wagner's great work, Der Ring des Nibelungen, and, in spite of the dismal weather, there was a splendid house; hardly a vacant seat was to be seen in the stalls, while the upper parts of the house were crowded. Dr. Hans Richter received a warm welcome on taking his place, and after the opening bars of the National Anthem, all lights were extinguished in the auditorium, and the curtain rose on the first performance of the season. Although Das Rheingold is the least popular number of the Ring, it is important as giving the key-note to the rest of the wonderful music-dramas, and it clearly shows how the thirst for gold is as fatal in its effect on gods as on man.

The highest power is given to him who shall forge a ring from the gold guarded by the Rhine maidens, but to do this he must renounce love and all pure ideals. Alberich, the ungainly dwarf, succeeds in doing so, and when it is wrested from him, curses the ring and its owner. This forms the chief motive in the story of the Ring. The performance of Das Rheingold, which was given without any interval on Tuesday night, was well up to the Covent Garden standard; many of the artists who sang in this work last season again greatly distinguished themselves. Herr C. Whitehill made a dignified Wotan and Herr Zador an entirely successful exponent of the dwarf, Alberich; while the weird characteristics of Mime were most skilfully undertaken by Herr Bechstein. Mme. Kirkby Lunn on this occasion sang the music of Fricka, and her beautiful voice was heard to great advantage. The part of Erda was successfully sung by Mme. Edna Thornton, and the three Rhine Maidens, Woglinde, Wellgunde, and Flosshilde, gracefully enacted by Mme. Agnes Nicholls, Fräulein Fiebiger, and Frau Tolli. Herr Stockhausen was an effective Donner, and Herr Jörn an entirely satisfactory Loge, while Herr Nietan, Herr Knüpfer, and Herr Raboth proved of great service in the parts of Froh, Fasolt, and Fafner. The scenic effects were capitally managed, and worked with great smoothness and certainty, and in the first scene—the bottom of the Rhine—the maidens gliding about as they guarded the gold and the strange plants growing in the bed of the river made up a picture that did the greatest credit to the stage-management at Covent Garden; and the fine orchestra, under the watchful care of Dr. Richter, deserved hearty praise. H.R.H. Princess Louise Duchess of Argyll sat in the Royal box, and among the host of distinguished visitors were Lady Charles Beresford, Lord and Lady Aberdare, Sir E. Hamilton, Sir Julius and Lady Wernher, Countess Fedora Gleichen, Countess of Derby, Lady Lister Kaye, Mr. Lionel de Rothschild, Lady Alexander Paget, and Lord Colebrooke.

Die Walküre, the second and most favourite portion of the Ring was given on Wednesday evening. The performance attracted a large audience, and was additionally honoured by the presence of their Royal Highnesses Princess Christian, Princess Victoria of Schleswig-Holstein, and the Duke and Duchess of Connaught. The same plan was adopted as last season, the performance commencing at five in the afternoon, with a break of an hour and a half before the second act. From the opening scene in Hunding's dwelling, where the beautiful duet between Siegmund and Sieglinde occurs, while the dawn is breaking in the forest outside, until the passionate and dramatic close, the musical interest in Die Walküre never flags, and the performance on Wednesday under Dr. Richter was in many respects masterly. Herr Kraus, who appeared as Siegmund, has for some years been in Wagnerian rôles a favourite at Covent Garden. He has a powerful voice and clear enunciation, and if his singing in the dawn duet lacked somewhat of delicacy and charm, his impersonation of Siegmund on the whole deserved great praise. The Sieglinde of Mme. Fleischer Edel was charmingly sung and admirably acted; while the reappearance of Mme. Gulbranson, an artist of experience, lent additional attraction to the part of Brünnhilde. Herr Whitehill proved a dignified exponent of Wotan; and Herr Knüpfer greatly distinguished himself in the character of the uncouth Hunding. Mme. Kirkby-Lunn made the utmost out of the small part of Fricka; and it is interesting to note that no less than six English vocalists were in the cast, Miss Gleeson-White taking the part of Ortlinde, Mme. Agnes Nicholls that of Helmwige, while Mme. Edna Thornton, Miss G. Lonsdale, and Miss Maud Santley were responsible for the characters of Siegrune, Grimgerde, and Rossweisse. The scenery and stage effects were of that high standard to which the Syndicate have accustomed its patrons, while the performance all round of Wagner's masterly conception deserved great praise.

The first production in German in England of Mozart's Bastien und Bastienne was given on Thursday night, followed by the revival of Humperdinck's Hänsel und Gretel. Mozart's youthful work was first performed at the private theatre of Dr. Anton Meszaner, a rich citizen of Vienna, the libretto being an imitation of Mme. Favart's parody of Rousseau's "Devin du Village," and in the music Mozart preserves the simple pastoral character. It was produced in Paris in 1753, and became at once popular. The story is simple in the extreme. Bastienne, who is in danger of losing her lover, Bastien, seeks the aid of a fortune-teller, Colas, who informs her that Bastien is still true, but has been attracted by a fine lady, Bastien meanwhile wants to return to his old love, and after a time succeeds in making his peace with the heroine, and all ends happily.

Although Mozart's little one-act opera seemed somewhat lost on so large a stage, it was daintily mounted, and the pretty music skilfully sung, and when we consider that the work was composed by a boy of twelve years old, it is wonderful how well the music sounded. Fräulein Hempel made a charming Bastienne, and Herr Nietan acted and sang well in the part of Bastien; while Herr Zador imparted humour to the little part of Colas, the fortune-teller; the conductor's piano accompanied the recitatives, and the well-painted scene of a village made a pleasing setting for the little opera.

Humperdinck's delightful opera, Hänsel und Gretel, followed Mozart's work, and proved a most welcome revival; it was well acted and mounted, and the scenic effects in the second act admirably managed. Never before, perhaps, have the changes of scene in this opera been so silently done, with no more sound (as regards the audience) than a passing cloud, and it added greatly to that beautiful portion of the forest scene where the angels are seen descending and guarding the sleeping children, and amply deserved the hearty applause which followed. Fräulein Fiebiger and Fräulein Hempel acted and sang the parts of Hänsel and Gretel with great spirit, Fräulein Hempel singing Gretel's music with no little charm; while Herr Zador made a capital Peter, imparting considerable humour to the character of the jovial broom-maker. Frau Tolli appeared as the wife, and Frau Reinl made an excellent witch. Miss Hatchard and Mme. Edna Thornton both sang well in the parts of the Dewman and Sandman, and the Bellew and Stock Choir were heard to advantage in the forest scenes. Mr. Percy Pitt was the conductor of both operas, and much of the charming musical effects in the forest scene were due to his care and skill.

MME. JANE HADING and her entire Parisian company will give a flying matinée of Frou-Frou at the Grand Theatre, Nottingham, on Thursday, June 6.

VARIETY GOSSIP.

The final meeting with the Arbitrator was held on Thursday. It is anticipated that Mr. Asquith's award will be made in about a fortnight. The adjourned general meeting of the Variety Artists' Federation will be held at the Empire, Camberwell, on the first Sunday succeeding the publication of the award.

Messrs. Klaw and Erlanger, who opened their variety palace in Philadelphia on Monday, April 22, are threatened with a flank move on the part of Messrs. Keith, Proctor, and Williams, who promise them great opposition in the legitimate. Messrs. Klaw and Erlanger have combined with the Shuberts, who direct the Waldorf Theatre here.

"La Carmencita," a Spanish episode, adapted by Louis Cohen, with music by Herman Finck, will be produced by Mr. Sidney Watson for Miss Amy Augarde at the Oxford on Monday, May 13. The title-rôle should be particularly well suited to Miss Augarde's style.

Mr. Charles Wilson, who was for a number of years responsible for the scenarios and the staging of Alhambra ballets, and who for nearly a year has occupied a similar position with Mr. Oscar Hammerstein in New York, returned to London on Thursday. It is hoped that he may be induced to remain in England.

Their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales and family were present at the Hippodrome on Tuesday afternoon. The Royal party were highly delighted at the intelligence displayed by De Gracia's elephants in their games of football and cricket. One of the pachyderms, either by chance or for the purpose, kicked one of the footballs into the box occupied by the Royal children, who quickly threw it out again. The balls only weigh two ounces, and are covered with silk.

Minstrelsy, it is understood, will be revived in London by the largest minstrel organisation in the States, which is to be brought over here by John W. Vogel, Mr. Robert Deeley being the manager. The Haverley Combination and the Mastodon Minstrels were famous predecessors of this aggregation, and from the former troupe the famous Bohee Brothers seceded and became a very popular turn in the eighties at the London Pavilion.

Mr. Albert Chevalier, we are given to understand, contemplates a London season in the autumn. If he can find a suitable theatre, he will possibly produce thereat a musical play from his pen, and revive Pantaloon, Mr. J. M. Barrie's piece, in which he scored such a triumph at the Duke of York's Theatre at its revival in June last year. He may also include Atonement, a one-act play from his pen recently produced.

The first of the Saturday musical matinées at the Palace, which were successfully instituted last year, will recommence next Saturday, the 11th inst., when the orchestra, under Mr. Hermann H. Finck, will render Offenbach's beautiful and impressive Barcarolle from The Tales of Hoffman, now being presented at the Adelphi nightly by Herr Gregor's company from Berlin. Mr. Finck's pot-pourri of "Musical Memories" will not, however, be discarded; but, on the other hand, will be brought thoroughly up to date.

Miss Edna May went to Tottenham on Monday with her fiancé, Mr. Oscar Lewisohn, to present the handsome trophy known as the Southern Charity Football Cup, with the accompanying medals, to the famous Spurs. Crowds turned out to pay homage to the belle of New York. Other "star" turns included George Robey and Fred Wright, jun., who played the onerous parts of linesmen with particular credit. The utmost good humour prevailed, and George Robey delighted the crowds with some amusing "gags."

The latest recruit to the variety stage is Miss Kitty Gordon, who has recently been playing the part of the Anarchist Countess in Nelly Neil. Released on Saturday night from the Aldwych, she was promptly snapped up by Mr. Frank Glenister for the London Pavilion, where she has scored greatly by her fine presence and admirable singing of that pretty trifle, "The cigarette song."

The production of Sir Roger de Coverley, the new Empire ballet, is now fixed for Tuesday evening next. It is interesting to note that this is the very first ballet from the pen of that accomplished writer, Adrian Ross, who did so much to add to the gaiety of London in The Shop Girl and My Girl. His collaborator in the music is Dr. Osmond Carr, a former artistic comrade. The ballet is designed and produced by Mr. C. Wilhelm, and the dances and actions are arranged by Mme. Katti Lanner. Lady Dolly will be played by Mlle. Adeline Genée; Captain Fancourt, her suitor, by Miss Dorothy Craske; Mr. Fred Farren will appear as the Hon. Tom Vallancy; and Mlle. Zanfretta will return to the Empire stage to impersonate Lady Vallancy, a widow. The character-part of Rube Lee, a gipsy, will be in the hands of Mr. P. Sundberg. The period will be that of Queen Anne, and the three scenes into which the production is divided have been painted by Messrs. R. McCleery and J. Harker.

Mr. Charles Urban, with a large staff of assistants, on Friday cinematographed the whole of the impressive naval demonstration given at Portsmouth before the Colonial Premiers and members of both Houses of Parliament, and the complete series of animated scenes, including the "rushing" of Whale Island by a naval brigade, the manœuvres of the submarines, the torpedo attack on the Dreadnought, and the inspection of that mighty battleship by our visitors, will be seen at the Alhambra on Monday.

Mr. Wilkie Bard earned 25s. a week a dozen years ago as a clerk. Now he is the star turn in every programme in which his name appears, and tops the bill at the Hackney Empire next week. He "took to the profession" with a line of "talking songs, quite an idea of his own, and his first real engagement was at Morecambe, where a Yorkshire landlord engaged him for his free-and-easy concerts for a month at the rate of 30s. per week; but he was paid off first night with the words:—"Here, lad, is two half croons for tha'. Noo push off." And this being at a time when there were no contracts, the now famous Wilkie Bard pushed off.

As all the variety world knows, Mr. Bard is married to Miss Nellie Stratton. On one occasion the talented couple were engaged to play in a theatre where a variety entertainment was sandwiched between the acts of a drama. This is how the management billed his goods:—

"Rogues and Vagabonds."

Wilkie Bard and Nellie Stratton.

The latest quotations of music hall shares are as follow:—Alhambra, 1½; Canterbury, ½; Empire 12s. paid) 1½, ditto (10s. paid) 1⅜; London Pavilion Ordinary 4½, ditto Preferred 5; London Coliseum, ½; Metropolitan, ½; Moss' Empire 4½, ditto 5 per cent. Preferred 4½; Oxford, 6½; Palace, 12s.; Tivoli, 5½; and Variety Consolidated Theatres, 12s. 6d.

Miss Lelia Rozz, who should have been appearing at the Pavilion, Glasgow, this week, has had to stay in Edinburgh, being indisposed.

The Palace-by-the-Sea, Clacton, opens on the 20th inst. with a first-class variety company, booked by Mr. David Hart, who is sole agent for this well-appointed place of amusement. Mr. Hart has had some noted artists call on him at Overcliffe, Gravesend, during the week to fix up dates.

The Licensing Committee sitting at Chelmsford confirmed the licence granted to the Palace-by-the-Sea, Ltd., Clacton, but readjusted the monopoly value. The Justices had fixed this at £1500, to be paid in fifteen yearly instalments of £100; but the confirming committee arranged for £75 to be paid yearly so long as the licence is used.

Whitsuntide will see an addition to the Scarborough Aquarium in the shape of a new theatre with a holding capacity of 1,000. Cantilevers holding up a spacious balcony will do away with obstructive pillars; and electric lighting, tasteful decorations, and tip-up seats in the pit and stalls will add to the comfort and elegance of the place, in which it is intended to have musical comedy, comic opera, and high-class variety.

The proprietors of the Manchester music-halls were invited to meet the Watch Committee on Monday, and were asked to consider the advisability of discontinuing living statuary. With two exceptions, the proprietors agreed to discontinue the exhibitions. The chairman of the committee intimated in regard to the exceptions that the committee was not prepared to sanction the continuance of such performances.

The versatile and deservedly popular Mr. Thornley Dodge, who for the nonce is on tour with the Zancigs, met with a particularly warm reception on Wednesday last, when the company gave a flying matinée at the Grand Theatre, Blackpool. Mr. Dodge's contributions to the programme consisted of songs and lightning-sketching, although he made his reputation in the Brighton of the North as coach and producer to the local operatic society.

Preparations are being made towards the erection of the new variety theatre in Lodge-lane, Liverpool, which is to be called the Pavilion, a name that has never before been used in the town. The demolition of the property on the site will be commenced very shortly. Messrs. Broadhead, of Manchester, hope to erect a handsome structure that will be a credit to the city, and the inhabitants and shopkeepers of the district hail the scheme with the warmest approval, an attitude that is in direct contrast to that shown by some religious fanatics, who exhibited a bitter feeling against the proposal when it was before the magisterial bench.

No words can describe that opposition, which, coming from alleged Christians, was of the most un-Christianlike character. Even the parish magazine published by one of the churches, in referring to the death of Mr. Broadhead, went so far as to assure its readers that the sad event "was a message from God to those who were agitating for the music hall"! These words, read out in Court, caused an expression of disgust to pass over the faces of the magistrates. The "Christians" defeated their own efforts by such shameful conduct.

In contradistinction to such bigotry, the words of the Rev. D. B. Kitterminster, chaplain of the reformatory ship Akbar, which is stationed in the Mersey, spoken last week at a conference between clergymen and teachers, are worthy of note. That gentleman, who knows something about the upbringing of youths, said he protested against any wholesale condemnation of the music halls, because he believed they provided a wholesome, clean entertainment. His conclusion was that the influence of betting and gambling was wholly bad, degrading, and character-destroying, but that of the music hall not necessarily so. They need not look upon the music hall as found in Liverpool as antagonistic to their work, but betting and gambling were emphatically so.

A new company, under the name of Hippodrome (Sheffield), Limited, has just been registered with a capital of £20,000 in £1 shares to acquire property for the erection of a new music hall in Barker's Pool or Cambridge-street. The subscribers to the company, the registered office of which is Grainger-street West, Newcastle-on-Tyne, are:—Thomas Barrasford, 11, Leicester-place, London, theatre proprietor, one share; William Sley, 41, Oxford-street, Manchester, theatre proprietor, one share; A. L. P. Belleville, Raikes-parade, Blackpool, managing-director, one share; J. R. Hall, 8, Grainger-street West, Newcastle-on-Tyne, solicitor, one share; J. Willmot, Ash Villa, Deane-road, Liverpool, music hall director, one share; Edna J. K. Savage, 101, Earlham-grove, Forest Gate, music hall proprietor, one share; and A. L. Taylor, 116, Whitehall-road, Gateshead, clerk, one share.

During the recent cold weather hot dinners have been given on the stage of the Palace, West Hartlepool, to about 4,000 poor children. Mr. Macnaghten and his popular manager, Mr. Julius Simpson, inaugurated the scheme and set it afoot by supplying the first 300 dinners. The local tradespeople were not long in bringing up the number to the figure stated.

Mr. Julius Simpson was recently the recipient of a handsome 18ct. gold hunter watch with monogram and inscription. The presentation was made by Councillor Boanson at a smoker held in the Grand Hotel, when about 150 guests, presided over by Guardian R. W. Simpson, testified in many kindly speeches to their appreciation of his good work.

The Hants County Licensing Committee at Winchester on Tuesday, Mr. R. A. Bayford, K.C., presiding, considered an application made by Mr. Percy St. Gerrans on behalf of Mr. Clarence Sounes and others, for a provisional ale-house licence for the Hippodrome which he proposed to erect at the corner of Birchett and Station-roads, Aldershot. The licence, which was the subject of confirmation, had been conditionally granted by the Aldershot magistrates.

Mr. Clarence Sounes said the estimated cost of the Hippodrome was about £10,000, and it was proposed to have only one bar in each part of the house. As a matter of fact more non-intoxicants would be sold than intoxicating liquors. He did not look upon that as a means of revenue. The dividend he hoped to obtain was by the money paid for admission. Replying to the Chairman, he said a music hall could not be carried on successfully in a place like Aldershot without a licence. If the licence were not confirmed he would not build the Hippodrome. He put the monopoly value at £25 per annum.

Mr. F. W. King said the monopoly value would be worth £2,000, and any brewer would be glad to pay £100 a year for it. The Committee decided not to confirm the licence.

Miss Florence Elliott and Chicklets have been presenting with conspicuous success this week their vocal, comedy, and dancing act at the Duchess, Balham, and Mr. Walter Gibbons is fortunate in having secured them for his circuit.

Mr. J. L. Graydon has resigned his position on the board of the Brighton Alhambra, Ltd., after having sat as a chairman and director since the formation of the company in 1893. The company will retain the advantage of the contracts made with artists by the popular proprietor of the Middlesex.

Mr. David Day paid a flying visit a few days since to Falmouth, and was agreeably surprised to find the good progress made by his partner, Mr. William Francis, towards health. Grave fears were at one time entertained as to his recovery, but he is fast recuperating, and is now able to partake of solid food.

The services of Miss Louie Freear have been secured by Mr. Donald Arthur for a nine weeks' concert tour, or rather for a series of flying matinées and performances at towns on the South Coast. At these performances Miss Freear will present her quaint characters and irresistibly funny songs. The droll little comedienne has proved quite a mascot to more than one theatre, notably the Royalty, Duke of York's, and the Strand, and it is to be hoped that her proverbial good fortune will follow her during this tour.

The Benevolent Fund dinner is tentatively fixed for Sunday, June 9, at the Trocadero. It is understood that the chairman will be a popular music-hall artist. This does not establish a precedent, as Mr. Arthur Roberts, whose appeal secured the record sum of £1,000, presided in the early days of the Fund. The late Mr. Dan Leno also took the chair a few years ago, with his friend Herbert Campbell in the vice-chair; but unfortunately the popular comedian was not so well backed up by the profession as he should have been.

Owing to indisposition, Little Tich was unable to appear at the Empress, Brixton, this week, but the audience had an excellent deputy in Miss Daisy James, who was repeatedly recalled for her singing of "Melinda." Miss Daisy opens in New York on June 3 at a very large salary.

Miss Marie Lloyd has just accepted from Messrs. John P. Harrington and Jas. W. Tate two new songs, entitled "As they come" and "Washing day," which she now has in active study, with a view to production in the near future. The same author and composer's "Customs of the country" is going strong at Bath this week, in the hands of the gifted "queen of comedy."

Miss Edith Cruikshanks, who is winning golden opinions by her performance of Mrs. St. Ozier, at Sheffield this week, in The King's Minister, has been specially engaged by Mr. John Lawson to create the part of Mrs. Norman in his production of The Unwritten Law on Monday at the Holborn Empire.

The verdict of the special jury in the action for libel brought by Archdeacon Thomas Colley, of Stockton Rectory, Rugby, against Mr. J. W. Maskelyne, the famous illusionist, of St. George's Hall, was in favour of the plaintiff. On Tuesday, when they had arrived at their verdict, the jury handed in the written questions given to them by Mr. Justice Jelf, the judge trying the action, with the answers arrived at. These were read by his lordship, and were as follows:—(1) Are the words complained of libellous?—Yes; (2) Are they true?—No; (3) What damages do you find?—£75; (4) Is Mr. Maskelyne entitled to the £1000?—No. Mr. Ralph Bankes asked for judgment for the plaintiff with costs, to which his lordship immediately assented.

Mr. George Lashwood's Dublin admirers so highly appreciated his kindness in taking part on the evening of the 25th ult. in the successful concert, held in the Round Room, Rotunda, in aid of the improvement fund of St. Patrick's Church, Ringsend, that they presented him with a solid silver cigar case. Mr. Thomas Doran, who made the presentation, said the necessary subscriptions were contributed individually by Mr. Lashwood's friends He sincerely thanked that gentleman for his great kindness.

Mr. Lashwood, in reply, stated all he could say was, that if ever it was considered necessary for him to do so, he would travel 100 miles to do the same thing over again. The cigar case would be always a pleasing reminiscence of dear old Dublin.

Mr. Leo Fritz, the variety agent, wishes it to be known that in future the telegraphic and cable address of his agency will be "Evelyncia: London."

The attractive programmes at the Bristol Empire during the past twelve months have brought their own reward to Mr. B. Pearce Lucas in the shape of well-filled houses, and it was hardly necessary to announce "extra turns" to attract large attendances to the anniversary on the 26th ult. It is interesting to recall that on the opening performance, in November, 1893, the programme included Little Tich (who was appearing for the night only), the McNaughtons, Carrie Stewart, and Lotto, Lilo, and Otto. The programme this week is an interesting one, and John Humphries, Miss Clarice Mayne, and Burt Sheppard have seldom been better appreciated. The lengthy programme, as may be imagined, took some time to go through, and it was close upon midnight when the second performance concluded.

Miss Lottie Bray will produce an entirely new scena, entitled Summer and Winter, at Collins's on Monday next.

"When the Clock Went Wrong" is the title of a funny sketch that was "spotted" by the ever-alert Will Oliver in last November, and through his commendation it was very soon secured for the Moss and Stoll circuit. The sketch, which has for subsidiary title, "The Tale of a New-Laid Egg," is written by Mr. E. C. Matthews, and it is played admirably by Matthews and Cooper.

The usual monthly meeting of the committee of the Music Hall Sick Fund will be held at the York Hotel, York-road, on Wednesday next, at 2 p.m.

Mr. Arthur Royce on his return to town will produce at the Granville, Walham Green, an entirely new and original musical comedy monologue at the piano, entitled "A Motor-Car Honeymoon," which has been written for him by Mr. Henry Carlton.

A most original "turn" at the Palace is Will Rogers, the Cowboy Lassoist. He is another Mr. Stubbins, of Cabbage Patch fame. "There is my show," says he in eloquent gesture; "what do you think of it?" Owing to the fact that his horses and assistants did not arrive in London from America in time for the opening, Will elected to "breeze on" (to quote his own expression) and give an exhibition with an array of ropes. He lassoed the stage manager's messenger, he lassoed himself, he made knots in the air with a swing of the arm that would take two hands some hours to untie, but, above all, he circled and circled a rope one hundred yards in length until it became one huge ring stretching over the stage.

All Masonic members of the profession who belong to the Chelsea Lodge will be glad to hear that the charter for their chapter has been granted by Grand Lodge.

"The Unwritten Law," Mr. John Lawson's new episode, will be produced on Monday at the Holborn Empire. The mounting will be carried out with Mr. Lawson's usual thoroughness, several novel scenic effects having been designed by Mr. Francis Bull.

The many friends of Mr. Henry W. Garrick, who has controlled the Press department of the Hippodrome since the opening of the fine house in Cranbourn-street in January, 1900, is about to sever his connection therefrom. His departure will be hailed with a chorus of regret from his confrères on the staff and the numerous newspaper representatives with whom he has had such amicable relations. His position is to be filled by Mr. Will Bennet, late the director of the Press bureau at the Coliseum—another very popular man.

Miss Julie Mackey's appeal, in which she sought to establish her right to sing the song "Under the bamboo tree," was resumed on the 26th ult., when Mr. R. J. Willis intimated that Mr. Edwardes had no intention of interfering further with Miss Mackay singing the song, and was willing to give an undertaking to that effect. This undertaking was accepted by Mr. Crawford, on behalf of the popular artist, and the appeal was therefore dismissed.

Miss Jessie Preston must feel flattered at her great reception each night at the Paragon, where on Wednesday night (May 1), her birthday, she was highly gratified at receiving a large horseshoe of lovely flowers with a card on which was written: "To our Jessie. With many happy returns from the Girls." The popular lady long since endeared herself to the hearts of the East-Enders by her unobtrusive charity, and that she still has a warm place in their affections is proved by this pretty tribute.

Dr. Walford Bodie finished on Saturday a most successful two weeks' stay at the Grand Theatre, Brighton, where he has been performing to record business. During his stay in Brighton the doctor has treated over 300 cases of paralysis, all of them having been discharged as hopeless and incurable from the local hospitals. The doctor, after showing many of his cures, and successfully treating several fresh cases, was simply inundated with bouquets of flowers, the stage resembling a garden. This week he is playing to packed houses at the Grand Theatre, Luton, and opens Monday next at the Alexandra Theatre, Sheffield.

Mr. George Leyton, who has been doing so remarkably well with Messrs. John P. Harrington and Jas. W. Tate's scena, The Wreck of the Birkenhead, has this week accepted from the same author and composer a new and original dramatic sketch, in two scenes, of a military nature, which will be specially produced at one of the Stoll halls in Manchester on May 27, and will later be seen in London at a leading West End establishment.

Mrs. John Lawson and company can congratulate themselves on the business they have done this week at the Canterbury and Euston. There is no mistaking the vitality of The Devil's Sunday, the most successful sketch of the year. Mrs. Lawson's reading of the difficult part of Fay Faber is as finished as ever, and, judging by the reception given to this clever lady at the above-mentioned halls, it is evident the public endorse this opinion.

Mr. W. Selkirk has accepted from Messrs. John P. Harrington and Jas. W. Tate a new and specially-written dramatic spectacle, in two scenes, entitled Egypt, which will have a special production at the Empire, Sheffield, on May 13, and will be represented by four principals and a host of auxiliaries, afterwards going on an extended tour of the Stoll Empires.

The Stavordale Quintette, who have been on tour in the provinces since last August, return to London next week to open on the Gibbons' circuit. This unique and clever quintette have been topping the bills everywhere and making a great name for themselves, with the result that foreign managers and agents are now on their track.

Roma and Romani, whose refined musical act is being received with great enthusiasm everywhere, are the happy possessors of date books with two or three returns at almost every hall of note in the kingdom. Spot Oliver is responsible for this state of affairs.

Mariedl, the giantess, has become a great favourite with many distinguished, if youthful, people who have visited the London Hippodrome since Easter. In consequence, Mr. Louis Weirter, R.B.A., has been specially commissioned by an eminent personage to paint her portrait in oils. The picture, it is understood, will be presented to Mariedl prior to her departure from the Hippodrome in two weeks' time.

Mr. Geo. Manners, the brother of the celebrated operatic singer, Charles Manners, has been appointed manager of the Glasgow Empire, Sauchiehall-street. Like his brother, George had an inclination towards things martial in his youthful days, and at the age of twenty entered the Army. After five years' service, mostly spent abroad, his already successful brother persuaded him to enter the theatrical world. John L. Shine gave George his first "shop" as front of the house manager with his Don Juan company. He then joined the staff of the Empire Theatre during the run there of The Lady of the Locket, in which Mr. Hayden Coffin made his first professional début.

Next Mr. Manners went on tour with The Beggar Student, Dorothy, and The Red Hussar, extending over a period of five years. His brother then placed him in charge of a répertoire operatic company, which toured right through South Africa, just concluding before the outbreak of the war. After a short season at the Lyric Mr. Geo. Manners was appointed assistant-manager at the Palace Theatre. On the death of Mr. Charles Morton he joined Miss Ethel Irving's company in What Pamela Wanted, and stayed with it during its run at the Criterion. Since then he has been indulging in land speculation.

In reference to the case of Sam De Voy's widow, Mr. Will Oliver writes:—"Two amounts were left out of my last week's list of subscriptions: Ernest De Vere, 5s.; A Lady Sympathiser, 2s. 6d. The fund will close to-day (Saturday), as in spite of your kindness in giving such publicity to the case and my earnest appeal, the profession generally have turned a deaf ear, with the exception of Harry Clifford, who gave 5s., and Mr. Joe Elvin, who, I believe, paid all funeral expenses. I thank you and those who subscribed."

"Araminta's Lovers" is the title of Mr. Walter Graham's latest scena for his human marionette theatre. It made an instantaneous hit at Olympia, Liverpool, at its recent production there, and when Mr. Graham returns in a few weeks' time to the London Pavilion, where he is such a favourite, it will form the chief item in his répertoire. Araminta is played by Miss Mollie Seymour, but the characters of the policeman, the soldier, and the fireman are all impersonated by Mr. Graham himself. The words and music are by Mr. Arthur Thomas, the musical clown.

Mr. Albert Toft, whose statue of "Spring" ornaments the Birmingham Art Gallery, is to direct a series of living statuary representations at the Hippodrome on Monday, May 13. The well-known A.R.A., who gained a National Scholarship at the Newcastle-under-Lyme School of Art at the age of 17, will present in a very novel fashion replicas from works in the British Walhalla—Westminster Abbey, and the show will therefore be of great national interest. The necessary introductory matter is being written by Mr. Fred Bowyer.

"A Country Flirtation," with its pretty farmyard and waving cornfield, realises the rustic romance of Lubin and Phyllis, and its popularity, therefore, when played by such accomplished people as the Prinellas, may be readily guessed.

The comedy duologue, How to Hypnotise, which is an amusing skit on the second-sight craze, was most successfully presented at the Duchess, Balham, on Wednesday, by Miss Kate Randolph, who was well supported by Hyland Shea. The skit is from the pen of E. C. Matthews.

The Netherlands have just returned from a thirty-six weeks' tour in the States, where their success was so great that they worked four return dates and ten weeks in New York. Their act was featured on the Empire Circuit, and they have nothing but good to say of their treatment on the other side.

Mr. Harry Dacre, the author of "Daisy," the heroine of "The bicycle made for two," added much to the musical delights of the nation when he wrote such favourites as "As your hair grows whiter," "The Lads in Navy Blue," "I can't think ob nuthin' else but you, Lulu," "Could we recall," "I'll be your sweetheart," "I want to see the old home again," "Good-bye, Mignonette," "While London's fast asleep," and these are still being sold in scores of thousands every year.

The pirates, however, got hold of them, and their author was so much disgusted by the unchecked depredations of these gentry that he determined not to write any more. The dawn of his emancipation from such a vow came with the passing of Mr. T. P. O'Connor's Copyright Bill, and since then Mr. Dacre has been busy.

That he is again in sympathy with the trend of modern science is shown by his latest number, "We're all going to fly," which, of course, refers to the latest invention for utilising air currents for locomotion—namely, "The Aeroplane."

Though Mr. Dacre lays no claim to the divine afflatus, he is morally certain that were he to sit down with the deliberate intention of writing a taking melody he would fail ignominiously. Sometimes both words and music strike him simultaneously, but more frequently a happy phrase is hit upon, and the words are dovetailed afterwards.

Though not a lover of night work, he confesses that some of his best ideas have come to him between the hours of 2 and 4 a.m. He adheres to the popular class of song, because he appreciates the pecuniary results that accrue from lightly titillating the palate of the greater public. In "We're all going to fly" he considers he has a melody nearly as rollicking as "The man that broke the bank at Monte Carlo," sung by Charles Coborn in the old Oxford days.

Miss Margaret Ashton, who at the Standard last week filled the place of Miss Ella Shields, has this week been singing at the Coliseum, Glasgow, meeting with an enthusiastic reception. Both the new songs and French costumes of the popular American soprano are greatly admired.

Mr. Augustine Birrell, the Chief Secretary for Ireland, approves of variety entertainments. At a recent dinner given to him by the Bradford Liberal Association he said, so far as concerned the acting parts of the entertainments at music halls, such as were to be found in London, he was sure the people would find in them more education than sitting boozing in the public-house. This assertion savours of antiquated ideas, and is not highly complimentary to the modern artistic aspirations of the halls; but, coming from a former Minister of Education, it is something.

Among the novelties to be presented at the Empire on Monday will be the Le Pages, from America, who will appear in their sensational jumping act; and Mme. Graziella, with her troupe of performing birds. A second series of pictures will also be added to the Biograph, depicting the motor-racing track at Brooklands, Weybridge. These pictures, which are excellent in their completeness, will give motorists some idea of the enormous advance made in the work at Brooklands and the vast extent of this fine track.

"Medley" Barrett, who is already located at Whitley Bay preparing for the delectation of visitors, has this week published with Messrs. Francis and Day his song, "Home-made hunting," which has been secured for seaside purposes by many prominent entertainers, as it lends itself to much amusing business for "omnes."

The 509th meeting of the Executive Committee of the Music Hall Artists' Railway Association was held on Wednesday afternoon, when the following were present:—Messrs. J. W. Cragg (Hon. Trustee), Douglas White (Hon. Treasurer), Jeff Vendome, Harry Blake, Fred Harrison, Harry Wright, Pat Carey, and C. Douglas Stuart (Secretary). Mr. Cragg presided. Questions of refunds and insurances having been dealt with, Mr. William Warren, of the North-Western Hotel, Northampton, was appointed as agent in that town. Mr. Macarthy, accountant, read the financial statement from Oct. 1 to April 30, which showed that the funds in hand were as follows:—Reserve fund, £522 6s. 6d.; deposit account, £150; petty cash, £20; and current account, £315 0s. 6d., making a total of £1,007 7s.

John Guest, the composer of "Only a face at the window," a song-melody that appealed strongly to Sims Reeves, who brought it into popularity forty years ago, recently died at an advanced age. He had hereditary gifts, derived from his ancestors, Ralph Guest and George Guest, both of them organists, a profession that John followed, though he commenced life as a stationer. The song mentioned was sung in a number of melodramas by Mme. Celeste, Mrs. Keeley, and Mrs. Stirling.

The Clapham Assembly Rooms, Gauden-road, have at last obtained a licence from the L.C.C. for music and dancing. The hall has a seating capacity of 340, an dit is situated in a most advantageous position opposite three railway stations. In order to give the new venture a start, the proprietors are making a sporting offer to artists to run a hall of their own without any risks or expense whatever.

On several occasions reference has been made in these columns to the Paris Music Hall Trust, of which M. Ruez is the head. He had the Folies-Bergère at a yearly rental of £4080, and the Olympia for £6000 a year. Moreover, he had to pay MM. Isola £18 per day for the Folies-Bergère, and £6 per day for Olympia. The contracts M. Ruez made with MM. Isola and with M. Dumien were not to his advantage, and he has not been able to keep his engagements. MM. Isola have applied to one of the Paris civil courts for an order of ejection. This order has been granted, but cannot be put into force before June 11, so as to give M. Ruez time to "turn round."

SONGS, WRITERS, AND SINGERS.

HARRY DACRE is receiving letters and wires from all parts of the United Kingdom to the effect that his new song, "Mending nets for father," is one of the greatest hits he has ever written. Mr. Dacre has now completed all the songs he is likely to issue this season. They range from pathetic to gay. "The prayer at mother's knee" should be secured by every singer who sang his "As your hair grows whiter." Some enthusiastic vocalists write to say that the new song goes even better than the old, but Mr. Dacre will be quite satisfied if it reaches the same high water-mark of success.

THE most elaborate preparations are already in progress—much to the satisfaction of certain sections of the printing profession—for the successful issue on June 17 to the expectant music trade of the enormous first editions already ordered of Messrs. Francis and Day's Twenty-Sixth Song Annual and Twenty-Sixth Dance Album. Each volume will consist of seventy-two pages of well-printed music, and the contents of the books conclusively prove them to be the "last word in 1907" for astounding value.

THE twenty-sixth Song Annual will comprise the following popular numbers: "We parted on the shore," "The king of the house is baby," "Mr. Tootle," "Tiddley-om-pom," "Let me sing," "I can see red roses blooming," "At a minute to seven last night," "Home again, my cherry blossom," "Billy Muggins," "The rose of my heart," "The galloping major," "Good-night, Mr. Brown, I'm out," "Would you mind passing the salt?" "Hello, old man!" "There's a man in Manitoba," "Boy blue," "Leave her alone with them," "When love comes knocking at the door," "The song without a name," "You'll get on in England," "Keep on doing it, Sandy!" "The preacher and the bear," "In the Hielans," duet (as sung in The New Aladdin at the Gaiety Theatre), and "For King and Sireland" (the new Imperial anthem).

THE contents of the Dance Album will include "Record" and "Catch of the Season," lancers; "Old Belfry," "Mascarade," and "Rose of my heart," waltzes; "King Pantomime," quadrilles; Veleta-circle, a new waltz dance; "Her Royal Highness," waltz-cotillon; "Imperial," new round dance; "Devotion," valse lente; "Waiting at the church," barn dance; and "Different girl again," medley two-step. As in former years, the foregoing pieces have been composed or arranged by such past masters of melody as Warwick Williams, Karl Kaps, Bernard Phelps, J. Powell, H. Hucke, Theo. Ward, Harry Wood, Arthur Morris, and H. E. Pether.

BERT H. DELMAR'S song, "Iona," with a most melodious refrain, is in great demand for the seaside. The number is published by Price and Reynolds, 41, Berners-street, W., and copies can be had from them or from Mr. Delmar.

MR. HERBERT SHELLEY has collaborated with that well-known musician Mr. Ernest Bucalossi in a fine song, entitled "Mona May," which has been included by Mr. Dennis Drew in his successful military scena, Back to Barracks, which now embraces a trio of the finest marching songs of the time. The new numbers, and likewise Kenneth Lyle's "Beat of the drum" and Leslie Stiles' "Come and be a soldier," are all published by Messrs. Francis and Day, the latter two being also included in the "Sixpenny Pops."

MR. ARTHUR LENNARD has secured from Harry Adams and Ernée Woodville a song of the greatest promise, entitled "Number Nine (Love Dove lane)." It was written and composed on Wednesday of last week, snapped up by the popular singer the same day, and accepted for publication by Mr. David Day's firm the day following. It was rehearsed at the Camberwell Palace on Monday.

AMONG other songs just acquired and shortly to be issued by Messrs. Francis and Day are two, by George Arthurs and C. W. Murphy, entitled respectively "Firelight" and "The wedding in the jungle," and "Don't let it go any farther," by E. A. Searson and Will Edwards, who is, as may be guessed, the singer of the ditty.

THE Monte Carlo Publishing Co. are issuing a limited number of music hall permissions for their song, sung by Mr. George Lashwood, entitled "Georgie from Georgia," by Pelham, McGhee, and Rule; and are also making a speciality of the same song for pierrot work during the forthcoming season.

THE same company are this week issuing four new numbers, viz: "Ain't you goin' to let me say 'Good-bye'?" by Paul Knox, sung by Miss Daisy Mayer; "Won't you drop me just one line?" by Barnes and Weston, sung by Miss Rosie Lloyd; "Kitty Brady," by J. F. Lambe, sung by Miss Madge Temple; and the new valse lente, by Julian W. Kandt, "Toujours à Toi," which will be extensively played by seaside and society orchestras during the coming season.

MR. FELIX MCGLENNON'S vocal gem, "Wait for me, Fritzy dear," is being eagerly snapped up by all the leading pierrot troupes, and during the past few weeks the publishers—the Monte Carlo Publishing Co.—have been simply inundated with demands for permission to sing it. Only a limited number of music hall permissions will, however, be granted. Miss José Collins will specially feature the number at the London Pavilion, and Miss Rosie Bartlett in the provinces, on the Barrasford tour.

MISS VESTA TILLEY produced at Manchester this week a new song, entitled "When the right girl comes along," by Worton David and Kenneth Lyle, which proved an instantaneous hit. The Shapiro, Von Tilzer Co. have secured the publishing rights.

MISS MAUD ESMOND is scoring heavily with a capital little song, "I'd like to call you Sweetheart," written by Milwood and Jerome, and the melody by a very promising new Australian composer, Joe Slater. The Shapiro, Von Tilzer Co. are the publishers.

THE Shapiro, Von Tilzer Music Co., Ltd., have secured the publishing rights of Miss Daisy Dormer's latest success, "Can't you take the baby over there with you?" which is from the pen of Charles Collins and Harry Castling. This looks like being one of the winners of the year.

MR. BILLY WILLIAMS on Thursday evening, at the Granville, Walham Green, and the Star, Bermondsey, introduced with considerable success a new chorus song, by Hyde and Heath, entitled "The taximeter car." His other new song, by Castling and Godfrey, "Poor old England isn't in the picture," is already a favourite, and has been published by Messrs. Francis and Day.

MISS DAISY MORELL, in a new line of business, has been scoring in Glasgow with some big numbers from the pens of Alfred Glover and John Glover. Mr. E. H. Bostock secured her for a special week at Kilmarnock, and on Monday she opens at the Palace, Dundee.

CHAT WITH MR. NELSON FRANCIS

What a thin line it is that divides the Church, as a profession, from the Stage! How often does one hear of an actor who was "originally intended for the church," and how many budding actors, at the eleventh hour, when the choice of a life's calling has to be decided, and can no longer be delayed, having cast their lot for Holy Orders?

Mr. Nelson Francis, the able and popular manager of the Empress Theatre, Brixton, is one of those who relinquished a theological training to take up stage work. And as Mr. Francis's action in this respect has been justified by success we may presume that his early decision was the best and wisest under the circumstances. He has been associated with the Empress, Brixton, since the day it was opened, when he was engaged as secretary and treasurer to Mr. E. V. Page, whom three years ago he succeeded as manager. Mr. Francis early in life gave evidence of much aptitude for mathematics, and takes a keen interest in the commercial aspect of theatrical affairs. He will be long remembered for the successful way in which he organised and managed the concert entertainments known as the Pilgrims, among which troupe were the late Charles Godfrey, George Beauchamp, Tom Costello, and other celebrities. His pianist then was Mr. Willie Benn, who now has charge of Park's Eton Boys.

One of Mr. Francis's daughters, Miss Maudie Francis, is an accomplished comedienne and dancer. She has been appearing at Mr. Walter Gibbons's hall, and is now going the round of Mr. George Adney Payne's circuit. Last year she had a great success at the Gaiety Theatre, Dublin, as Dolly in the pantomime Cinderella, and was to be seen at the Grand Theatre, Glasgow, as Tommy Tucker in The House that Jack Built. A younger daughter of Mr. Francis—Gladys—whose forte is low comedy, gives promise of great things in the future.

Mr. Francis was born in Woolwich, 1850, and was educated at King William's College, Isle of Man, where he obtained first prize for mathematics. He made good use of his education, for he was in one well-known banking firm for upwards of twenty-four years. If you want to know something about the professional and amateur boxers of the past thirty years, get into conversation with Mr. Francis, for he is an authority on all matters pugilistic. He will tell you all about the old Charlton fairs, near his birthplace, when he used to put the mittens on with all comers in the booths, take on the soldiers who fancied themselves a bit, and he has on many occasions had a round or two with Jerry Hawks, Jack Hartley, and other well-known pro.'s, always coming out well. He used to be a regular sparrer at Jemmy Welsh's house, The Marquis of Granby, in the New Cut, and Billy Richardson's, The Blue Anchor, Shoreditch. In 1871 and 1872 he won the amateur feather-weight 9st. championship, promoted by the City Gymnastic Club, beating in the final C. T. Hobbs, the Queensberry 10st. champion, that weight being the lowest allowed by that society. Francis was also a member of the West London Boxing Club when Jack Angle, Tom Anderson,

Talbot, Frost Smith, and a host of good sports belonged to it. He won the 10st. competition, besides cups, medals, and any number of prizes. Somebody, without his consent, inserted a challenge in Bell's Life for Francis to fight any one in the world at 8st., but it was never responded to. He was a member of the Dreadnought Swimming Club, and swam second in a ninety yards' handicap to Professor Loscombe. He is also an excellent billiard player, and as active as a kitten in spite of his having passed the half-century.

"THE SMART SET."

A Musical Playlet, in One Act, produced at the Empire, Camberwell, on Monday, April 22.

Ethel .....MISS CORA DUNCAN
Arthur .....MR. ALBERT BRASQUE

Smartly written, elegantly staged, and remarkably well acted, this musical duologue is a scathing indictment of the many alleged foibles of society's "Smart Set," and was received with every mark of approval by a most appreciative audience. Returning from one of the Smart Set functions with his fiancée, Arthur appeals to her to give up the company of scandalising matrons, gilded popinjays, and feather-head dudes, and marry him and settle down. Ethel is obdurate, and only laughs at him, and tells him not to lecture her, and she supposes that, like all actors, he really is only playing a part. Arthur is hurt, and tells her that he only seeks to advise her, and that even actors have hearts, and that the Smart Set is full of "bluff." Ethel loses her temper, and says she will not be preached at, and that he can consider the engagement broken off. She gives him his ring and the key of her desk, so that he can take his letters and go. Arthur makes a final appeal to her better nature, and tells Ethel that there is many a better sermon comes from the mouth of an actor than a preacher. He opens the desk, and finds his letters and also a revolver. He takes both, and bids Ethel farewell, quickly switching off the electric light as he goes out, and firing the revolver. The girl is convinced that her lover has taken his life, and cries, with many expressions of endearment, for him to come back, as she did not mean what she said, &c. The light is suddenly switched on, and Arthur is seen in the doorway unhurt, with the revolver in his hand, and in answer to his fiancé's appealing enquiries, says that he was only acting a part. Ethel is overjoyed, and promises to give up the Smart Set, and live the simple life with her lover. Miss Cora Duncan is simply bewitching as the wilful Ethel, and in her song "Bluff, bluff, bluff," proved that she possessed a good voice. As the actor, Mr. Albert Brasque acted in capital style throughout.

CHAT WITH BENNETT SCOTT.

Mr. Bennett Scott, the managing-director of the Star Music Publishing Co., Ltd., who in a few days sails for New York on business and pleasure intent, has been good enough to give us his views on certain phases of the song-selling business.

"I would like to say a few words in reference to that much-abused but still flourishing institution, the free song," says Mr. Scott. "Even the most rabid objectors are forced to admit that there is a good argument in its favour. The variety profession is continually in a state of evolution, and the free song is only one of the many changes from the old order of things which we may note everywhere. The modern system of one week's engagement when formerly artists were engaged for four, six, or even twelve weeks at the same hall is one of the reasons for the free song. We have few enough really popular refrains each year, and they would dwindle away altogether but for the new system by which a number of artists agree to sing the same ditty. I quite allow that the system is open to abuse. What system is not? But matters soon right themselves, for when the public tire of a thing they have an unmistakable way of showing their disapproval. Meanwhile, it would seem that the only objection to the free song is the petty pride of certain artists who aim at being the first to sing this or that number, quite ignoring the fact that the second or third artist to exploit the song at a given hall is the one who usually makes the most emphatic success. The public are slow to learn, and soon forget. Amongst high-class singers one never hears a complaint that 'The Holy City' or Tosti's 'Good-bye' was sung by another artist a few weeks previously at the same concert hall.

"I should say that there are not half a dozen music-hall singers to-day who can individually make a song a popular craze in six or eight months, so the free song is a necessity created by the modern system of short engagements and frequent change of business. After all, popular songs always have been and always will be among the main attractions at variety establishments. They are still acceptable when lions, tigers, and tight-rope dancers begin to pall. It seems part of our nature to join in the chorus of a really catchy song, and this is a fact that most managers are astute enough to recognise."

It is just six months ago that the Star Company commenced operations, and Mr. Scott tells us that it has been the busiest six months of his life. The results have far exceeded his highest anticipations. In the short space of time referred to his firm has built up a catalogue of some three dozen numbers, each one having been most carefully selected, with the gratifying result that they have had a large proportion of song hits. From the first their No. 1 ("Sailing in my balloon") caught on, steadily grew, and is still growing, in popularity. This number alone has enabled them to open accounts with the leading music-dealers throughout the United Kingdom, whilst colonial inquiries and orders are now beginning to roll in. Another pleasing feature of the firm's success is the fact that pierrots and al fresco performers have been induced to take up and "feature" their publications at the various seaside and holiday resorts. Amongst the numerous artists who have helped to popularise their early songs may be mentioned the Misses Annie Purcell, Florrie Forde, May Mars, Gladys Huxley, Florrie Gallimore, Maud Esmond, Hilda Jacobson, and Messrs. Tom Costello, Whit Cunliffe, Harry Claff, Harry Bancroft, and George Leyton.

The Star Company's method all along has been to prevent artists clashing by comparing the engagements of each from the lists supplied. This idea has been found to work most satisfactorily; at any rate, Mr. Scott has not, so far, heard of any complaints. "On the Isle of Anglesey," another of the firm's publications, written by Mr. Harry Castling and composed by Mr. C. W. Murphy, has been sung by Miss Annie Purcell and Miss Florrie Forde with the happiest results. Another still, "Has anyone seen a German band?" written by Mr. A. J. Mills and composed by Mr. Scott, is being sung by Miss Forde in the provinces and Miss Ella Retford in London; and a third which has just been issued, "Swing me higher, Obadiah," is the joint work of Mr. Alf. Rick and Mr. Maurice Scott, the latter a brother of the interviewee.

The subject of this sketch has won many laurels as a "popular" composer. "Zuyder Zee," "Hello, hello, hello!" and "I've made up my mind to sail away" have helped to make his name famous in the song world. He informs us that he has received many applications from artists and others desirous of taking shares in the Star Company, but at present it is not proposed to call up any further capital.

ZARINA, première danseuse, has been presenting during the week at the Queen's, Poplar, her speciality, a quick-change dance scena, in which she has given successful examples of Hungarian, Spanish, and Turkish dances.

MRS. ELIZABETH HOWELL, the widow of a clergyman, has been awarded, in the Court of King's Bench, damages for injuries caused through being bitten by the St. Bernard dog of Mr. Fred McNaughton, now in America. Plaintiff was purchasing flowers in Mash's shop, Atlantic-road, Brixton, when defendant came in with his dog—a magnificent fawn-and-white St. Bernard. She patted the animal on the head, remarking, "You are a beauty," when it sprang up at her and bit her on the face so severely that she was in bed for three weeks, and afterwards had to go to the seaside for three months, entailing medical and other expenses amounting to £58. Counsel on behalf of Mr. Fred McNaughton expressed deep regret at the occurrence.

DR. BODIE AT LUTON.

AMAZING BLOODLESS SURGERY.

No small sensation is being caused in Luton this week by Dr. Walford Bodie, the far-famed bloodless healer, who, as far as the onlooker can judge, is working some marvellous cures at the Grand Theatre. Nightly, before crowded houses, the so-called incurable victims of paralysis are carried on to the platform for treatment, and, in an incredibly short space of time, not only stand erect on their stricken limbs, but use them in a way that is more eloquent of Dr. Bodie's treatment than any words could be. It is a marvellous exhibition. Indeed, were such cures related in the pages of a popular novel, the "Doubting Thomases," who form so large a portion of the public, would hasten to the next page with a cynical smile. But here there seems to be little room left for doubt. The sceptical may criticise, and the scientist who declines to quit the beaten track and follow the doctor into the higher regions of electrical science may question the efficacy or the permanence of his cures, but deeds are more than words, and it will take more than mere scepticism to break down the whole-hearted belief in the doctor that has inspired the hundreds of people who have seen him this week. When Master Weedon, the Luton boy who was cured by the doctor last November, walks on to the stage as a living example of what has been done, and when people who have been known to Lutonians for years as "hopeless incurables" are cured in full view of the audience, as an example of what can be and is being done, it is not surprising that people find their doubts vanish.

Rousing cheers greet the doctor as he steps nightly on to the stage to work further wonders. Immediately the cheering has subsided he speaks to the audience of what he is doing and why he is doing this work. It is, of course, unusual for an apostle of such revolutionary methods of treatment to use the stage as a means of converting the public. But Dr. Bodie has his own way, and there can be no gainsaying the fact that it is a remarkably successful one. His speech is brief and to the point, and no one can go away with the impression that the doctor poses as a worker of miracles. He simply makes use of one of Nature's least understood and most potent forces, and he is candid enough to say when he expects a cure. But where a cure is promised there appears to be no failure. Before treating his patients, the audience is offered ample means of proving whether a genuine electrical current is employed, and a number of electrical experiments that are more or less uncanny show the tremendous power of the current he employs. By years of practice he has accustomed himself to the use of currents that few men would dare to play with. Lighting a cigarette with a spark from his finger is one of his more daring experiments. But once this amusing part of the performance is over, real business begins. The patient is wheeled or carried on to the stage, a few passes suffice to induce a hypnotic state, and the doctor then breaks down the stiffened joint.

DR. WALFORD BODIE.

It is a gruesome process, and the audience utter an involuntary "Ugh!" as the joint gives way. But the patient never moves or winces; he feels nothing. Then the lights are lowered, the orchestra plays, the powerful electric current is turned on, and the process of quickening the nerve centres begins. But it is brief. A few moments later the lights are turned up, the quondam "incurable" steps forward, uses his limbs freely, and retires amidst cheers.—Vide Luton News, May 2, 1907.

"VARNA'S REVENGE."

Sketch, in one scene, produced at the Empress, Brixton, on Monday, April 29.

Captain Richard .....MR. F. S. JENNINGS
Marie .....MISS ROSE PRADINE
Varna Vildaire .....MISS VIOLET FULTON

Varna Vildaire is a celebrated musical comedy actress, whose popularity is, however, abating. It has just come to her ears that Captain Richard, has become engaged to be married. She had once been an honoured wife, but the unscrupulous Captain, by promising her marriage after her husband had divorced her, had induced her to become faithless. The shock was too much for the husband, and so affected him that he soon died. The Captain never fulfilled his promise of marriage, and Varna took to the stage for a living. Rather than the Captain shall marry another Varna determines to poison him. Captain Richard appears and tells her that he is forced to make a wealthy marriage, as he is hopelessly in debt, and that only by this means can he expect to keep his place in society. During his absence Varna puts some poison into one of the empty glasses on the tray, and on his return asks him where their child is. The scoundrel explains that it is dead, and goes on to say that it could only be expected to be so, as he had paid a large sum to some baby farm for its keep, with the instructions that it would not be inquired after any more. Such callousness completely upsets Varna, who pours out a torrent of wrath, declaring that she is what he has made her, and finally telling him that he is a murderer. Richard's offer of money is refused, but Varna consents to join him in a glass of wine. She gives him the cup containing the deadly drug, and after he has drunk tells him that his wine is poisoned, and that he is a doomed man. The Captain declares he will kill her, and succeeds in getting her by the throat, but the poison has been slowly doing its work, and ere he can accomplish his aim he falls dead. Miss Violet Fulton is to be credited with a faithful representation of the part of the actress, and Mr. F. S. Jennings was a powerful exponent of Captain Richard.

THE French Chamber of Commerce have booked all the reserved seats at the Empire Theatre for a gala performance on Friday, May 10th.

"SPECTRES OF THE SANCTUM."

A Theosophical and Spiritualistic Sketch, by Mr. J. N. Maskelyne, produced at the St. George's Hall, Langham-place, on Wednesday afternoon, May 1.

Doctor Cunningham .....MR. J. N. MASKELYNE
Madame Cunningham ..MISS HELEN MCCULLOCH
Kitty Fay .....MISS CASSIE BRUCE
George Smith .....MR. EDWARD MORRHEN
Slocombe .....MR. J. B. HANSARD
Dick Sage .....MR. CHARLES GLENROSE

Ghosts are furnished on the most up-to-date principles in the new sketch which Mr. Maskelyne, the resourceful wizard of the West, produced at his depôt of mysteries on Wednesday afternoon. In view of the fact that the verdict in the action concluded the day before was given against Mr. Maskelyne on the ground that the illusion had not been wholly accomplished, it was determined to reproduce the phenomena exactly as required; but a letter was received from Archdeacon Colley's solicitors, in which the rev. gentleman withdrew his challenge, and in making the announcement Mr. Maskelyne leaves the public to form its own conclusions. A full house attended the production on Wednesday of the new sketch, in which a droll travesty of a spiritualistic séance is presented. The chiefs of the mystic circle are a clerical-looking individual called Dr. Cunningham, and Mme. Cunningham, his accomplice. They have designs on the money of George Washington Smith, an American millionaire, known as "the tripe king," who has recently lost his wife, and his appearance in the séance room is shortly expected. As he is a dipsomaniac, a confirmed inebriate named George Smith, who comes to tune the piano, is easily mistaken for the millionaire, and after he has been chased round the room by the piano, he is entertained by Mme. during the Doctor's absence to some spirit-rapping and other occult manifestations, in the course of which she pretends to convey messages from his wife. The sights and wonders are reserved for the arrival of the Doctor, who prevails upon a "Mahatma" to appear, and undertake to produce "Mrs. Smith" from Spiritland. The Doctor himself then goes into a trance, and from out of his side emerges a cloud of vapour, which speedily resolves itself into a living woman. Smith is not quite convinced that it is his "Lou," but he accepts the lady's assurance that she really is his wife, and clasps her in his arms. It is not until the Doctor demands his fee of ten guineas that the pianotuner's identity is revealed, and Smith departs derisively.

The effects obtained by Mr. Maskelyne are of a more than usually weird character, and cause unlimited astonishment. The "£1000 ghost" is introduced in an amusing form, with the added advantage that the "materialised spirit" seems to disintegrate and pass through solid objects to invisibility. Mr. Maskelyne gives quite a clerical cut to his impersonation of the designing Dr. Cunningham, and executes his marvellous illusions with his customary neatness and despatch. Miss Helen McCulloch plays skilfully as the equally unscrupulous Madame; and Miss Cassie Bruce, besides making a vivacious young lady of Kitty Fay, an accomplice, gives a realisation of the "spirit-wife" that is instinct with grace and charm. Mr. Edward Morehen furnishes unmistakable proof of his ability as a comedian, and excites roars of laughter by his embodiment of a "beery" piano-tuner; and Mr. J. B. Hansard is as droll as ever as an old Irish servant; Mr. Charles Glenrose being an impressive and awe-inspiring Mahatma.

A dramatic sketch, in five scenes, by John Douglass, produced at the Queen's, Poplar, On Monday, April 29.

Jonas Norton .....MR. HENRY HERNE
Stephen Norton .....MR. BERNARD MERVYN
Martin Brooke .....MR. NEVILLE GRAHAME
Mme. La Fontaine .....MISS ANNIE BRUNEITE
Nelly Norton .....MISS LILLIAN EARLE
May Joyce .....MISS IDA MILLAIS

Jonas Norton and his son Stephen are indeed a wicked couple. Jonas himself is the uncle and guardian of his brother's daughter, pretty Mistress Nelly Norton, who is yet, we learn, in her teens. But, apparently, in his stewardship of the girl's property Jonas has not been as scrupulous as his confiding brother expected him to be. And now matters have come to something approaching a crisis, for, in the language of his dutiful son, we hear that Jonas is "broke to the wide." And as, when the devil drives, needs must, so a way must be found to avert a catastrophe which looms large and threatening in the perturbed imagination of the elder Norton. In a pleasant, confiding, fatherly sort of way, he tells his unsophisticated niece that her marriage with his son would meet with his warm approval. Incidentally, it would also meet with the son's, who, with a wonderful access of filial gratitude expresses his pleasure at the thought that his father will not live very long to enjoy the fortune of which he is attempting to rob the girl, and that then everything will find its way into the younger man's possession. How the schemes of father and son are frustrated by Nelly's step-sister, and by the family solicitor, and how the girl is saved from a watery grave, is all dramatically told by Mr. Henry Herne and Miss Ida Millais' company. Mr. Herne gives us a striking study of the evil-minded old uncle, and to Miss Millais credit is due for a pleasing and well-acted representation of the step-sister. Miss Lillian Earle has the youth and personal attractiveness necessary to such a part as that of the heiress, and it is a very sympathetic and charming characterisation that we get from her. Mr. Neville Grahame as the solicitor, Mr. Bernard Mervyn as Stephen Norton, and Miss Annie Brunette as a French governess all play their parts in capable fashion. Special care seems to have been taken in the matter of the scenery, the last scene, representing a backwater of the Thames, and in which is introduced a large tank of water, being very realistic.

MR. AND MRS. LENNARD CHARLES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—In a recent issue of The Era was an announcement that Miss Helen Charles (Mrs. Harry Burns) would become twenty-one years of age on April 22. Her age at that date was twenty-four, as she was born on April 22, 1883. By the misstatement pointed out her younger brother's birth is made to seem to have taken place in 1887, long after her father's death, which took place in 1886. Her parents are not correctly named when they are referred to as "Mme. Lennard and Tom Charles." They were Thomas Charles and his wife Margaret (Mahoney before marriage), who were professionally known as "Mr. and Mrs. Lennard Charles"—the "Lennard" was never used as her mother's surname. By publishing this letter of correction and explanation you will greatly oblige—Yours truly,

J. THOS. CHARLES,
29, St. Ann's-road, Brixton-road, April 29.

"THE ERA"

SHILLING FUND

FOR THE

MUSIC HALL HOME.

Mr. Barrasford and Miss Vesta Victoria join in a strenuous appeal for the generosity of the profession in support of The Era Shilling Fund. When, twelve months ago, we brought before our readers the claims of this deserving charity, a very considerable sum of money was collected in separate shillings. That last year's appeal, however, and most of the money obtained by it, are, as Miss Marie Lloyd would say, "a thing of the past, old dear."

Subscribed to date, 2426½ shillings.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

SYDNEY, March 26.—Mr. J. C. Williamson has transplanted his pantomime Mother Goose to Her Majesty's Theatre after a thirteen weeks' successful run in Victoria. It is highly effective as a spectacular production, and surprise follows surprise, the swing septette and the airship being specially notable. The cast, too, is a very strong one. First and foremost comes the shapely Miss Florence Young, who makes an admirable Colin. Then we have Miss Celia Ghiloni, an ideal Heartsease, Queen of Fairies. From London comes Miss Olive Morell, a comely Jill, with a good voice. With Miss Florence Redfern (a pretty Lady Ida), Miss Mabelle Morgon (a stately Eric), and Miss Pressy Preston (an Australian-Dutch Gretchen) the list of principal ladies is complete.

"LUKE SHARP OF LONDON."

A Musical Comedy-Sketch, by W. P. Sheen, produced at the Surrey Theatre, on Monday, April 29, 1907.

Lazarillo .....MR. WALTER FORTH
La Belle Marie .....MISS CISSY CLEVELAND
Lieut. Eric Kingston, R.N.
MR. COURTENAY COMBER
Luke Sharp .....MR. GEORGE PAYNE
Mrs. Luke Sharp .....MISS GWEN CLIFFORD
Marmaduke Mugg .....MR. WILLIAM P. SHEEN

Set in a strikingly pretty scene, full of light and colour, representing the Market-place at Valencia, Spain, this charming musical comedy is brimful of tuneful music, patriotic songs and duets, fascinating dances, and uproarious fun and merriment. Unlike most pot-pourris of its kind, Luke Sharp of London has a tale to tell and a story to unfold. La Belle Marie, the pride of Valencia, found when a baby one morning on the beach, has been adopted by Lazarillo, a Spanish innkeeper. Now grown to womanhood, Belle Marie is loved by and loves Lieut. Eric Kingston, R.N. Luke Sharp, a cockney adventurer, one time in the service of Sir Peter Paulton, comes to Valencia, and hears that the ship Oceana was wrecked, having on board Sir Peter and Lady Paulton and their child. Sharp soon guesses that La Belle Marie is their child saved from the wreck, and as she is heiress to a large fortune, hopes to reap a rich reward. Marmaduke Mugg, a broken-down tragedian, is Sharp's companion, and these worthies determine to get Belle Marie away. But Mrs. Selina Sharp has come in quest of her faithless husband, and both Muggs and Sharp assume various disguises to put her off the scent. Eventually all is found out, and when Sharp tells Marie who she is, and wants to take her to England. The Lieutenant, however, claims her. Messrs. William P. Sheen and George Payne as Muggs and Sharp cause a good deal of fun. Mr. George Payne scores first honours in a smartly-written topical song, "Tweedledum and Tweedledee," while this merry couple's travesty of Hamlet is excruciatingly comical. Miss Gladdys Warry makes an exceedingly charming Marie in her picturesque Spanish costume. Miss Emily Hope as Mrs. Sharp is good with her Connie Ediss style. Mr. Courtney Comber makes a manly and sincere Lieutenant Kingston; and both in his love song, "I wish the girl I love loved me," and the patriotic ditty with its swinging chorus, "England is England still," is admirable. Mr. Walter Forth makes the most of the Spanish innkeeper Lazarillo; while the small but efficient chorus and Maitland's quartette of dancers add their moiety to the general success of Luke Sharp of London.

"THE LADY SUFFRAGETTIES" AND "THE POLICEMEN'S BALLET."

Another exhilarating absurdity was produced here on Monday evening by Freddie French and his company of comedians. Outside the Houses of Parliament comes a group of grotesquely-attired suffragettes, guarded by two stalwart constables. The principal lady sings a ditty, "We mean to have our votes," and gives off a violent diatribe against man and his perverse ways, and tells her hearers that the first thing they mean to do when they get into Parliament is to abolish honeymoons. A working man comes strolling along; she appeals to him as to his views on women's votes, and he tells her plainly her place is at home looking after her children. A street gamin next appears on the scene, and he gets a very bad five minutes at the hands of this virago, and is eventually rescued by the police, who return with an inspector and more of their comrades and arrest the whole body of suffragettes.

The scene changes to the stage of a municipal variety theatre, where the corps de ballet have struck. The manager comes on and asks for the kind indulgence of the audience, and whether they would accept a ballet by a body of police who are in the house. Assent by the audience is readily given, when some dozen policemen in uniform come on and indulge in a splendid burlesque of a ballet. A special word of praise is due to the juvenile comedian who assumes the character of the street gamin, and the Massim Quartette, who, under the guise of suffragettes, give pleasing evidence of well-trained and tuneful voices.

CAMBERWELL EMPIRE.

With Mr. Jesse Sparrow and Mr. Harry Bawn as managing-directors of a variety Empire, success is assured. It is a pleasure to record the fact that once again that old-time favourite comedian T. W. Barrett has returned to the sphere of his former triumphs, and the Empire patrons—although a generation younger—have recognised and endorsed, with no uncertain voice, the artistic abilities of a comedian who in the past century topped the bill at all the principal variety theatres. His quaint style is still in evidence in his two humorous songs, "Tommy, let me be," and "I shall never go back again." Mabel Bright and her youthful company are here in their bright musical mélange Girls will be Girls. In this pot-pourri Miss Bright takes most of the hard work on her shapely shoulders, and in both song and dance scores throughout, her efforts being loyally supported by the Misses Lottie Thorne, Dolly Lorne, Grace Zalska, Marie Dale, and Gwen Zalska. A very lively fifteen minutes is provided by the Mannon Troupe of acrobatic pantomimists in their pantomimic sketch, Uncle Yank. This clever combination, by the aid of trick scenery and furniture, keep the audience in a constant roar of merriment, and reap their reward in unlimited approbation. A smartly played little farcical comedy sketch is that entitled Watch the Chalk, presented by the Goodfellow Trio. The theme is a modernised version of Taming the Shrew, which always appeals to an audience. Quite a novelty is Frederica's collection of well-trained terriers and poodles. The last word in animal intelligence is demonstrated when their charming mistress joins in a cake-walk with a pretty miniature black pony. Her twelve docile and obedient dogs indulge in jumping, table spinning, turning somersaults, barrel rolling, skipping, vaulting, and parading in male and female attire. Princess Pauline, a dainty comedienne, charmingly attired in a dress of scarlet and old gold, sings a stirring song set to pretty music, entitled "The Grand Old Flag." This artist has the rare gift of being both heard and understood, and arouses a furore of patriotic fervour. Clester, a skilful and fearless American gymnast, does all manner of balancing on a slack wire, while baton swinging. Carson Hicks, the white coon, receives warm applause for his clever, quaint, and comical dancing. Smartly attired in a glittering costume, Miss Nellie Neil attempted a motto song, "Look after your pennies," and a coon song. Fields and Lewis, in singing, dancing, and comedy, keep their audience in a merry mood. Jeape's pictures first created much amusement with "The Animated Hoarding" and "The Nervous Kitchen Maid," and afterwards showed a most exciting picture of "The Desperate Footpad." Mr. Frank Hurst deserves a warm word of praise for the excellent work of his small but efficient orchestra.

RICHMOND THEATRE.

On Monday, April 29, a new Duologue, entitled

"THE SIDE-SLIP."

Jack Manners .....MR. LESLIE HOLLAND
Dolly Denholme .....MISS VERA VERE

An unambitious trifle that found immediate favour is the verdict that may be passed on this merry little sketch, which the author dubs—for want of a better description—"a racy duologue." The lady of the house is in a dilemma; she is left without servants at a moment when they are most needed, but resolves to prepare the dinner herself. At this moment enters a gentleman somewhat the worse for wear. He is at once mistaken for the gardener, and is pressed into the service to help in preparing the viands. Anon Jack Manners makes furious love to Miss Denholme under the impression she is the cook. Not to be outdone, Miss Denholme plays up to the part, and the usual misunderstandings follow. Miss Denholme retires, and Jack, who has met with an unexpected immersion, seeks refuge behind a screen, where he dons the only habiliments procurable, viz., a lady's skirt. Of course, all ends happily. Miss Dolly Denholme returns, and all ends comme il faut. Mr. Leslie Holland was delightfully droll as Jack Manners, and kept the house in a bubble of merriment. Equally clever, and not one whit less charming, was Miss Vera Vere as Dolly Denholme. Although it can hardly be said of A Side-slip that it bristles with humour, yet is it sufficiently amusing in the capable hands of Mr. Leslie Holland and Miss Vera Vere.

Apart from the sketch, the programme at the Richmond is quite up to the average. Miss Alice Maple sings prettily of flowers and love, and wins the approval of the audience. She is quite a clever little dancer, too, and was heartily applauded. As an actor-vocalist, Mr. Fred Bronte may lay full claim to the distinction; his "Vanity Fair" is admirably interpreted. He has a fine voice, and uses it to distinct advantage. The rage for juveniles seems just now fairly acute. Of Mr. Claude Fieldman's Beau Ideal Troupe of Prize Juveniles it may be said that they vocalise pleasantly, and are altogether an attractive "turn." A hornpipe in true nautical style arouses the house to enthusiasm. Au reste, they will do better things later. Little Zola dubs himself "an unusual comedian," and quite merits the appellation. His methods are quite unique, and his song, "Two and a bit," quite tickles the audience. He further evidences his drolleries in "Nursery Rhymes," and proved one of the favourites of the evening. The orchestra—always a pleasing feature here—gives a capital selection from The Casino Girl. A dainty little comedienne is Miss Daisy Stratton, whose contributions prove as refined as they are tuneful; quite a ravishingly pretty Dutch maiden she makes, and she deserves every plaudit bestowed on her charming efforts. Messrs. Hinton and Wooten get through some wonderful trick-riding in their bicycle football match, and replay the Cup-tie to the apparent satisfaction of everybody. "The Suffragette" gives Miss Lily Esplin an opportunity to exhibit her comic abilities, and there is much to be said in favour of The Belle of Bonn—a breezy, boisterous sketch, dealing with the German beer-gardens. There be worse places than Bonn if one half the things depicted by Moreton and Heath's company be true. The music of the sketch is both tuneful and catchy. The Bioscope leaves nothing to be desired.

NEW CROSS EMPIRE.

La Milo heads the bill here this week, and is drawing large audiences to each performance. This lady's speciality has been noticed and discussed so fully during the period she has been before the public that it is unnecessary to say more here than that she appears with her usual success, first in a series of Bioscope pictures, in which she looks very charming in outdoor dress, and afterwards as the living representative of some famous masterpieces of statuary. Ross and Grayson appear in a musical singing and dancing mélange which causes much amusement, and is warmly applauded; clever Miss Millie Lindon makes a welcome reappearance, and sings two songs in her own charming style, entitled "Mary" and "The angel of my dreams"; Mr. Lonnen Meadows presents a new version of a favourite old farce, which he calls Kiss Your Father; or, The Irish Doctor, in which he impersonates the O'Callaghan with great spirit and energy; Mr. Horace White is a clever and successful ventriloquist, his entertainment containing several novel features, which were duly appreciated; the Five Osranis are clever pantomime burlesque artists, and their turn is an exceedingly attractive item; Linden's Vaudeville Company presents a little contribution, entitled Monks at Play, and the singing of these artists is very pleasing, especially in "The monk may sigh," and their dancing is excellent; the American Bioscope pictures of the great football event and the capital little story entitled Trapped by Pinkerton are interesting in the extreme. Mme. Marzella's birds are a wonderfully trained collection of pigeons, parrots, macaws, and giant ravens whose marvellously clever tricks reflect the greatest credit on their fair teacher; Gintaro is a very clever Japanese equilibrist and top-spinner whose skill and dexterity delight everybody. La Milo has the advantage of Cruickshanks' lightning caricatures to fill in the short (but necessary) waits between the various subjects represented by her. Mr. Louis la Rondelle conducts the capital orchestra with his customary ability, and gave a fine rendering of a selection from Lohengrin. Mr. Ernest Bridgen is evidently the right man in the right place as manager of this handsome hall, where he looks after the comfort and enjoyment of the visitors most successfully.

ROYAL ALBERT.

From the rise of the curtain to the fall thereof merriment reigns supreme this week at the comfortable and popular house presided over by Mr. Arthur G. H. Hurst in Canning Town. Especial interest attaches to a new musical comedy sketch, entitled Duck Hunting, produced by Mr. Arthur Aiston and company. The scene is laid in a farmyard—an effective and realistic set. The simple story deals with an irascible old farmer, a pretty daughter, a sportsman of the "dude" description, lovers welcome and unwelcome, a drawwell, a duck, and a diamond ring. The dialogue throughout is of a smart nature; the songs, agreeably written and set to catchy music, are well sung; and the whole piece, on its first performance on Monday, went with perfect smoothness. Mr. Arthur Aiston's clever company played with the requisite "go," which kept the audience in a perpetual simmer of amusement. Altogether, Duck Hunting is one of those lively, bright, and inoffensive sketches that should be welcome at houses the patrons of which are pleased with a pretty, neat, and clean performance, and do not wish to be troubled with psychology or nerves.

A great favourite at Canning Town is Mr. Charles Bignell, whose ringing voice and comical manner give every possible effect to "The happiest man alive" and "Only Twenty-One"; while in the popular "Are we down-hearted?" the audience in every part of the house join in the emphatic "No!" with a heartiness that reverberates through the auditorium. Miss Billie Barlow, looking, if possible, younger and brighter than ever, throws every atom of her art and skill into the amusing "Oh, Nursie!" and, garbed as a principal boy of burlesque, brings the house down with "The Christmas Pantomime." Mr. Dan Filmer is an eccentric who knows how to fetch a popular audience, and his song "The Lady-Killer" goes with a shout. His extraordinary dancing, too, is received with thundering applause. Miss Ivy Adelaide sings prettily and dances with dainty footsteps. A very clever act is forthcoming from La Belle Maie, whose dancing on the wire is watched with breathless interest and rewarded with rounds of cheering. Another turn that keeps the house in loudly-expressed amusement is contributed by the Two Dominos, clown and donkey. The clown has plenty of ready patter at command, while the pure Arabian talking moke shows an amount of intelligence that might be envied by many of his human prototypes. Of course, his "talking" is not of the articulate order, but he is readily understood, and, what is more, evidently understands.

A second sketch, of a most laughable nature, is The Topsy-Turvy School, played by Mr. J. Collinson and his company. This is not inaptly described as "a screamingly farcical comedy." Mr. Collinson himself is irresistibly comical as the schoolmaster; and when, towards the end, he returns to his class after looking upon the wine not wisely but too well his acting reaches a high point of art, and, at the same time, steers clear of anything like vulgarity. The principal is capitally supported by a company of young people, who sing and dance with evident pleasure in their work. Raymond's Bio-Tableaux show some interesting films, which are well received. The orchestra, under the direction of Mr. J. Starck, plays a popular overture. Mr. A. G. Everitt proves himself an excellent stage-manager; and Mr. Alfred Levy, assistant-manager and secretary, looks well after everybody's comfort.

CROUCH END HIPPODROME.

This handsome and commodious place of entertainment continues to receive liberal patronage. The proprietors may be well content with the prosperity which has attended their well-judged enterprise, which has been a success from the commencement, and this week's bill amply proves their determination to retain a firm hold of popular favour, and the large audiences give expression of their approval of the liberal manner in which their requirements are catered for by the popular and business-like manager, the ever-amiable and energetic Mr. Henry de Groot. The performance commences with a well-rendered overture by the band, under the direction of Mr. J. H. Hutchinson. Miss Lily Stewart, a young and good-looking singer, follows with a ditty entitled "Cheer up, Mary," after which she contributes a well-executed dance. Mill, May, and Teresa follow in a novel entertainment of quick-change, song, and dance. The rapid changes are made in front of the audience, and meet with a decidedly favourable reception. Mr. Tom Yorke is an excellent exponent of coster comedy, and indubitably scores with his two songs, "Cutting down expenses" and "Half a loaf." A strong attraction is the burlesque business of Fields and Lewis. Their skit on an up-to-date drama is screamingly funny and entirely original, and ensures for them an enthusiastic recall. Miss Maudie Macdonald has many merits as a vocalist, and gives a tasteful rendering of "The Old Green Isle" and "Angus Macdonald," and is loudly acclaimed. Stave is a musical eccentric comedy artist of no mean order. A dummy cannon is displayed, which "goes off," and Stave comes tumbling from the interior, grotesquely made up as a Red Indian. He commences with an exhibition of his talent on the banjo; some amusing stories and patter follow, and a dummy lion suddenly appears, to the head, tail, and limbs of which are attached bells, and Stave plays a solo to the accompaniment of the orchestra. He concludes his clever turn with a long-boot dance. Mr. Chas. Sloman has an enthusiastic recognition of his abilities after his really good comic song, entitled "Who am I?" followed by some humorous patter, which causes hearty laughter. The Bates-Maddison company evokes enthusiastic applause in the well-known farcical sketch Charley's Uncle, and are followed by an artistic and acceptable turn, contributed by Miss Barbara Babbington, whose winning style, sweet voice, and prepossessing appearance have a most exhilarating effect. She sings "Somebody care for you" with commendable expression, and puts a praiseworthy amount of feeling into her rendering of "Will you love me in December as you did in May?" Mr. Leo Stormont's stirring rendering of "The Young British Soldier" excites the patriotism of his hearers, after which he gives a recitation, entitled "England for the English." He well deserves the hearty plaudits he receives. Statues are cleverly represented by Mlle. Rita, Walter and Max Seldom, and Franz de la Paix. Their contribution to the programme is keenly appreciated. An excellent entertainment ends with an exhibition of Bioscope pictures.

WOOLWICH HIPPODROME.

The management of this handsome house should be well satisfied with the first results of their efforts in placing before their patrons such excellent fare. Fully aware, however, that to enjoy good entertainment one must partake of it in comfort, they are leaving no stone unturned to provide suitable accommodation. The fauteuils and stalls, which comprise practically the whole of the floor, have been replaced by comfortable tip-up seats, which not only adequately fulfil their mission, but add greatly to the appearance of the house. With regard to the stage appointments, nothing further could be desired, the new scenery in use this week being very effective. Judging by the large and appreciative audiences that nightly fill the hall, it is evident that Mr. Walter Gibbons' endeavour to provide a high-class entertainment at popular prices is meeting with all the success it deserves.

A feature of the current bill is Mr. Paul Martinetti, who, supported by a strong company, introduces his sensational play without words, entitled A Night Attack. Mr. Martinetti as the intrepid travelling merchant who is successful in repelling the onslaught made by a band of Indians on a miners' settlement, has fine scope for his pantomimic abilities, and his adventures with various scalp-hunting Indians cause much amusement. The piece is well mounted, the scene of the Mining Settlement, with its rocks and mountain torrent, forming a realistic picture.

Mr. George Gilbey, the clever football comedian, is exceedingly funny in his sketch of the ups and downs (particularly the latter) of a professional goalkeeper, and deserves the flattering reception that is accorded to him. Mr. Will English, the popular coon comedian, keeps the house in roars of laughter with his quips and cranks and eccentric dancing, and in answer to further demands gives his ideas of different walks—such as the "Conservative Walk," the "Liberal Walk," and "the Woolwich to London Walk." Duval and Maguire shine in a novel vocal episode, their fine voices being heard to advantage in the duet "If a girl like you love a boy like me." Miss Gertie Gitana is a charming and dainty singer and dancer, and her rendering of "It seems to me" is highly appreciated. Mr. Joe Archer introduces some clever patter, and explains what would happen "If we hadn't any women in the world." The Two Bees (Henry and Flora Blake) supply a comical turn in their allegorical scena, The Man in the Moon. Mr. Ted Cowan, a noteworthy comedian, and Ruffell's Imperial Bioscope complete a varied and in every way excellent entertainment.

THE PALACE, STOKE NEWINGTON.

There is little need to wonder at the continued success of the Palace, Stoke Newington, seeing the excellence and variety of the programmes that Mr. Albert Gilmer puts before his patrons week by week, the present being no exception to the general rule. Although the last item of the performance, by no means the least important attraction in the present week's bill is the appearance of Mr. Arthur Conquest and his clever company of pantomimists in the North American sketch entitled The Sioux, an episode dealing with life in the backwoods. In this Mr. Conquest's performance of Chadi, the gorilla, is quite equal to any other of his marvellously clever animal imitations. He is well supported by the large and hard-working company he has gathered round him, and the sketch goes with a swing from start to finish, the reception accorded to it being cordial to a degree. Mr. Lloyd Morgan is a comedian with an irresistibly bright and breezy style that instantly appeals to his audience, and the go and dash with which he sings his two songs make one long for a third. The Palace Pictures, which are a standing dish in the Stoke Newington menu, are this week showing two very amusing films—the first depicting the rough handling meted out to a desperate footpad by an angry crowd, which finishes by his being thrown into some water, and the second, entitled "When We were Boys," shows two old gentlemen recalling to each other the mischievous pranks of their boyhood, their supposed conversation being interspersed by the showing on the screen of the various escapades they are calling back to memory. Miss Ruby Helder, a young lady with an extraordinary voice of a baritone quality, sings "When Other Lips," her second contribution being "The Boys of the Old Brigade," accompanying herself on the piano for the latter song. A most prominent part in the evening's amusement is taken by Mr. George Mozart, who can always be relied upon to keep his listeners laughing the whole time he is before them. It is an exceedingly quaint and droll turn in which he is at present appearing, which he seems to enjoy as much as his audience enjoy watching it. His imitation of a German band on a clarionet, his imitation of a conductor of a Hungarian band, and his impression of Mr. James Glover controlling the Drury Lane orchestra are a few of the most amusing of the many excellent items he contrives to crowd into his most enjoyable contribution to the programme. A comedy act entitled Pipple from Poppleton is presented by Cullane's Comedy Four, in which the low-comedian works very hard, and the two ladies and remaining gentleman furnish some effective singing in the sort of a musical mélange with which the act concludes. Mr. Ted Cowan is a comedian with a style of his own, and he scores well with the two songs in which he is heard. The Cecilias, a couple of clever lady instrumentalists, add to the general enjoyment of the evening, the cornet playing of one of the ladies being a specially noteworthy feature. Mr. Fred Durnstone's comic songs, the duets and dances of the Two Graces, and Miss Edie Veno's song and dance complete the entertainment. It is almost unnecessary to say that under the skilful direction of Mr. Norfolk Megone the orchestra is all that can be desired, and Mr. T. J. Robinson continues to provide for the comfort of the visitors to this hall with all his customary care and consideration.

WALTHAMSTOW PALACE.

Walthamstow folk are being entertained here with a very fine programme, upon which Mr. Arthur J. Barclay may be congratulated. After the spirited overture, "Zodiack," a mirth-provoking scene is enacted by Cole and Rags, who are full of fun; their excellent fooling meets with and merits the most cordial approval. Nothing more genuinely comical has been seen here for a long time. It may be difficult to decide which is Cole and which is Rags, but the combination is irresistible. Miss Maud Courtney sings charmingly "Wouldn't that be a dream," and enlivens her turn with some agreeable patter. A distinct novelty is provided by Mr. C. Emlyn Jones and his Ladies' Quartette. The gentleman takes his place in the conductor's chair in the orchestra and sings, facing the audience, while his quartette of ladies join in the chorus from one of the private boxes, with a strong limelight thrown on them from the "prompt" side. Mr. Jones sings "Memories" charmingly, and the melodious quartette do ample justice to the chorus.

There is plenty of humour of the rough-and-tumble order in the performance of the Seven Wulfrunas with their Fun in a Café. Miss Lilian Lowe, possessed of a fine appearance and a beautiful voice, sings artistically "Loch Lomond" and "I never knew before how much I loved you." The singer is rapturously applauded.

Mere words can hardly convey the pleasure derived by the appearance of Henry de Vry's "marble statuary" act. It is something altogether above and beyond the usual run of living statuary. The grouping is splendid, and suggests the time when Phidias was at his best and the bas-reliefs of the Parthenon were fresh from the sculptor's chisel. If one can imagine the Grecian Gallery of the British Museum with all the groups in their original purity of white marble, one can conjure up these admirable representations. Nothing more refined and artistic is possible. Maidens and young men, all of whom are exquisitely formed, pose themselves in various groups that give the immediate impression that they have just been carved out of the living marble. Out of the nine tableaux presented it would be impossible to select any for conspicuous praise, but "Peace," "Music and Dance," and "The Runners" might be selected as especial triumphs.

Mr. Fred Eustace and his company appear with the greatest success in that interesting sketch The Amber Light. The piece is one of the cleverest little dramas seen for a long time, thrilling in its story and witty in its dialogue. The plot is dovetailed most adroitly, and the situations are exciting without being forced. Mr. Fred Eustace himself is simply superb as the imperturbable Hyram G. Fletcher, displaying a wealth of dry, incisive humour; Mr. Walter Graham is admirably cool as the cold-blooded "villain of the piece," James Dalton; Mr. Charles Gordon is a dignified Sir John Montague; and Mr. George Butler is capital as the servant, John. Miss Mary Eustace makes good use of her opportunities as Mary Montague, her fine presence aiding her greatly. The sketch goes to the accompaniment of continual laughter and applause. For the stage-management of a busy evening the warmest praise is due to Mr. Joseph Grant. In Mr. Arthur J. Barclay's enforced absence at "another place" much credit is due to the management of Mr. Geo. F. Slatter, who is untiring in his efforts to make everybody comfortable and happy.

LONDON MUSICIANS.

A movement of considerable importance to musicians is on foot in London. Recent events have shown the necessity for more unity among the ranks of all engaged in theatres and music-halls. While new unions are being formed, the older organisations are coming into closer touch to gain greater strength, and it is to be hoped that the efforts now being made to establish an agreement between the Musicians Union and the Orchestral Association will be successful.

A conference has been arranged to take place in the smaller Queen's Hall on Sunday evening, Mal 12, for the purpose of considering the following resolutions, which will be submitted in the name of the committee of each society:—(1) "That the members of both societies present hereby instruct their respective executives to draw up a working agreement for joint action by both societies." (2) "That both societies bind their members not to play for less than 36s. per week of six performances. Extra performances to be paid pro rata." (3) "That after a date to be agreed upon by the executives of both societies the members of both societies agree not to play with any musician in any Metropolitan theatre or music-hall who is not a member of either society."

A TERRIFYING scene was witnessed in Paris on Tuesday at the Apollo, in the Rue de Clichy. A turn, described as "Mr. Wood and the Sisters Rosie in a sensational scene on the tight-rope," was in progress. The sisters, who had to walk along a tight wire over an open cage containing two lions, and their trainer, Mr. Wood, were about halfway across when the wire broke, and they fell into the den. The lions became infuriated, and before the trainer could do anything, Mlle. Elsie Rosie had received a long wound extending from the shoulder to the thigh, and causing abundant hemorrhage. The other girl, who fell full length into the den, was, thanks to the trainer's courage, preserved from any very serious injury. Mlle. Elsie is slowly recovering.

TREE-FELLERS AND COLONISTS.

Mr. Fred Trussell, in introducing Messrs. H. H. Jackson and Peter McLaren, in their clever and novel tree-felling act at the London Hippodrome on Monday in the presence of Mr. Winston Churchill, the Under-Secretary for the Colonies, and several representatives of Britain overseas, made the following admirable speech:—

Ladies and Gentlemen, before introducing to you the two exponents of the art of tree-felling and wood-cutting, who have been brought by us from the Antipodes, I propose, with your kind indulgence, to say a few words about this remarkable and entirely novel exhibition, which will, I think, be interesting. We were influenced by a variety of motives in incurring this expense and risk. First, of course, was the desire to place before our patrons an entirely novel entertainment, but we were also moved by strong Imperialistic leanings. We thought that to lift an entire scene, with its living actors, from the depths of the bush, and place it bodily in the Hippodrome arena, could not fail to make one more of the all-too-desirable links in that consummation so devoutly to be wished, complete union between the Mother Country and her Colonies (great applause), and a unity of sympathy and interest between those who like ourselves, pass our lives in the heart of London, and our brothers in flesh and blood and speech, who are toiling away "down under" making Empire for us. (Applause.)

We were at the outset faced with enormous difficulties. First, it was necessary to find someone who would make the journey to the Bush and obtain the services of the two champions of the Colony, to make them such an offer as would induce them to leave their homes, and give up their business surroundings for some considerable time; and, finally, to have some one hundred tons of the actual trees felled and shipped to England.

All these details were successfully accomplished—I need not say at enormous expense—with the result that you have here before you the actual scene, painted from photographs, at which the trees were felled, here around me are the men who felled them, and these are the actual trees, known as the Blue Gum or Messmate.

This wood is exceedingly hard, almost iron-like, and in order that you may be able to appreciate this to the full, I will have trays of the chips passed round after the exhibition, in order that they may be inspected by you or taken away as souvenirs.

I beg to point out to you that wood-chopping and tree-felling in our great Australian Colony is nothing short of a national sport, just as is cricket, golf, football, &c., and in all great popular assemblies there is always a grand tree-felling competition. The two men we have with us have met in such competitions as rivals times without number, in the presence of Government and municipal authorities, and of practically the entire population.

Ladies and gentlemen, the Hippodrome has had the honour of welcoming within its walls every crowned head that has visited London, and our own Royal Family are constant patrons; but the gathering this evening is quite unique in that we have amongst us every one of the Agents-General of all the Governments of the Australian Commonwealth, as well as the Prime Minister of Victoria, and many important Government officials. On the part of my directors I desire to thank those gentlemen for their presence and support, and for the great assistance we have received from some of them in arranging the details of the act and the scene in which it is set. I desire also to tender our thanks to the Imperial Government for the support given to our enterprise by the Colonial Office, through the personal patronage of the Right Hon. Winston Churchill, M.P.

I will now introduce to you the two men, Henry Horrocks Jackson and Peter McLaren. Jackson is the undisputed champion of Australia, both with the axe and saw, and jointly with McLaren with the double-handed saw. McLaren is the man who has run Jackson closest, though it singularly happens that he has created a record in tree-felling, having succeeded in cutting through a log 65in. in girth in the extraordinary time of 1min. 8sec.

They will first cut through this log, measuring 63in. in circumference. The record time for this act is, I believe, 26secs. Then they will cut through these two 60in. logs with the axe, which will be an actual competition, and may the best man win; and that, ladies and genlemen, will conclude the exhibition this evening, which will, however, be varied as far as possible at future performances.

STAFFORD SMITH'S new dramatic sketch, Across the Continent, will be produced on Monday at Richmond Theatre.

CLARENCE DELANEY, a young man, describing himself as a labourer, and giving no address, was convicted by Mr. Marsham, at Bow-street, of exposing and offering for sale a pirated copy of a musical work entitled "When the sunset turns the ocean's blue to gold." Prisoner, when seen offering copies of the pirated music for sale outside the Gaiety Theatre, was taken into custody, and while on the way to the police-station the constable was tripped up by some men, who succeded in taking away all the music in question, with the exception of one copy. Delaney, who had been prtviously convicted of a similar offence, was fined £5; in default, twenty-one days' imprisonment.

FEW persons are aware, points out the Daily Telegraph, that the departed wheel at Earl's Court was anticipated by Shakespeare. In the third act of Hamlet, scene 3, Rosencrantz remarks:—

It is a massy wheel,
Fix'd on the summit of the highest mount,
To whose huge spokes ten thousand lesser things
Are mortis'd and adjoin'd; which, when it falls,
Each small annexment, petty consequence,
Attends the boist'rous ruin.

THE ninth annual dinner and prize distribution has just recently taken place at the Perseverance Hotel, Vassall-road, Brixton, of the Stockwell Angling Society, the flourishing body which includes so many well-known members of the profession. The musical part of the evening was in the hands of Mr. Harry Payne, amongst the artists appearing being Miss Nellie Beare and Messrs. St. John Long, Bob Angus, Victor Lodge, and Virto, Mr. Charles Hardy and Master Fred Payne being the "turns" at the piano. Messrs. C. Powell and Jack Higham were chairmen.

ENTHUSIASM reigned supreme, especially among the prize-winners, some heavy lots going as a result of long hours on the bank. The heaviest fish weighed in during the season was a 16lb. pike by the president, Mr. Fred Redfern, who, being on tour with the New York Nippers, was unavoidably absent. Mr. A. Jenkins secured the first point for the Perseverance Cup with a Thames roach of 1lb. 6oz.; and Mr. William Eyke (of Messrs. Francis and Day's staff) was the heaviest scorer with no fewer than eleven prizes, followed by Messrs. C. Powell, A. Ansty, R. Harvey, J. Higham, &c. The total gross weight for the season was 843lb., all the fish being of the Society's standard, so it is evident that the humorous text for anglers which was recently improvised by a well-known fisherman does not apply to any member of the Stockwell. It was, "Behold! he riseth up early in the morning and disturbeth the whole household. Mighty in preparation, he goeth forth full of hope; when the day is far spent he returneth, smelling of strong waters, and the truth is not in him."

Knutsford May Fair.

IN connection with the crowning of the May Queen there is always a great pleasure fair on Knutsford Heath. This year (despite the inclement weather) there has been an unusually large aggregation of shows and other novelties. Amongst the larger concerns were George Green's cinematograph theatre and Relph and Pedley's electrograph. A particularly interesting feature of the fair, however, was the excellent variety of smaller shows. These included Professor Ruby's demonstration of occult mystery, Haydn and Clytie's second sight séance, Messrs. Styles, Campbell, and Rayner's Divers beneath the sea exhibition; T. Wortley's model colliery exhibition, C. Relph's freak show; E. Ball's midget show, Hughes' school of boxers, and Wortley's novelty booth.

Machine Novelties.

THE long length of the centre of the ground was occupied by the following machines:—John Whiting's Japanese cars, George Green's motor cars, John Collins's gallopers, T. Hurst's racing birds, Royle's steam horses, Relph and Pedley's whirling the whirl, Isaac Richard's steam yachts, and Dyson's oscillator. The smaller machines included Whiting's motor cars, Mercer's motor cars, and Mrs. Massey's gem swings.

All the Fun of the Fair.

AMONGST the other caterers of amusements were Messrs. George Cornwell, Hughes and Martin, White, Jewell, and Marsden, with shooting concerns; S. Walker, with emma sheets and aerial flight; S. Mercer, A. Whatmore, R. Harrington, G. Murphy, J. Jones, White, J. Harrington, J. H. Royle, Jones, Dillon, Mitchell, and Mrs. Whiting, with throwing games and varieties. The excellent photographic concerns of Messrs. Barker and Gunthorpe finished the list of things at Knutsford Fair.

Spring Fairs in Yorkshire.

AT Birstall were Harry Ashington's cinematograph and marionette theatre, Tower's freak show, Goldthorpe Marshall's motor cars, Burgin's steam swings, Houldsworth's Winchester range, and Tower's bottle smasher; throwing games, &c., by Barker, Burgin, Lloyd, Johnson, Guthrie, Blackborn, and Bassett. At Bowling were Testo's cinematograph, Waddington's motors, Corrigan's steam yachts, Jameson's Winchester range and bottle battery, Burrell's rifle saloons, Rhodes' bottle smasher, and stalls and novelties by other caterers. At Great Horton were Professor Gibson's second sight show, Texas Bill's ranche exhibition, W. H. Marshall's gondolas, and galloping horses, the shooting concerns of Messrs. Barker, Houldsworth, and Proctor, with the usual attendant throng of throwing games, stalls, &c.

South Shields.

THIS fair has for its entertainers William Wilson, with cinematograph theatre; J. Murphy, with motor-car set; Claude Hamilton and Walker Hoadley, with steam horse sets; E. Morali, with helter-skelter lighthouse; and George Gray and W. Spencer, with swings.

Lincoln Great Fair.

THE Cathedral city lends itself admirably to the modern development of the show business. Lasting as it does for eight days, it attracts some of the best concerns on the road. This year the principal shows were Randall Williams' (Monte Brothers) cinematograph theatre, Tuby and Sons' coliseum, E. Farrer's cinematograph, J. Procter's cinematograph, and Holland's similar concern. Prince Samouda, in his temple of magic and second sight, was an interesting and successful novelty at the fair. The machine list included motor-cars, switchbacks, steam horses, and swings by Messrs. Warren, A. Martin, Tuby, Smith and Warren, Cox and Sons, and Ben Howden and Sons. The Winchester ranges, rifle saloons, and bottle batteries were provided by Messrs. Ward, Eva, Atkins, Holland, Barwick, Bland, Chapman, Smith, Richards, and Wallser. The throwing games and variety stalls were provided by Messrs. Gillett, Smith, Wallser, Angus, Barwick, Cornwell, Ball, and Eva.

Alton Fair.

ALTON in Hampshire has its fair on the last Saturday in April, and the lessee of the ground, W. Matthews, the well-known Hampshire showman, provides the principal novelties. These include steam horses and ostriches, Winchester ranges, rifle saloons, and bottle batteries. With Mr. Matthews are associated Messrs. Odam and Coates, with swings and throwing games.

Hatfield Fair.

THIS interesting Hertfordshire fixture was, as usual, under the management of Mr. Harris, the local showman, who provided the following interesting novelties:—Motor-cars, two novelty booths, rifle saloon, bottle smasher, and swings. With Mr. Harris were associated Messrs. Brinkley, Ridley, and Shaw, who exhibited steam horses, ostriches, shooting concerns, swings, and throwing games. The big show and principal novelty was Mrs. A. Barker's cinematograph theatre.

Bracknell Fair.

THE principal concerns at this fair were Biddall's royal bioscope and theatre of varieties, Thomas's steam horses and park swings, Andrews and Saunders' shooting concerns and throwing games, variety stalls and novelties by Slaney, Davis, Thomas, and other caterers.

Bridgnorth Fair,

held on the old recreation grounds under terribly bad weather conditons, was this year maintained by Sol. Reader's two novelty shows, S. Shepherd's racing motor-cars and switchback, Gottheimer's three-abreast galloping horses, throwing games by Messrs. Dobson Bros., and shooters by Morris and W. Dobson.

WE call our showmen readers' attention to the very important notice in our advertising columns of a special meeting of the Roundabout Proprietors' and Showmen's Union at Salford on Monday next. The proposed alteration in railway rates would seriously injure the show business in every branch.

The Return of Summer.

GLORIOUS sunshine blessed the May-Day revels at Knutsford. For once the croakers of weather disaster were found false prophets, and the Knutsford May pageant proved a glorious success. Just before mid-day the excursion trains began to roll in from all parts, and the thousands of visitors gleefully made their way through the town, adding to the scheme of decoration in the streets with their many-coloured adornments. Knutsford itself was a picture of brightness, flags and streamers waving welcome to all. Round the Heath the bustle was at its greatest. Here the May-Day Fair, under John Wheiing's banner—with such shows as Green's and Relph and Pedley's cinematograph theatre, occultists like Profs. Ruby and Haydn, and side shows by Messrs. Styles, Campbell and Co., Wortley, Ball, C. Relph, and Hughes—delighted the multitude. The machine novelties of George Green, Whiting, Hurst, Richards, Royle, J. Collins, Mercer, Relph and Pedley, Massey, and Dyson in a real sense kept up the whirligig of joyous merriment, and all the fun of the fair was in full swing.

Nursery Rhymes Pictured.

CHEERING crowds lined the route from the Town Hall to the Heath. The procession was long, an achievement in dress and style, a marvel in colouring and decoration, and a decided accomplishment in the arrangement of spectacular detail. Nothing pleased the juvenile element so much as the dainty characterisation of nursery rhymes. Almost last of all, following her crown-bearer, Master Sedyric S. Newton, and her maids of honour, came the Queen, Miss Ethel Todd, in her beautiful Royal carriage. As Wendy in Peter Pan would say, it was all "frightfully fascinating."

The Coronation Ceremony.

BY this time the sun was triumphant, and the enjoyment was in keeping with the conditions. After the procession had left the Town Hall the hundreds who watched it start made the shortest cut to the Heath, where the scene was extremely picturesque. The crowds inside the ring waited with patience until the leading items in the procession appeared. They were greeted with plaudits, and the ringing cheers broke out with renewed and redoubled fervour when Her Majesty's equipage entered the arena. Bowing, she was driven round her kingdom so that all might behold the people's elect. Then, with a pretty grace, she was escorted to her throne, which was draped in Royal purple and threaded with gold. When the Queen was crowned the honour was acclaimed with much enthusiasm by her subjects. Round the Maypole her admirers danced merrily, and the day's event was a brilliant and gorgeous success.

It is just exactly twenty years since their present Majesties, then Prince and Princess of Wales, witnessed, and were highly pleased with, the celebrations, and accepted from the May Queen of that year a bouquet, subsequently giving to the committee the title to use the prefix "Royal."

Each year witnesses some important and interesting feature added to the pageant. The novelties this year included, amongst others, thirty or forty girls, in dainty frocks, who danced along the route from the Town Hall to the Heath. Then there were the Crewe Morris Dancers, always an integral part of the procession, royal jesters, and tableaux founded on nursery rhymes. These evoked the admiration of a great crowd of people. There were also the ancient sedan, a representation of King Canute, statue dancers, Maypole dancers, boys and girls of different nationalities, Grace Darling and her father, lady hornpipe dancers, Maid Marian, foresters, &c.

The Show World at the Academy.

IT is interesting to note that the only picture exhibited this year by Mr. Byam Shaw, R.I., deals with the show world. It is an evening scene by an old green drinking-fountain, and it shows a captivating columbine, in pink tulle, kissing harlequin under the trees, while pantaloon peeps at them slily over his fingers, the clown roars with laughter, and a serious policeman "stands by."

Redskins and Cowboys.

THIS film, one of Pathé Frères, is very effective and sensational, and should be added to every showman's collection. It depicts the Redskin flogged by the white man; he swears revenge, and steals the white man's wife from the old coach. There is a rescue by the white men through the intelligence of a dog, who takes them a message from the wife. It is illustrated by gorgeous scenery.

Carmarthen.

THIS week Messrs. Fossett's circus paid a visit to the town, and was liberally patronised by the inhabitants. The entertainment provided was abundant, and the audience were highly pleased with the various performances.

Sad Death of a Circus Artist.

A PRIVATE telegram from New York announces the death of Mme. Gaertner, who seven weeks ago was starring as a trick rider as Hengler's Circus, London. Though performing her tricks with thorough success, the lady was in ill-health, and when a good offer came from America, where her husband is a prominent juggler, she accepted it, hoping the voyage would benefit her, but she grew worse, and died immediately after landing. Her last message was to her four-year-old daughter at Blackpool, who has been constantly asking for her mother, who was only twenty-four years of age. Mme. Gaertner was a pupil for many years under Mr. William Tudor, who is now performing in London, and whose family have run circuses in Great Britain and on the Continent for four generations. Black Bess, the famous mare known in Cook's Circus for the Turpin Ride, was used for years by the late Mme. Gaertner, to whom the intelligent animal was obedience itself. The horse is now resting at Hengler's Cirque.

The "Zancigs" of the Fairground.

PROFESSOR HAYDN and Clytie have created a great deal of excitement at Moss Side, a suburb of Manchester. The Professor, with his miniature temple of magic, had a short season at the Moss Side Fair, organised by Mr. William Holmes, and a correspondent of the Manchester Guardian visited the fair and thus speaks of Professor Haydn and Clytie's performance of telepathy:—"A woman sat on a chair facing the audience; she was blindfolded. A man went quickly among the people, asking questions with great rapidity. 'What is this?' 'A gold chain.' 'How many links?' 'Fourteen.' 'This?' 'An Indian coin.' 'This?' 'An enamelled bracelet with Maltese cross design.' 'This?' 'A silver watch with the little finger broken'—and so on. The performance lasted not more than six or seven minutes, but certainly not less than fifty or sixty questions were asked and correctly answered. I am a close student of music-halls, but I have never seen anything so quick, so sure, so startling. The answer was in each case given immediately the question was put. A verbal code was out of the question, and it was impossible for the woman to see the objects indicated."

THE rapidity and smartness with which Haydn and Clytie do their business has been well known for years past to frequenters of our fairs. We have also seen Prince Samouda and his accomplished wife the Princess in their second-sight business, and we are compelled in all fairness to confess that the second-sight experts who travel from fair to fair exhibit a proficiency and marvellous certainty in their business that equals the very best telepathic exhibitions of recent date, and we compliment Professor Haydn and Clytie on the deserved success of their extremely interesting and expert performances.

Moss Side Fair, Manchester,

held on a spare piece of ground at the end of Lloyd-street, and under Mr. Holmes's management, has been very successful. The exhibitions were: George Green's coliseum of animated photography (acting and speaking pictures, illustrator and elocutionist, Mr. Styles) and empire of varieties, Professor Haydn and Clytie's thought-reading show (two minds with but a single thought), Hague's school of boxers, Mitchell's motor cars, Hurst's poultry farm, Holmes's galloping horses, Richards's steam yachts, Houldsworth's helter-skelter, Brierley's gem swings, and Shuttleworth's big wheel. There was the usual aggregation of minor novelties.

"The Hero."

ONE of the latest and most effective films produced by the Vitagraph Company of America is that of "The Hero: a Story of Everyday Life." As our illustration indicates, it depicts a thrilling rescue from a burning building. The scene opens in front of an apartment house, with pedestrians passing to and fro, when suddenly a commotion occurs, the doors are burst open, and several excited people rush out. Out of the door, from which smoke begins to pour, dashes a lady shrieking wildly for her little girl, and at the same instant at one of the topmost windows a child appears. The distracted mother tries to rush back into the burning house, but she is prevented by bystanders, who know that it would be certain death to re-enter. Suddenly the crowd is parted, and a young man, throwing off his coat and hat, commences to climb up the iron leader pipe on the corner of the building, and finally reaches the top story. Carefully reaching out and steadying the little child as she climbs over the window sill, he begins his perilous descent. As he passes each successive floor the flames and smoke from the windows almost blind him, but at last he reaches the ground in safety, and delivers his precious charge to the joyful mother. The film, which is 250 feet in length, in copyright.

A New Motor Switchback.

THE Selby Motor and Engineering Company, Ltd., have just completed for Mr. Holland, the well-known roundabout proprietor, a motor switchback, consisting of eight motor cars, each car holding nine passengers, the machine only occupying 41ft. in diameter, yet having the same earning capacity as a 52ft. diameter machine. A successful run was made a week ago, starting without a hitch and attaining great speed, with intense sensation owing to the small circumference and steepness of the track. Mr. Holland is delighted with the all-round excellence of his machine. Its success solves the problem that has much occupied the minds of riding masters, as to the possibility of manufacturing on a track of such a small diameter as 41ft., a machine compact enough to travel on five loads by road or rail. Mr. Holland has not only accomplished this important working fact, but claims also that his machine creates a record.

IN connection with their carnival, Messrs. Delmar, the managers of the Palace at Bridlington, have introduced a novelty to this popular place of resort in the person of Sacco, the celebrated fasting man, who on Monday last was sealed up in his 10ft. glass house, where he is to fast for twenty-five days.

MR. GEORGE BURTON, the old-established South Yorkshire gala caterer, has been entrusted with the management of the great Hallam hire carnival, which takes place on August 5, 6, and 7. The "Royal" caterer has also been appointed director of the revels at the "Olde English Merry-makeing," to be held in July at the historic Bolsover Castle.

DEATH OF MR. C. C. FELL.

On Tuesday, the 23rd ult., there passed away, in the person of Mr. C. C. Fell, one of Scotland's most respected and highly-esteemed amusement caterers. Twenty-three years ago Mr. Fell forsook commercial life in Lancashire and took over the American Museum, 101, Trongate, Glasgow. From the first Mr. Fell's ideal was to provide an entertainment free from reproach. His uninterrupted run of twenty years in the same building shows how well he accomplished his purpose. It was Mr. Fell's greatest pride to know that his entertainment was regarded as an exhibition to which parents could bring their families without fear of offence. He was an untiring worker, thoroughly honest and punctual in all his dealings, and a considerate employer. He went into retirement three years ago, and his many friends both in this country and abroad will regret that his period of leisure has been so soon cut off. He was sixty-four years of age, and his remains were interred in the Glasgow Cathcart Cemetery, the grave being covered with floral tokens of the high esteem in which the deceased was held.

THE SHOWMEN'S GUILD AT KNUTSFORD.

Continuing his interesting itinerary of the British Fairs, the Rev. T. Horne organised and carried through two important meetings at Knutsford May Fair. As already indicated in The Era, Mr. Horne had the sanction and co-operation of the Vicar of Knutsford. The afternoon meeting, strictly confined to show people, took the form of a conference on the present aspect of the show business and the means to be taken to combat local authorities adverse to it. In spite of the inclement weather the attendance at the meeting was a representative one, the showmen present and taking part in the proceedings including Mr. George Green, V.P., Mr. John Whiting, V.P., Mr. R. Newall, V.P., Mr. G. H. Cornwell, V.P., Mr. S. Mercer, member of Committee, and the following members and friends of the Showmen's Guild:—Mr. I. Richards, Mr. A. Whatmore, Professor Ruby, Professor Haydn, Mr. Styles, Mr. Pablo, Mr. Rayner, Mr. Campbell, and others.

TRADE DEFENCE.

In opening the conference the Rev. T. HORNE dwelt upon the important work of the Showmen's Guild in defending the trade interests of amusement caterers, and in fostering a right and just public opinion with regard to the open-air amusements of the British public. He particularly urged upon the showmen present the duty of taking an active part in the work of trade defence. He urged upon them that as they travelled through the country they should take notice of all attempts to injure the business of the fairground, and whenever the fair ground business is attacked in the public Press forward a copy of the local papers to the office of The Era, and the matter would be immediately dealt with.

He assured them that as regards the attack on their business, in Private Bill Legislation the Guild executive, through its Parliamentary defence work were in a position to completly safeguard their interests. It was not so with regard to the equally important question of proposed bye-laws. They had no means of getting to know in many cases when bye-laws inimical to showmen were being put forward. This was why he urged showmen, as they travelled the country, to give some time and attention to the local Press, for it was mostly in the out-of-the-way corners of the country that successful efforts were being made to damage their business.

It was quite true, he said, that as regards the great towns and the great industrial counties they were able to obtain information without depending upon the vigilance of the individual members of their organisation. They had nothing to fear from these great Corporations. He instanced the negotiations of the Guild with great public bodies like the County of Lancashire and the County of Cheshire. These great public authorities had accepted the reasonable amendments which the organised showmen, through the Guild, had put before them. It was extremely satisfactory that throughout the length and breadth of the County of Cheshire, in which the present fair was located, the fairs, wakes, feasts, and festivals of the people are exempted in full from the restrictions of very inimical bye-laws.

Referring to another important branch of their work on its Parliamentary side, he showed how important it was that the machinery for scrutinising and opposing Private Bill legislation should be kept in full working vigour. The latest instance of this was the well-known Rawtenstall Corporation Markets Bill. Their society had been compelled to petition against that Bill because they could not get a satisfactory definition of its power and scope from its promoters.

It is a curious point in English law that there is no legal definition of the difference between a fair and a market. In many instances fair and market are interchangeable terms, and unless it is specifically set out in a charter that a fair is for the purposes of pleasure as well as business there is considerable legal doubt as to whether a market may be held at the same time as a fair, or a fair at the same time as the market.

Our Guild had to go through the expensive procedure of opposition by petition and pleading by counsel before the Parliamentary Committee of the House of Commons in order to compel the Corporation of Rawtenstall to confess that when their Bill said markets they did not mean it to include fairs. The conference, he added, would readily perceive the importance of the definition, for it was settled for all time that whilst the Corporation by their private Act obtained full power of control over all markets within the Borough, they had no power to prohibit showmen opening up private land within the Borough for fairground purposes.

In opening the discussion Mr. STYLES warmly commended the work of the Showmen's Guild, and expressed his full appreciation of the good work done by their friend and champion, the Rev. T. Horne. He also expressed the general opinion of showmen when he said that as a body they owed a debt of gratitude to Mr. F. H. Pedgrift, of The Era newspaper, who had consistently defended the business of amusement caterers not only in the United Kingdom, but throughout he world.

SUPPORT THE GUILD.

Mr. PABLO, as an old showman, and as one who was concerned in the very early days of the formation of the Showmen's Guild, urged upon the conference the duty of supporting its work with ample funds. He very much feared that whilst other societies representing sectional interests were dividing travellers into class against class, the work of the old van-dwellers' society was being injured in the cross purposes and jealousies of the new organisation. Here, he said, was a society that rose above party divisions and defended them from every attack and endeavoured to raise them and their calling in life in public esteem and popularity.

Mr. JOHN WHITING heartily agreed with the previous speakers as to the necessity of maintaining the working efficiency of the society. He was glad to think that he had never faltered in his adherence to the old society, and he was proud to be identified with its good work.

RAILWAY CHARGES.

Mr. GEORGE GREEN also warmly commended the work of the Guild to his fellow showmen, and warned them that unless they were united, the various interests opposed to them would seriously cripple their enterprise. He instanced the extremely serious nature of proposed additional charges for railway transit by the combined railway companies. These charges, affecting all show goods travelling by rail, would so increase the cost of carriage as to make it impossible for the great bulk of the concerns to trade with the companies. They had an important deputation to represent the combined interests of the fairground, and that deputation would go before the Railway Clearing House during the next week, and he trusted with some confidence that they would be able to convince the railway companies that their proposed charges would constitute too great a strain for the show business to bear.

The other speakers joining in the conference were Messrs. Ruby, S. Mercer, George Cornwell, and Haydn.

THE GUILD SERVICE.

The gathering in the evening took the form of a Guild Service, and, like the conference, was held in Mr. George Green's spacious cinematograph theatre, Mr. Green and his whole staff co-operating to make the gathering the success it was, both the outside and the inside of the theatre were brilliantly illuminated by electric light. The Chaplain was assisted in the service by Captain Weston, of the Church Army, and the full strength of the choir from the Parish Church Mission Hall. Through the pouring rain the people came to the church in the show booth on the fairground, and showpeople and townsfolk joined heartily in the rousing hymns used in the Guild service. The Rev. T. Horne, the Guild Chaplain, conducted the service throughout and preached the sermon, based upon the subject of the Church's Epistle for the Sunday, "Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of Light, with whom is no variableness nor shadow of turning."

The congregation was sincerely devout ard deeply attentive to the Chaplain's words. In a striking passage the preacher pointed out that the talent and ability to amuse and entertain the people was a good gift from God, that all gifts of poetry, music, oratory, painting, and all good things that made life brighter and fuller were gifts from Above, and came down from the Father of all good gifts.

As at Wrexham Fair, there was a numerous gathering of the showpeople at the Guild Service, and it was exceedingly gratifying to notice the hearty manner in which the people of Knutsford appreciated the service and joined in fellowship of Christian worship with the van-dwellers.

THE IRREPRESSIBLE SHOWMAN AT BLACKPOOL.

It is a dozen years ago since the Blackpool Corporation started its crusade against the showmen on the sands. This mistaken policy of clearing the sands of the extremely interesting and amusing crowd of itinerant entertainers ended in a virtual triumph for the displaced showmen and traders on the sands. The Lancashire people were so disappointed at the lack of attractions on the sands that the Corporation had to invite the entertainers to return and to afford special facilities for them. During the time that the entertainers were driven off the sands, some of the local showmen discovered the possibility of a fair-ground at the South Shore end of the great Blackpool promenade. The business ability of men like Mr. Ellis, Mr. Grange, and others by private enterprise completely turned the tables on the Corporation, and the narrow-minded fanatics who desired, evidently, to make a week at Blackpool a week of Sabbath days. The fair at South Shore has grown with such tremendous rapidity that it is fast becoming one of the chief features of interest to Blackpool's many visitors.

Our Blackpool correspondent has forwarded to us some interesting details of the fight which has raged around the question of the fair-ground at South Shore. At a recent by-election to the Borough Council, the question of fair-ground or no fair-ground was the principal theme of public interest. A Puritan candidate was nominated with the direct purpose of testing the question, and in his election address made use of the following observations against the fair:—

"The election resolves itself into a contention between the ratepayers of Waterloo Ward and the Fair-ground syndicate and its supporters on the Council, as to the future of South Shore. It is not a personal contest, it is not a political contest, it is your contest against this dumping of the roughest possible type of entertainment in your midst to the very detriment of you all."

To champion the cause of the showmen, one of the proprietors of the Fair-ground was nominated, and in his election address thus explains his position in the contest:

"As one of the freeholders of the Pleasure Ground, I am very anxious that its future development should be conducive to the best interests of the whole of South Shore. Its rapid growth and popularity prove that if the Pleasure Ground is conducted under proper restrictions it is certain to become, in the near future, a favourite and successful resort of pleasure, enhancing the well-being and prosperity of the southern end of the town."

Supporting the candidature of the showmen's champion there have been several interesting letters in the Blackpool papers. From one of these we quote; it is written above the signature "One of the Despised Showmen":

"There is one thing that I must congratulate Mr. Lawson upon, and it is that he states distinctly that 'this is not a personal contest' (though how a contest of this kind can be anything but personal, passes my comprehension); 'it is not a political contest, but it is your' (why your?) 'contest against the dumping of the roughest possible type of entertainment in your midst.'

"So far, so good. But let us examine Mr. Lawson's claim to be voicing your sentiments. Might there not be two opinions on this vexed question of the Fair-ground? I would ask every conscientious voter to test the truth or otherwise of the extravagant assertions of Mr. Ernest Lawson.

"Mr. Lawson, in September last, published in the local journals a letter from which I now quote (remember the language is his, not mine). He charged those employed upon the Fair-ground with being 'a dirty conglomeration of pomona' (I always thought that she was a goddess) 'and a menace to the future morality of Lancashire.' He even went so far as to insult the visitors to the Fair-ground; and, again quoting this pragmatical gentleman, 'without any disparagement (!) a much rougher and rowdier lot of people, men and women, lads and lasses' (thank goodness, he leaves those scoundrels, the babies, out), 'whose homes and social surroundings are not such as tend to diminish a vulgar rowdyism when upon holiday bent.'

Well, if that is not disparagement, what is? After that, all I can say is, if they (the visitors) are as bad as all that, those working on the Fair-ground have not much chance of making them any worse.

"My sole object, sir, in writing to you upon this subject is to raise a protest against the unjust insinuations and charges that Mr. Ernest Lawson has brought against us, the showmen on the Fair-ground.

"My employers pay me for the services I give them, but in so doing I do not for one moment give up my right, my character, and that of my wife and family.

"I challenge Mr. Ernest Lawson to substantiate his statements, and in conclusion would like to thank the great number of Blackpool residents and visitors for the sympathy they have expressed to us in our severe losses during the recent gale."

Another evidence of showman talent is the following interesting verses, by a local showman:

"THE DESPISED SHOWMAN."

When the busy mill is silent,
When the tools are packed away,
When from factory or counter
Off you go on holiday;
As with joy upon your features
You prepare yourself for fun,
Just remember the old showman,
For his work has just begun.

It may be perchance he travelled
Through the long and weary night,
And while you were soundly sleeping
He'd the elements to fight.
But he's ready to provide you,
After working might and main,
With some rollicking amusement,
Giving pleasure, scouting pain.

Hear the little children shouting,
As they ride around with glee
On the dear old hobby horses,
Seated safe on daddy's knee.
Watch the youths and pretty maidens
Spellbound gaze upon the stage—
Here is virtue shown victorious,
Whilst the villain's hissed with rage.

Next the sportsmen, young and hearty
(If in years not over-ripe),
Take a great delight in smashing
Poor old Aunt Sally's pipe.
Just beside them, strapping fellows,
Who'd stand by you in a hole,
To their comrades proudly proving
How they always kick a goal.

Shooting jungles, Roaring Lions,
Circus Riders, Two-Faced Cat—
All is bustle for the moment,
To-morrow's worktime—what of that?
Round and round the Razzle Dazzle,
Up and down the swings so high,
Happy peals of honest laughter
Rise in pæans to the sky.

Afterwards, the fair-ground silent,
And a change comes o'er the scene.
Poor old showman, rather weary,
For his supper's somewhat keen.
Has he earned it? Well, I think so,
But he has no time to waste.
Packing up, another fair-ground
He must reach in eager haste.

'Tis next morning, getting ready,
In perhaps some distant town,
Stands our showman on the platform,
Smiling, for he must not frown.
Hark, the crowd comes laughing, cheering,
His hand he lays upon his heart,
Low he bows and shouts his loudest,
"Walk up! Walk up! It's time to start."

THEATRICAL PATENTS.

The concise descriptions that we give below of recent applications for patents are specially contributed by Messrs. Howard and Co., Patent Agents, 57 and 58, Chancery-lane, London, W.C., who will assist readers in all patent matters:—

APPLICATIONS:

8991. Joseph John Williams, of St. Vincent-street, Glasgow, for means for producing aerial gymnastic performances.

9090. Horace Goldin, of 17, Torrington-square, London, W.C., for improvements in valises, dressing cases, and the like, convertible into dressing or other tables.

COMPLETE SPECIFICATION:

8. Stage Illusions. Goldin, Horace, 17, Torrington-square, London, W.C. The performer, preferably a lady, is sustained in a reclining position above the floor by a skeleton support, so that a ring can be passed along the whole length of the body. A socket of the support is fitted over a stud of a vertical rod, which passes through the floor, is concealed by the attendant, and is raised and lowered by a handle, worm gearing, a drum, and a wire rope, passing over a pulley. The lady is raised into position in a boat or receptacle which is afterwards removed.

The concise description that we give below of a recent application for a patent is specially furnished by Messrs. Howard and Co., patent agents, 57 and 58, Chancery-lane, London, W.C., who will assist readers in all patent matters:—

688. Illusion apparatus. Jaeger, C. H., Central Park South, Manhattan, New York, U.S.A. Relates to an apparatus for producing on the occupants of a stationary motor-car the impression that they are travelling at a high rate. The car is caused to rock violently by a roller attached to it, riding upon a rotating drum having an undulating periphery. To produce variety of motion the drum is moved laterally by a screw. Panoramic scenes, wound upon rollers, travel past the car so as to create the impression of motion. A travelling roadway is arranged similarly. The perspective is exaggerated by inclining the scenes to one another. Several cars may be employed in compartments separated by curtains. When the scenes have been completely unwound from the rollers, the position of the cars and the inclination of the scenes are reversed and the scenes rewound upon the rollers. The curtains are raised and others again are lowered.

AMUSEMENTS IN SOUTH AFRICA.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

DURBAN, NATAL, April 5. — HIS MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—The new theatre in West-street, which has been christened His Majesty's, was opened on Saturday, March 30, the play chosen for the opening being Rob Roy, which was produced under the auspices of the Natal Caledonian Society. Miss Florence Perry, an experienced professional artist, took the part of Diana Vernon, and her acting and singing were excellent throughout the play. She had to respond to encores for both "Flora Macdonald's Lament" and the "Bonnie Banks o' Loch Lomond." Miss Findlay as Helen Macgregor looked the part, and spoke with dramatic emphasis. Miss A. Buchanan as Mattie played neatly; Jean McAlpine and Martha were efficiently sustained by Mrs. Barrett and Miss M. A. McAffer respectively. Mr. John Morley appeared in the title-rôle; and Bailie Nicol Jarvie was taken by Mr. R. White with much humour. Other parts were satisfactorily rendered.

PRIMAVESI, who is still suffering from acute rheumatism, desires through our columns to thank all friends for their kind inquiries.

MR. CHARLES MUSSETT, after two years, has resigned the management of the Empire, Glasgow, and is now in London. Letters c/o The Era will reach him.

A MEETING of the Provisional Committee of the Bioscope Operators will be held next Friday, when a draft of the rules will be considered, and the regulations of the London County Council relating to the duties of operators of cinematographs in music-halls will also come under discussion.

A SITE has been secured, with a licence attached, in one of the principal streets of Maidstone, and a new compeny is now being formed with a capital of £25,000, to be called the Maidstone Winter Garden Palace and Exhibition Company. Plans are being designed by a well-known architect of Ipswich. A small arcade with eight shops is to form part of the scheme.

MR. E. J. DEXTER, manager of the Palace Theatre, Dundee, has been presented by Mr. Georg Hackenschmidt with a massive silver tobacco-box as a token of esteem, and in remembrance of the enjoyable time spent in the marmalade town during his recent engagement at the Palace. The box, which is of an exceedingly beautiful design, bears the following inscription: "E. J. Dexter, from Georg Hackenschmidt, April, 1907."

BEFORE Mr. Registrar Linklater, a sitting was appointed to be held on Tuesday for the public examination of Julien Davis Solomon, described as of the Kilburn Empire, Belsize-road, Kilburn, music hall proprietor, but as the accounts had only just been lodged, the hearing was adjourned for a month. The unsecured debts are returned at £494, and debts fully secured £6000, against assets £8, in addition to the debtor's interests, of uncertain value, under his late father's will, and in certain Australian property. He states that he has been in the theatrical profession for many years.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

BERLIN, THURSDAY, May 2.—This latest production at the Berliner is said by some to be the work of the actor-manager, Herr Bonn, who has once or twice produced his own plays under a pseudonym. Be that as it may, the piece had a genuinely cordial reception, which was, moreover, well merited. It is termed a "schoolboy's tragedy," and there is more truth and less caricature in it than in several similar pieces that have had successful runs here. The unfortunate hero is one of the elder boys in a large grammar school; his name is Felix Uller, and his father—a clerk in the Government service—is a despot and domestic tyrant. Felix has secretly filled his head with all sorts of romantic notions, from books that are too old for him, and he cherishes wild dreams of liberty and greatness. Nobody sympathizes with him, and he gradually becomes bitter and as obstinate as everyone declares him to be. His master in the school has a spite against Felix, preventing his progress, and to crown all Frau Uller—who would love her son if circumstances would let her—has been for so many years the victim of her husband's evil temper that her health breaks down. She never cared for the man she married, but had given her heart in early years to another, from whom a contrary fate separated her. Physically and morally weak, the woman leads a life of misery, and her troubles are increased by the frequent violent scenes between her husband and son. Finally—after an act of insubordination in school—the master gives Felix the worst "nota" that it is in his power to bestow. This will prove an insuperable obstacle to the career for which Uller has destined his son, and a terrible scene ensues. Smarting under his father's blows, and still more from the unloving atmosphere with which he has been surrounded, the boy upbraids his mother in cutting words. She, poor creature, is so agitated that the action of her heart fails and she dies, while Uller turns upon his son, denouncing him as the murderer of his mother. The lad, with a wild and bitter cry, throws himself from the window of the fourth floor, and thus ends his own life. The trace of dramatic talent are distinctly visible, and the characters are drawn with great fidelity to life. The author should, in time, do better work, and doubtless will do so. In some of the scenes the acting might have been better, but, all in all, the cast was commendable. One scene is particularly skilfully drawn—the conference held by the grammar school masters, and special praise must be accorded to Herr Donner for his clever and natural impersonation of the unhappy hero. The reception of the piece was very cordial. Herr Bonn, by the way, is contemplating giving up the reins of government at the Berliner as soon as he can find someone to take the lease over. This step has come upon us as a surprise, and the immediate reason is probably the unpleasantness connected with the production of Der junge Fritz, recently mentioned in your columns. Herr Bonn, from the time he commenced business at this theatre, has had to put up with a good deal of animosity, not on the part of the public, but of the local Press, and he will scarcely regret resigning managership.

SIGNOR D'ANDRADE is proving, as usual, a powerful attraction at the Komische Oper, where the company of the Theatre des Westens is holding the boards in the absence of Herr Gregor. The excellent baritone loses none of his popularity as the years pass, and his "Don Giovanni" is as good an impersonation as ever. He made a capital hit this week as Figaro, in The Barber of Seville, Frau Heymann-Engel singing the part of Rosina. The house was crowded, and the two favourite artists were called before the curtain repeatedly.

THE Lessing Theatre Company has returned from a highly successful tour in Austria-Hungary and Bavaria, and recommenced work here on Saturday with a revival of Gerhart Hauptmann's social drama, Florian Geyer. This is one of the author's earliest works; it has many very powerful scenes, and the strong plot is admirably developed. At the same time, some scenes are so overnoisy that the nerves of many of the listeners are unnecessarily tried. The piece was splendidly acted and met with an enthusiastic reception. Herr Rittner, in the name-part, achieved a well-merited success. It is one of the versatile actor's finest rôles. Herr Sauer and Herr Bassermann gave first-rate renderings of Löffelholz and Tellermann, while Fräulein Orloff scored in the part of Marei.

A HAMBURG company from the Ernst Drucker Theatre has opened a season at the Central. They play in Low German, and the initial piece selected is entitled Thetje Egger's Brautnacht. The plot is too coarse to be detailed, but the interpretation was good; the wild humour of the piece—a volks-burlesque—caught the taste of a great part of the audience, and laughter and applause were loud and hearty. It remains to be proved whether the apparent success will be a lasting one.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

BERLIN, THURSDAY, April 25.—This work of our famous dramatist is particularly effective; the scenes are full of colouring and warmth, many being exceedingly dramatic. The action passes in the period of the predatory knights, and the plot is partly romantic, partly bloodthirsty, as consistent with the times. Hipold Jeronimus is Knight of Rabenstein and as thieving an old scoundrel as any of his compeers. His daughter Bersabe, "die Rabensteinerin," is as gentle and good as her sire is the opposite. Hipold sets out to meet and rob Bartolome Welser, son of a wealthy Augsburg merchant, who is on the way to his bride-elect laden with jewels. A fight ensues, and the old knight is killed, while Welser—badly wounded—is carried to the fortress and nursed back to health by Bersabe. That the young people lost their hearts to each other is a matter of course, but young Welser is forced to return home to his duty. The stolen jewels are to be kept for Bersabe, so her aunt Dietburg decrees; but the girl will none of them, and takes them back herself to Welser, sen. The elder man now besieges Rabenstein, his son being forced to take part, and the hard-hearted Ursula, Bartolome's affianced bride, looks on at the work of destruction with scoffing laughter. This so enrages the otherwise gentle Bersabe—already not a little jealous of her rival—that she aims an arrow at her so skilfully that Ursula falls dead. Matters now look very serious for the lovers. Welser, sen., is furious with Bersabe, but his wife loves her for saving Bartolome's life, and although condemned to die, Bersabe is snatched from the executioner's grip by her lover. Thus the end is a happy one, the curtain falling on the union of the lovers. The piece was carried along with the verve necessary to it, the renderings of Herren Matkowsky, Staegemann, and Kraussneck, and those of Frau Willig, Fräulein von Mayburg, and Frau Butze, being the best in a very good cast. Herr von Wildenbruch—who was a long time responding to the calls for him—was most warmly applauded after each act.

MR. TREE played Hamlet before a densely-crowded house on Wednesday evening. It proved one of the greatest successes of the famous actor's season, even the most captious of Berlin critics being compelled to acknowledge Mr. Tree's original and convincing impersonation of the Danish Prince. The mounting of the play without scenery was an unprecedented event in German theatrical annals, and was anticipated with much interest. The results proved that it was quite possible to perform Shakespeare without an elaborate apparatus, and not one of the vast audience missed the customary scenery. Many of the scenes provoked enthusiastic applause, and at the close of the play the audience rose en masse to cheer the great English actor. Hamlet's affection for Ophelia came to the critics as a surprise, and not a welcome one. The Germans—as we know—look upon Shakespeare as almost their own property, and any deviation from their own readings of his characters—and these are all very much alike—they consider an infringement of their rights. Consequently, Hamlet's kiss and his display of poignant grief at Ophelia's grave met with scant appreciation from the German contingent. Unanimous praise, on the other hand, is accorded to the Court Theatre Scene, Mr. Tree's acting being pronounced magnificent. The cast was as faultless a one as it has ever been my happy lot to witness. Miss Viola Tree's sympathetic rendering of Ophelia took the audience by storm, and she was recalled a number of times. Mr. Fisher White, Mr. Basil Gill, and Mr. L'Estrange gave particularly fine readings of Polonius, Horatio, and Laertes respectively, while Mr. Henry Neville was excellent as the King. The impersonation of the Ghost by Mr. Lyn Harding was far and away the best we have ever seen here, and Mr. Fred Lewis and Mr. Nigel Playfair were equally good as the First and Second Gravediggers. Miss Alice Crawford looked very handsome as the Queen, and acted the part splendidly, while Miss Hilda Moore gave an admirable account of the Player Queen. Mr. Charles Quartermaine and Mr. Clive Currie, in the rôles of the First and Second Actors, made their mark, and the Rosencrantz and Guildenstern of Messrs. Hine and Beresford were skilfully given. Mr. Robert Atkins and Mr. Alfred Goddard as the Officers, Marcellus and Bernardo, Mr. Imeson (Francisco), Mr. Smithson (Jester), and Mr. Grimwood (Priest) completed the representative cast. The Court box was again full, the Crown Prince and Princess and others of the Imperial Family being present.

HERR BONN'S latest lapse from the path of conventionality—the performance of his play Der junge Fritz before an invited audience—will be dealt with by the rigid hand of the law. It is necessary here to obtain the consent of the Kaiser before any member of the Prussian Royal family may be impersonated on the stage, and this consent was for "young Fritz" (Frederick the Great) withheld many years ago It may be that the director of the Berliner Theatre had forgotten this circumstance, or that he attempted to get the better of the authorities by inviting an audience to see the production of his play; but be that as it may, the consequences are the same. The result will be—at the least—a heavy fine, and Herr Bonn will lose favour at the Imperial Court.

THE "Chamber Plays" of the Deusches Theatre have just concluded Maeterlinck'c tragedy, Aglavaine und Selysette in the repertory. It was an experiment not crowned with success, and neither the play nor its interpretation met with the favour of the audience I do not fancy the piece will see many repetitions.

MME. CHARLES CAHIER, the excellent American singer, has been engaged for a term of three years at the Imperial Opera House, Vienna. In June Mme. Cahier will come to Berlin for four performances at the New Royal Opera (Krolls), under the management of Herr Ferenczy. Carmen and Cavalleria Rusticana are the works in which the welcome guest will be heard.

STAGE STAFF GOSSIP.

THOSE interested in and willing to help in organising the annual theatrical sports are invited to send their names to the honorary secretary, Theatrical Sports Committee, 29, Wellington-street, Strand. The sports, it may be added, will not be given in conjunction with the celebration of Federation Day organised by the variety artists for June 27 in the Crystal Palace.

THE arbitrator sat again on Thursday in the St. Bride Foundation Institute, there being present Mr. Payne, Mr. Rutland, and Mr. Tozer, representing the Entertainment Proprietors' Association, and Mr. William Johnson, representing the National Association of Theatrical Employees, Mr. J. B. William and Mr. C. Jesson representing the Musicians' Union. Mr. Johnson made a statement in reply to the managers' witnesses, and the questions of a period of time for the observance of the award and the length of notice in the event of either party desiring to vary the terms or suspend the award were discussed. The musicians and stage employees submit that no period of time in either case should be inserted in the award. No decision was arrived at, and it was agreed a further conference should take place next week.

RE APPLICATIONS FOR ENGAGEMENTS

All applications by either Artists or their Agents must be made to the Head Office.

Lowest terms must be stated, and distinction made between salaries required for larger and smaller towns.

Vacant dates should be stated. If a list of existing bookings be sent, it will render selection easier.

Artists employing Agents should accredit one only at one time, as the friction arising when several Agents are employed at the same time, all expecting the one booking to go through each of them, often renders it expedient to avoid that booking altogether rather than give undeserved offence to several Agents.

New Acts seeking Engagements, or turns not rebooked (possibly because they have played a series of dates without introducing new business), will facilitate matters by having their acts seen by our District Managers. Their Districts and Postal Addresses are as follows:—

EDINBURGH, GLASGOW, NEWCASTLE, AND DISTRICT.
MR. S. GETHING,
Empire Theatre, Glasgow.

LEEDS, SHEFFIELD, HULL, BRADFORD, AND DISTRICT.
MR. T. GERALD MORTON,

N.B.—Mr. OSWALD STOLL or Mr. FRANK ALLEN can be seen by appointment on all matters arising out of the above, and for the discussion of entirely new Numbers.

All Artists or Agents who communicate with our District Representatives must have made definite applications, in accordance with above directions, to the Head Office, at the same time, or just previously.

THE LARGEST FILM MANUFACTURERS IN THE WORLD.

Pioneers of the 4 D. per foot, nett.

TRADE MARK TRADE MARK

THE LARGEST FILM MANUFACTURERS IN THE WORLD.

CORSICAN'S DAUGHTER. Code Word, CANARD.

A very dramatic story. The Corsican's wife is loved by another. A spy tells the Corsican, who shoots her and her lover, and flies. His young daughter brings him food, and is followed by the soldiers, who attempt to capture him. In a very powerful scene he kills himself. From beginning to end this story claims the attention, and is very exciting.

577ft. The Subject £9 12s. 4d. Colouring extra, 13s.

TRANSFORMATION. Code Word, CALCITE.

One of our triumphs for perfect colouring and dissolving effects. A bust changes into butterflies and flowers. Out of the flowers two real babies—a boy and a girl—materialise. A very exquisite picture.

248ft. The Subject £4 2s. 8d. Colouring extra, £3.

EMULATING FATHER. Code Word, CARPETTE.

The young blood, age about ten years, has his morning's shave. Goes out, catches his train, meets his little girl sweetheart, takes her to a restaurant, smokes, drinks rather too much for him, and is very ill next morning. He finds it better to be just a boy. Very amusing.

528ft. The Subject £8 16s.

PICTURESQUE JAPAN. Code Word, CACAO.

This is a grand picture, showing, amongst other things, gardens, bird life, dwarf trees, river and barge life, pipe-cleaning, fan making, children at school, all forming a most interesting collection of unique pictures.

626ft. The Subject £10 8s. 8d.

REDSKINS AND COWBOYS. Code Word, BURIN.

Another edition of this world-renowned picture, only rather better, with some perfect sunset effects. The Redskin flogged by the white man. Swears revenge. Steals the white man's wife from the old coach. Rescue by the white men through the intelligence of a dog, who takes them a message from the wife. Gorgeous scenery.

545ft. The Subject £9 1s. 8d. Colouring, 12s.

VIEWS OF PARIS. Code Word, CACATOIS.

The boulevards, bridges, picturesque buildings, such as the Opera House, teeming with life. Perfect photography.

PICTURESQUE JAVA. Code Word, CACHOU.

This Far Eastern country depicted with great interest. Harbour towns. Concluding with alligator hunting.

THE TWO SISTERS. Code Word, CHIENDENT.

A pathetic study of the betrayal of one of two good sisters who work as dressmakers. One is forced to become a flower-girl. Rescued by the other, her husband makes love to her also. They both go and return to their old house, there to continue as dressmakers, loving and protecting each other tenderly. Full of real human interest.

740ft. The Subject £12 6s. 8d. Colouring 8s.

ANYTHING TO OBLIGE. Code Word, CALEMBOUR.

A quick-change music hall artist presents to the audience wonderful and rapid changes of costume, and these can be seen at the back of the scene as well. Very droll and amusing.

382ft. The Subject £6 0s. 8d. Colouring extra, £2 12s.

THE KITCHEN MAID. Code Word, CAMONFLET.

A real, live, humorous picture showing a bad-tempered kitchen maid, who insists on breaking all the crockery, and will take no notice of anyone.

ON THE BRINK. Code Word, CALEGON.

Another dramatic study, in which is shown how a young country girl, on the verge of being tempted, is saved by her father in time and brought back to hard work in the fields, &c., where she recovers from her madness. Pathetic and dramatic.

362ft. The Subject £6 0s. 8d.

BYKER DOES THE IMPOSSIBLE. Code Word, CANNIBALE.

This cyclist is really a marvel. He and his machine work as one. Up and down stairs, overcoming every obstacle, and always followed by a crowd of onlookers. Finally he gets mixed up with a small carriage, lets go his own machine, and rides on the wheel of the carriage. Wonderful film.

The Zenith of the Ludicrous.

A Whirling Wheel of Witticism.

Fun and Fancy Ramping Riot.

No. 1,616.

ATTEMPTED HIGHWAY ROBBERY. A STRUGGLE FOR LIFE AND PROPERTY.

A WELL-DESERVED REWARD.—Silas, the tramp, gets the almighty $100 bill overjoyed; not a single sound pocket in which to stow the treasure; tucked in the ragged shirt; an incongruous combination—rags and riches.

HARD TO DISPOSE OF.—Cruelly suspected; the tramp swaggering under the weight of his wealth; a light refreshment; the $100 bill as payment; no go, can't change it; the proprietress's disgust.

THE DANGERS OF WEALTH.—The head of Silas swells; the ragged and overbearing tramp in the best room of the Café d'Or; the serviette as pockethandkerchief; the indignant waiter; the bill; the $100 bill for payment; the manager suspicious; the police called; Silas in custody.

MISTRUST.—Silas at the police court; the $100 bill again; disgust of the superintendent; Silas allowed to go.

A LAST RESOURCE.—Silas, in despair, comes on a fellow bathing in the river, and hurriedly changes from his filthy and deplorable rags into the smart, clean things of the bather; indescribable distress of the bather on finding Silas's unmentionables in the place of his own; too vile to touch.

AN UNFORTUNATE OVERSIGHT.—Silas, in his borrowed togs; luncheon; ready to pay his bill; where's the $100 draft? gone; gone where? why, in the left-off suit; explanations of no use; collared again.

ALL'S WELL THAT ENDS WELL.—The police court again; the bather describing his loss; the $100 bill discovered in the tramp's rags; surprise of all; Silas enters, in charge of the police; excitement, consternation, explanation.

PAUL'S ORIGINALS.

THE BOTHERED BATHERS.

From behind a boat on the bank of a private lake two men prepare for a plunge; they enter the water and swim off. An old lady out for a quiet read catches sight of the bathers' clothes which she promptly appropriates, and places them under her stool, refusing to deliver them up to the surprised swimmers who have to be content with a temporary protection afforded by two empty barrels, which they put over their heads. Noticing their helpless position the old lady whacks them with her umbrella, causing them to collide and be pushed into the water. A lively scene in the water is witnessed, ending by the old lady falling into the lake. Screamingly funny, and quite free from vulgarity.

ROLLICKING FUN AND THRILLING ADVENTURE: THE MOST CERTAIN WINNER OF THE YEAR.

THE SHORT-SIGHTED CYCLIST.

All that could be said of this fascinating subject would fall far short of the realisation of its charm and humour. For novelty of treatment, daring, nerve-thrilling realism, and freedom from anything calculated to offend the most fastidious, no series hitherto published can approach "The Short-Sighted Cyclist." Despatched upon an errand, he loses his spectacles in his first mishap, and the Cyclist's subsequent humorous and alarming adventures form the subject of the series. Misadventure follows misadventure with great frequency, but the Cyclist comes up smiling every time. Fun spontaneous and irresistible.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1907.
"The Era" Annual deservedly ranks high as a record of the passing theatrical show. The new issue, in a comprehensive survey of the drama, mentions in proper order all the productions and revivals of the year, both at home and abroad and gives a list of the theatres and music halls of the United Kingdom, with the names of their respective managers. The lighter side of the publication, to which many well-known managers and performers contribute, is of exceptionally high literary merit.—Morning Leader, Jan. 21, '07.

"YOURS MERRILY."

John R. (Yours Merrily) Rogers came bustling into the town the other day, says the San Francisco Dramatic Review in an amusing article, looking as young, as chipper, as volubly entertaining as a boy just out of college, and as he registered the fact that he hadn't been here in twenty years, he stopped a running fire of comments long enough to say that he was turning over a new leaf and would not be interviewed—and then from the deluge of wit and wisdom, reminiscence and philosophy that came again in a steady flow, we enjoyed one of the most entertaining talk feasts, cuddled up in the big chair, that it has ever been our good fortune to experience. And, afterwards, as we were making up copy for Dramatic Review readers, this is what several pages of spasmodic notes seemed to say: "Feel that," he commanded. The protruding muscle almost rent the sewing of the sleeve. There was a bulging bicep, as hard as nails. John R. Rogers thrust out a leg. "Feel that," he repeated. Again we felt. It was as hard as nails. "Feel that," he said once more. He indicated the place under his waistcoat. It was as hard as nails, too. "Punch it," said John R. Rogers. The punch was meant to be vicious. Hard muscles and not a flinch met the onslaught. A man of sixty-seven had no business to be doing athletic stunts of that sort. It was against all precedent. "That's my abdominalis," he said, proudly, sitting down again. "And I'm all over like that. Hard as nails, healthy as a bull, cheerful as a spring morning, and sixty-seven last birthday. Been seven times around the world, ninety-eight times across the Atlantic, sixteen times across the Pacific, forty-two years in the theatrical business, made and lost three fortunes—and still going strong. Don't hurry, don't worry, don't eat white bread. That's how I've done it. That's my philosophy. And here I am now representing Klaw and Erlanger, well in the race with the youngest and the best of them." Then the silver flow of thought jumped back to his youth, and he touched upon the thing that directed his steps theatreward. "When I was eighteen I was a law student in Cincinnati. I used to make speeches at mock trials. George Dixon, an actor, heard me and told me my voice would make a fortune for me on the stage. I believed him. I went to Barney Macaulay, who had the Woods Theatre, and asked for an engagement. He mistook me for Johnny Rogers, a new comedian, who had made a hit in Buffalo. After he saw me on the stage he told me my place was in the box-office. And in the box-office I've been ever since. Making fortunes for other people and working and losing them for myself. I started the star system. Had Sir Charles (late Charles) Wyndham's first tour in this country. Set McKee Rankin on his feet. Had J. K. Emmett for five years; also Edwin Booth, Lawrence Barrett, Denman Thompson, and Fanny Davenport." The constellations blazed out in myriads. "And Imogen; that great Imogen." He sighed at the splendid memory of Imogen. "There was a stage-struck woman for you! Amy Louise Knowlton, she was. Wife of Woodward, city treasurer of Boston. Somehow, she stole a million from the Treasury. Woodward was accused. Suspected, but could not explain. Shot himself. Mary Anderson I rescued at Providence, R. I., in 1879, when her company was stranded. I coined the title 'Our Mary.' And I gave Mary Anderson to a grateful world. And there was Minnie Palmer—my only sweetheart—and Wilson Barrett; Eugene Sandow, the strong man. Henry Irving was a friend of mine. And J. L. Toole. So many of them gone, and here am I still. Sixty-seven last Saturday and going strong. Feel that bicep." It was still as hard as nails. "Don't hurry, don't worry, and don't eat white bread. That's the secret." And he picked up the silk tile and in a near-by cosy corner, where the masculine needs are catered to, we each took our measure—he with the rule of life, "Don't hurry, don't worry, don't eat white bread," and we, with the sincerest wish in our heart, that long years may yet be in store for "Yours Merrily." The cheerful good nature of his life is what this cold-blooded world can never get enough of. And although, as you have found out, we didn't get our interview (perhaps it was a monologue), still we had a bully good hour and a half.

THE demoralising effects of headache are known to all who live the nervous and strenuous life of the stage. Emerson's Bromo-Seltzer is warranted quickly to cure headaches from whatever cause proceeding, and to give that brightness and vivacity so essential to a successful career. Its influence in nervousness, insomnia, neuralgia, and other disorders is also effective.

ROYAL OPERA, COVENT GARDEN.

Siegfried was performed at Covent Garden on Friday, May 3, before a large audience. Next to Die Walküre this work is extremely popular, and with reason, as the beautiful forest music, the dramatic forging of the famous sword, and the fight with the dragon all combine to render Siegfried interesting. The performance on Friday was of high merit. Herr Kraus admirably sustained the title-rôle, giving a manly and buoyant rendering of the part, and, being in excellent voice, sang with great fervour and expression until the grand closing scene. He was splendidly supported by Mme. Gulbranson, who as Brünnhilde deepened the favourable impression she made in Die Walküre; while Herr Whitehill sang the music of Der Wanderer with complete success. In the weird characters of Mime Herr Bechstein made a great and striking feature by his ability as an actor; and the Alberich of Herr Zador was capitally impersonated. Mme. Kirkby Lunn sang the music of Erda beautifully; and Mme. Agnes Nicholls sang the bird melody in a most artistic manner. Herr Raboth was the dragon, Fafner, but in his great fight proved a somewhat weak opponent, and fell an easy victim to the impetuous Siegfried in spite of his fearsome aspect.

The scenic effects were as admirably managed as on other nights this season, and the orchestra, under Dr. Richter, played the difficult music in the most perfect manner. Owing to the need of more rehearsals for The Merry Wives of Windsor, Bastien und Bastienne, followed by Hansel und Gretel, was performed for the second time on Saturday, May 4, with the same cast as that on the first night, the performance being honoured by the presence of His Majesty the King and Her Royal Highness Princess Christian of Schleswig-Holstein, Princess Victoria of Schleswig-Holstein, the Duchess of Connaught, and Princess Patricia of Connaught.

The first cycle of the Ring ended on Monday night with a really fine performance of Die Götterdämmerung, in many respects the most striking section of this great music-drama. On Monday the performance began at half-past four in the afternoon, a somewhat trying time for opera-goers, and the first act lasted close upon two hours; and, after an interval of an hour and a half, the second act began. There was also a long wait between the two last acts. This, no doubt, was unavoidable, as the opera was given without cuts, and included the scene of the Norns and that between Brünnhilde and Waltraute. The performance of this great work on Monday was in many respects even finer than that given last season. Herr Kraus again repeated his fine embodiment of Siegfried; and Mme. Gulbranson imparted great dramatic intensity to the trying part of Brünnhilde; while Mme. Kirkby Lunn as Waltraute, Mme. Agnes Nicholls as Woglinde, and Mme. Knupfer-Egli in the part of Gutrune were entirely successful. The somewhat unthankful part of Gunther was skilfully undertaken by Herr Stockhausen; and Herr Zador again made a capital Alberich. Herr Raboth appeared as Hagen; and Fräulein Fiebiger and Frau Tolli represented Wellgunde and Flosshilde. The scenery was managed to perfection, and the fine orchestra under Dr. Richter most ably rendered the complicated score.

Nicolai's opera Die Lustigen Weiber von Windsor was given at Covent Garden on Tuesday night, and formed a strong contrast to the storm and stress of the Ring. Nicolai's lively work was provided with new scenery, painted by Mr. Harry Brooke, and new costumes by Signor A. Comelli; in fact, every care had been taken to render the revival a success. The opera was sung in German by the German vocalists who have lately been singing with such success in the Ring performances. Herr Knüpfer appeared as the jovial knight Sir John Falstaff, and sang the drinking song in the second act with great spirit, while his acting throughout was consistent and quite in keeping with the part, although no doubt an English artist would have imparted more fun to the scene where Sir John hides in the basket. Herr Knüpfer's make-up was excellent, and he looked the portly knight to perfection. Fräulein Hempel sang the florid music of Mrs. Ford brilliantly, and the lively finale in the second scene of the first act went admirably. Frau Tolli acted with no little skill the part of Mrs. Page; and Fräulein Fiebiger sang the music of Anne Page charmingly, particularly in the melodious duet with Fenton in the second act. Herr Jörn as Fenton also sang with great intelligence and expression; and that clever, versatile artist Herr Bechstein made all that was possible out of the little part of Slender. Herr Zador gave quite the right contrast by his serious acting of Ford; and Herr Stockhausen made Dr. Caius quaint and amusing. The costumes were picturesque and evidently in keeping with the period, and the pretty scene of the first act, a street in Windsor with the Castle in the background, did Mr. Brooke great credit. The Garter Inn as well as the Garden at Ford's house were very effective. The music of Nicolai is delicate and expressive; and Mr. Percy Pitt, who conducted, gave a spirited rendering of the bright, sparkling overture.

The second cycle of Der Ring des Nibelungen commenced on Wednesday night with a fine performance of Das Rheingold. Herr Van Rooy appeared for the first time this season, and in the part of Wotan sang with his accustomed power and dramatic expression, and by his dignified bearing added greatly to the success of the representation. The rest of the cast was the same as on the opening night of the season, Herr Zador again showing his great ability as an actor in the character of Alberich, while Herr Bechstein made Mime as weird and striking as possible. Madame Kirkby Lunn and Madame Edna Thornton both sang delightfully, and the stage effects and steam curtain were worked admirably. The orchestra under Dr. Richter was perfect, giving the utmost importance to the leading themes, and never throughout the performance overpowering the vocalists. A large audience were present.

THE Great Eastern Company announce cheap excursion bookings on Friday, May 17, from Liverpool Street and Great-Eastern suburban stations to North-Eastern stations and Scotland; and on Saturday, May 18, to the principal towns in the Eastern Counties, Lincolnshire, Yorkshire, and Lancashire. A special booking office will be opened at the Liverpool Street Station from May 13 to 18 for the issue of tourist, fortnightly, Friday to Wednesday, and other tickets to the seaside and the "Broads" district; also for cheap Saturday to Monday or Tuesday tickets between any two Great Eastern stations, with a few exceptions, for use on forward dates.

AMONGST the long list of entertainments being prepared for Whit Monday at the Crystal Palace one of the most welcome will be the military concert by massed bands and the great organ. In the programme will be included Tschaikowsky's Grand Overture, "1812," which will be given with drums, side-drums, organ, and full effects. Two variety shows will be given on Whit Monday and during the week, and will include the famous Bob Hanlon Troupe, the Brothers Phillippi, the Brothers Webb, Marjutti, and Lavater Lee. There will be balloon ascents, and the children's Forty Thieves company pantomime from Drury Lane, and, in addition to the enormous number of other shows both indoors and out of doors, there will at night be a grand display of Brock's fireworks.

"BABY AND I."

Here is a practical answer by Miss Ellaline Terriss (Mrs. Seymour Hicks), who refutes the still popular idea that children's temporary teeth may be left more or less uncared for as they have to be shed. From the time her baby cut its first tooth she began to use Odol in the water with which the little one's mouth was washed, and now the sweet little teeth are cleaned consequently twice a day with Odol.

Thus Miss Terriss sets a good example. Take it to heart mothers and nurses.

To prevent decay of the teeth the daily cleansing of the whole mouth with Odol is indispensable. Odol arrests absolutely the development of the germs that produce decay. It is the first and only preparation for cleansing the mouth and teeth which exercises its antiseptic and refreshing powers not only during the few moments of application, but continuously for some hours afterwards.

Mind that rinsing the mouth daily and regularly with Odol is more important than the daily washing of the face and hands.

That Miss Terriss herself attributes the beauty of her teeth to Odol the following words testify:

"As a sunny smile beautifies a countenance,
"so do shining teeth beautify a mouth. We "cannot all have perfect teeth, but we can
"all have a perfect mouth wash, and that
*"everyone has who uses Odol. It is delight-

On Thursday Mr. Harry Ward's No. 1 Company appeared in No Wedding Ring.

YORK.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessees, Messrs. Waddington, Acting-Manager, Mr. H. J. Dacre.—The Manxman is a strong attraction this week, Pete being admirably played by Mr. A. B. LONDON & SUBURBAN THEATRES.

KING'S THEATRE, HAMMERSMITH.

On Monday, May 6, the Play, entitled
"THE GIRL WHO TOOK THE WRONG TURNING."

A drama by Mr. Walter Melville forms an interesting interlude in the season's fare provided at the King's. On Monday night the theatre was crowded, particularly in what are called the popular parts, and the occupants by their attitude showed how keenly they appreciated both the pathos and humour contained in the "play of the people we meet every day." The piece is excellently cast, and fully upholds the Melville policy. Mr. Roy Redgrave, as Willie Mason, is about as real a British sailor as one can imagine. His performance has all that breeziness and vigour one usually associates with the Navy, and the house readily appreciated Mr. Redgrave's acting. Another clever impersonation which meets with approbation is that of Mr. Sydney Sarl as Bill Slater, the man with a past but a reformed present. Mr. Frank Robertson acts excellently as Jack Fenton; and Mr. Kenneth Black is a successful Richard Fenton. Screams of laughter greet Mr. Willie Reid's efforts as Johnny Walker, particularly in a scene where he is set to undress and bathe an infant. Mr. Walter Thornton scores as the undiscovered criminal, James Harcourt, whose schemes and plots meet with ultimate failure to the delight of the audience. As Sophie Coventry, whose conduct gives the title of the play, Miss Frances Ruttledge meets with conspicuous success; and Miss Hilda Baynton as Lucy Fenton acts with delicately expressed sincerity and earnestness. Miss Nannie Mead as Vesta Le Clere, the evil genius of the play, is excellent. She fairly revels in her villainous and infamous career, but all the time Miss Mead earns the goodwill of the audience by the force of her acting. The freshness and humour of Miss Marie Kildare's characterisation of Poppy Slater, afterwards Poppy Fitzgerald, the music hall star, are delightful, and she lends valuable support to the drama. The smaller parts are in capable hands, and the scenery is good.

THE MARLBOROUGH.

On Monday, May 6, the Play, in Four Acts,
"RAFFLES."

This week suburban London is being introduced for the first time to Raffles, "the Amateur Cracksman," a work of much literary and artistic merit, which is admirably presented by Mr. Leonard Boyne and company. The production is lavishly mounted and staged, and reflects great credit upon Mr. Stage-Manager Arthur Fitzgerald. Capital houses have been the rule throughout the week. Mr. Leonard Boyne as A. J. Raffles brings all the necessary comedy, pathos, and power to the character, his ripe experience enabling him to add delicate touches of business which in less skilful hands would be wanting. Miss Jane Savile as Gwendoline Conran plays throughout with judgment; and Miss Jean Morrison skilfully handles the part of Lady Ethel. Mr. E. W. Thomas is to be congratulated on his assumption of the intricate rôle of Curtis Bedford, the ex-detective. Much credit can be accorded Mr. Arthur Willoughby for his performance of the Earl of Amersteth; and Mr. Edmund Breon creates considerable amusement in the rôle of Viscount Crowley. Miss Elaine Inescourt exhibits much skill and emotional power in her delineation of Mrs. Vidal; Mr. Lewis Edgard is seen to advantage as Harry Manders; and Mr. Dalziel Heron scores an unqualified success as Crawshay. Miss Alys Rees assumes the part of Lady Melrose in a pleasing manner; and Miss Jean Harkness is admirably cast as Marie. Goldby, Morton, and Barraclough are ably impersonated by Messrs. Charles Kean, W. Henty, and A. Fitzgerald. Raffles is preceded by a capital curtain-raiser, A Lesson in Shakespeare, by Mr. Eric Lewis, the parts being ably undertaken by Miss Jane Savile, Dalziel Heron, and Edmund Breon. Mr. J. Murray Horiott looks after the front of the house, and shows in an unmistakable way that his genial manner, together with the discretion which he has displayed in the management of this house, has won for him a host of friends.

THE CAMDEN.

On Monday, May 6, the Play, entitled
"THE MORALS OF MARCUS."

Mr. Arthur Bourchier's company is here this week, presenting Mr. W. J. Locke's clever play, The Morals of Marcus, which is meeting with a very cordial reception from good audiences. The company, which is under the direction of Mr. M. V. Leveaux, is a very well chosen one, and at the head of it is Mr. H. Nye Chart, who fills the rôle of Sir Marcus, which he plays in a finished and thoughtful manner, presenting an admirable study of the philosopher who finds himself suddenly called on to deal with a phase of life which is entirely foreign to him. Miss Hilda Antony, a clever young actress, plays the difficult character of Carlotta in a praiseworthy manner. Miss Antony acts in a fresh and winning way, and makes a great success in the part. Mrs. Nye Chart impersonates Mrs. Mainwaring with much force and ability, and acts throughout with skill. It is an arduous part, and requires very delicate handling; but Mrs. Nye Chart is quite equal to her task. Mr. David Domville is particularly good as Sebastian Pasquale, the evil spirit, as it were, of the story, and he infuses a considerable amount of humour into his acting, which is very acceptable. Miss Mary Weigall makes a very dignified Mrs. Ordeyne; and Dora Ordeyne is charmingly played by Miss Gladys Purnell. Antoinette, the French housekeeper, is capitally portrayed by Miss Eleanor Gilbart; and Mr. Cecil Brooking is to be commended for his neat sketch of the butler, Stenson. Mr. A. H. Leveaux, who is responsible for the excellent stage-management, appears as Hamdi Effendi; and Mr. W. G. Swinburne is good as Bobby Tremlett. Miss C. Radcliffe is seen to advantage as Mrs. McMurray; and Miss Mary O'Neill is successful as Lady Elmira Wynn. Miss E. Summers as Miss Lestrange, and Miss Hilda Saxe as the maid, complete the cast. The play is splendidly mounted, and the dresses are tasteful and pretty. Mr. Henry Howard is the acting-manager for the company; and Mr. Wilfred Stanford is Mr. Robert Arthur's manager for the theatre.

THE CORONET.

On Monday, May 6, Nicolai's Opera,
"THE MERRY WIVES OF WINDSOR."

The Moody-Manners Opera company are charming habitués of the Coronet in a selection of grand operas in English during a fortnight's season. Nicolai's charming opera, The Merry Wives of Windsor, which was produced in Berlin in 1849, was performed at Her Majesty's Theatre in 1864 with such artists as Giuglini (Fenton), Santley (Ford), and Titiens (Mrs. Ford) in the cast. The English version, which embraces all the best-known dramatic and comic incidents of the piece, is by Percy Pinkerton. The three particular vocal gems of the opera are the duet between Mistress Ford and Mistress Page, "Dotard, now in cunning fashion," admirably sung by Miss Kate Anderson and Mlle. de Lussan; "The Drinking Song," effectively rendered by Mr. Charles Manners as Falstaff; and the sweetly pretty trio, "Darling, I adore you," in which all three join forces. Fenton's serenade, "Hear the bird on yonder bough," is capitally rendered by Mr. John Child. The ballet music in the last scene by Herne's Oak, in Windsor Forest, at midnight, is delightfully melodious and tuneful. This scene is excellently staged. Mlle. Zelie de Lussan as Mistress Page and Miss Kate Anderson as Mistress Ford divide the honours of the performance, and, quite apart from their exquisite vocalisation, act in the true spirit of comedy. These merry wives bubble over with innocent fun and frolicsome good humour, and together they give a charming and delightful exposition of character. Miss Burns is a very graceful and vivacious Sweet Anne Page, and avails herself of all her chances. Mr. Charles Manners as the ponderous, bibulous, and amorous knight, Sir John Falstaff, acts with a fine sense of proportion and a rich, unctuous humour, and his singing is quite unexceptionable. Many quaint little extravagances he introduces into the part, and his fat woman of Brentford set the house in a roar. Mr. Charles Magrath is in fine voice as Mr. Page; and Mr. Lewys James gives a realistic asumption of furious, unreasoning jealousy as Mr. Ford. Mr. John Child sings exquisitely as Master Fenton; and Mr. Bailey and Mr. Moppett cut very droll figures as Master Slender and Dr. Caius. The chorus is well drilled, and much credit is due to Mr. T. C. Fairbairn as stage-manager. This week's programme also includes Tannhäuser on Tuesday, Faust on Wednesday, Il Trovatore on Thursday, Cavalleria Rusticana on Friday, Lohengrin at to-day's matinée, and Carmen this evening.

CRYSTAL PALACE THEATRE.

On Monday, May 6, Wagner's
"LOHENGRIN."

No doubt should exist as to the popularity of high-class music in London when one finds such a large and enthusiastic audience as that assembled to enjoy the performance of the Moody-Manners Opera company at the Crystal Palace on Monday, when there was scarcely a vacant seat anywhere. Prior to the overture, Mr. Harrison Frewin appeared before the curtain and indulged in an explanatory chat with the audience on the argument and inner meaning of the play, which made the plot quite clear, and added considerably to the pleasure of those not already familiar with Wagner's opera. The overture was perfectly rendered by a largely augmented orchestra, the Introduction to the first act being finely executed, and throughout full justice was done to the exacting music. Mr. Charles Carter as the Knight of the Swan was fully equal to all the demands made upon him, and should have been well satisfied with the reception accorded to his singing and acting. His appearance and bearing were also much in his favour. As the Herald Mr. Marshall's fine voice was greatly admired in the declamatory passages; and Mr. George Neilson's clear rendering of the King's part was excellent. Frederick of Telremund, the villain of the piece, was finely acted by Mr. Frederic Erle, who is possessed of a powerful and sympathetic baritone. Miss Enriquita Crichton, as the persecuted Elsa of Brabant, gave a sympathetic interpretation, and her more important solos were heartily applauded; Miss Marion Broom gave a spirited touch to the part of the wicked Ortrud. There was an exceptionally large number of Nobles and Ladies, to whom much praise is due for their interpretation of the choruses, to which so much of the continuity of the play attaches. The company is giving a different opera each night, Mr. Charles Manners being announced to appear on Friday as Mephistopheles in Faust.

KENNINGTON THEATRE.

On Monday, May 6, the Play entitled
"SPORTING LIFE."

Mr. R. A. Beaton's company is a combination as strong in talent as it is in numbers. The various artists enter with zest into their respective parts, with the result that full advantage is taken of the many powerful situations which the drama contains. Ample scope is afforded in Sporting Life for striking stage effects, and these are readily forthcoming. The race for the Derby in the last scene, in which genuine racers dash across the boards, arouses the enthusiasm of the onlookers to a high pitch. Mr. Henry Doughty scores a big triumph as the Earl of Woodstock, making a fine manly hero. That gifted actress Miss Hilda Beverley has a difficult rôle to enact as Olive de Carteret, the adventuress, but she performs it with infinite skill and cleverness. She is especially fine in the death scene. Another great scene is the reconciliation between Miles Cavanagh, the trainer (Mr. H. H. Barrington), and his erring daughter Kitty (Miss Nellie Lucas), which is powerfully played. Mr. H. J. Barrett makes a very good General Molyneaux, delineating the peppery old soldier to the life. As Malet de Carteret, the somewhat unorthodox type of villain, Mr. Raymond Dudley does unusually well. It is by no means an easy character, but Mr. Dudley sustains it with great ability. Mr. H. C. Cooper deserves a full meed of praise for his interpretation of the rôle of Andread, the money-lender; and Miss Ida Phillips proves herself an accomplished actress as Norah Cavanagh. Comic relief is amply provided by Mr. Bert Morley as Sergt. Doxey, and Miss May Marcus and Miss Veronica Brady deserve mention as Jessie and Clara. Mr. Edward Chester gives a forceful representation of the part of Joe Lee, a young pugilist, and the other characters are all well sustained.

BRIXTON THEATRE.

On Monday, May 6, the Drama entitled
"THE NEW MAGDALEN."

The New Magdalen, one of Wilkie Collins's chefs d'œuvres, has been secured by Mr. R. W. Allum to fill the programme here this week. Mr. Edward Sorley has engaged a strong company in this very interesting and highly-dramatic play, which has a great hold on the audience from beginning to end. Mr. W. S. Hartford gives a clever rendering of the really delightful clergyman Julian Grey; he fully realises the humorous side of the character, at the same time investing the part with a strong sympathetic interest. Miss Yvonne Orchardson as Mercy Merrick plays cleverly, and acquits herself with distinct success. The part is one which calls for highly emotional acting, and Miss Orchardson throughout claims the utmost interest and sympathy of the audience. Mr. Stanley Logan as Horace Holmcroft plays effectively in a trying rôle; he ably depicts the rage and grief necessary in the later scenes of the play. Miss Bartle Frere is stately and motherly as Lady Janet Roy. Miss Rachel Donne as the wronged Grace Roseberry is sufficiently vindictive and unforgiving; Miss Donne's clear enunciation is a distinct advantage in a part of many long lines. Mr. W. T. Lloyd is a satisfactory Ignatius Wetzel, the German army surgeon. Mr. Lawrence Ardale is effective as Captain Arnarlt. Other characters are ably sustained by Messrs. Frank Harper and James Black as servants, Mr. Frank Storey as Surgeon Saville, and Mr. Arthur Terris in a somewhat eccentric make-up as a detective. The preceding farce, Rats, by W. A. Mackesy, is well acted by Miss Bartle Frere as a nervous Mrs. Birdlove and Mr. Ivan Gore as Jim, a humorous rat-catcher. Mr. Ivan Gore is business-manager for Mr. Edward Sorley. The orchestra, under the direction of Mr. George Carter, enliven the intervals with some capital selections.

THE CROWN, PECKHAM.

On Monday, May 6, the Drama, entitled
"DRIVEN FROM HOME."

This week, after a succession of novelties, the management falls back upon the old dramatic favourite, Driven From Home, and the wisdom of their choice has been shown by excellent audiences. The members of Mr. Andrew Melville's company acquit themselves most creditably. Mr. Fred A. Marston gives a capital rendering of the hard-hearted Anthony Raybrook; Mr. Francis Everard is a good representative of the ill-fated Walter Hatherleigh; Miss Rose Ralph acts with grace and feeling as the unhappy Laura; Mr. Percy Dawsone is impressive as the poor outcast, Willie; Mr. Harry Cornwall ably impersonates the faithful Jabez Thomas; Mr. Arnold Winters is responsible for merriment as the bibulous Tom Mortlake; and Miss Bella Power does well as Barbara Ashdown. Mr. G. M. Montanini makes a malignant Geoffrey Waring; and Mr. Edward Finlay supplies a good character-study of Dick Sanders. Miss Amy Corelli is a lively Margaret Bailey, and Miss Effie Dane a sympathetic Walter Hatherleigh. The scenery is most appropriate, and the episode of the rescue from death of young Hatherleigh in the saw-mills is realistically managed. Mr. Francis Everard is acting-manager, and Mr. Fred C. Himbert stage-manager for the company.

DALSTON THEATRE.

On Monday, May 6, the Domestic Drama, entitled
"A WOMAN'S PAST."

Messrs. A. Hamilton Warden and Charles V. Sandford's company is appearing this week at the Dalston Theatre in the domestic drama A Woman's Past. The piece is well staged, and can claim to grip the attention of the audience from start to finish. The acting all round is good. Mr. Horace E. Herbert, as David Heath, demonstrates what keen interest can be imparted to a character-study; and the same can certainly be said in regard to Mr. Charles V. Sandford as Frank Dellannoy; Mr. A. Hamilton Warden is another decided success as Clement Harper; Mr. G. Moreton-Williams' Uriah Craven is also an interesting piece of work; and others in the male cast include Mr. Philip Nailor, Mr. Frank Hayling, Mr. Wilson Munroe, and Mr. Cecil Dainton. Miss Maisie Hanbury, as Bessie, enlists sympathy from all parts of the house. Miss Hanbury's acting is worthy of all praise. Miss Eva Bertram as Clara Darrel, Miss Mary Mallalieu as Dorothy Heath, and Miss Phyllis Moncton as Kate are all well placed.

THE STANDARD.

On Monday, May 6, the Drama, entitled
"HER LOVE AGAINST THE WORLD."

Mr. Walter Howard's plays have gained such wide popularity that it is not surprising that his latest success from the Lyceum Theatre should have been responsible for full houses at the Standard during this week. Her Love Against the World is a piece full of absorbing interest, crowded with incidents of an exciting nature, and crowned with a pathetic and heart-touching story. The presentation of the piece is safely entrusted to the capable body of players employed, and the scenery and minor effects have all been chosen to give the best result. Foremost in the cast is the author himself, who plays throughout with much sincerity and power. His embodiment of Eric, Earl of Strathmere, is a carefully-balanced one, and he is to be congratulated on his really excellent performance. Nello, the Earl's brother, is carefully and cleverly portrayed by Miss Rossie St. John, who has thoroughly grasped the full meaning of her lines. Mr. Mayor-Cooke plays with considerable force as Ulric, Prince of Ravensberg. He gives due prominence to the selfish and cowardly nature of the man, and at the same time imparts to the character all the brutality and heartlessness that is necessary. A capital rendering of Prince Othmar is supplied by Mr. W. H. Hallatt, whose excellent reading of the rôle is fully convincing, while he speaks his lines clearly and well. As Prince Maurice of Saxonia, Mr. Alec Alexander plays with manliness and vigour; and as the fiery, war-loving General Gessler, Mr. Richard Webb is perfect. Sergeant Kasper is suitably portrayed by Mr. Arthur J. Moss; and the lighter scenes are well attended to by Mr. Henry B. Lewis and Mr. Herbert Passmore, as Henrick and Fritz respectively. Miss Blanche Steele does all that is possible as Shulah; and Miss Julie De Esco thoroughly performs her duties as Corona. As Katinka and Gretchen, Miss Lizzie Lennon and Miss Hettie Ferguson are well placed. Miss Ellen Snow supplies a truly pathetic portrayal of Iris, Princess of Idala. Her performance is full of feeling, and she thoroughly deserves the appreciation accorded. The minor parts are adequately filled by other members of the company. Mr. H. A. Chappell, Messrs. Melville's energetic and courteous acting-manager, is happily once more at his post, after a long and severe illness, and we trust he will quickly recover his full health and strength.

THE SHAKESPEARE.

On Monday, May 6, the Pantomimical Comedy, entitled
"THE SWISS EXPRESS."

The visit of this popular musical pantomimical comedy is meeting with its usual success at the Shakespeare Theatre this week, and at each performance the house has been well filled. With Messrs. Charles and Fred Renad, supported by an excellent company doing full justice to the comicalities, the whole performance is one carnival of laughter. Messrs. C. and F. Renad, in the rôles of Dr. Gull's eccentric servants, are a host in themselves, and their clever fooling and knock-about business keeps the fun going fast and furious. Mr. Wilfred E. Brandon, in the part of Dr. Gull, proves himself a comedian of no mean order, and scores a decided success with his droll antics and witty remarks. Mr. Alex Wylie gives a humorous picture of Dudley Green, a dude of the first water, and Mr. Basil Reynolds as Bob Rollingstone puts in some excellent work. In their respective parts Mr. Harry H. Vernon as Rhino and Mr. Harwood Cooper as Jack Gadabout render good support; and mention should also be made of Mr. Charles Gray as Mr. Septimus Squeeze and Mr. Cecil Barrett as the Gendarme. Miss Celestine Brandon as Virginia is a charming and sprightly bride, sings and acts with vivacity, and contributes greatly to the enjoyment of the piece. Miss Blanche Vernon, in the part of Mrs. Septimus Squeeze, creates a favourable impression. Miss Lottie Stone's Palace Quartette of vocalists and dancers are deserving of special mention for their clever dancing. The orchestra, under the direction of Mr. H. E. J. Nation, renders valuable assistance, and the stage management is well looked after by Mr. Harry H. Vernon. Mr. E. De Hague Body is the acting-manager for Mr. H. G. Dudley Bennett.

THE PRINCE'S, POPLAR.

On Monday, May 6, the Play, by Arthur Shirley and Sutton Vane, entitled
"THE SPIDER AND THE FLY."

A full house on Monday night gave a hearty reception to Messrs. Carpenter and Cooper's company, who presented Messrs. Arthur Shirley and Sutton Vane's drama, The Spider and the Fly. Since its production on Aug. 6 last at Kennington this piece has achieved a continuous success, which is not in any way surprising, considering that it is a well-written play full of vitality and dramatic freshness, with a well thought out story which develops with remarkable straightforwardness. The patrons of the Prince's keenly relished the situations, which they followed with direct attention, while the play is performed with a vigour and verve that reflects high credit upon the whole of the company. Mr. Benson North is to be complimented for his natural and realistic delineation of the hero, Cyril Girdlestone, and a powerful impersonation of the unscrupulous Welby Girdlestone is given by Mr. Ellis J. Preston; while a capable portrayal of the pastor, the Rev. Mr. McAllister is seen in Mr. H. C. Lanceley. Miss Amy Venimore commands attention, and gives a consistent rendering of the treacherous and vindictive Stella Grey, known as the Spider, and Miss Nina Vaughton presents a conception of Edith McAllister, which is marked with care and consistency and gains the full sympathy of the house. Miss Lucy Murray makes a charming and ingenuous Molly Blake, and a neat character-sketch of the lodging-house keeper, Jane Ellen Scriver, is found in Miss Ada Palmer. Miss Winifred Barton is exceptionally good as the mudlark Flips, and the two fisher girls, Polly and Abigal, are competently enacted by Miss Kate Parker and Miss Nellie Burgess. Mr. Arthur H. Hill invests David Strong with the necessary breeziness, and Mr. Charles Russell is amusing as the eccentric Romulus Roe, being ably supported by Mr. Charles A. Preece as Remus Roe. Mr. G. H. Thomas scores as Sergeant Blatchet, and Mr. Robert Castle is efficient as Jack Naylor. The play is exceptionally well-staged and mounted, the final scene calling for special mention.

THE PAVILION.

On Monday, May 6, the Drama, in Four Acts, by Jacob Gordin, entitled
"THE WILD MAN."

Unabated interest is still being shown by the Yiddish patrons of the Pavilion, who throng the theatre at all performances in large numbers, thus testifying their appreciation of the good fare provided. On Monday night the stage-manager, Mr. Joseph Fineberg, was accorded a benefit, and on this occasion Mr. Jacob Gordin's drama, The Wild Man, was played by the Jewish Operatic and Dramatic Company. The piece affords many opportunities for strong, virile acting, and was given with that all-round completeness which has characterised every production this company has presented. Mr. Charles Natansohn, who had evidently well studied the part, is incisive and telling as Lemech, rising to great intensity in the final scene; while the villainous Schmuel Leiblich is depicted by Mr. J. Fineberg with a graphic strength that holds the house. Mme. Natansohn, with her well-known dramatic abilities, makes the very trying and arduous rôle of Lizah stand out with much distinctness; and as the second wife, Zelde, Miss R. Bryh is exceedingly praiseworthy. Mr. M. Gusofsky is a clever exponent of Simon, rendering his lines with refreshing vigour, while the not over strong comedy element is made the most of by Mr. J. Scherman, who portrays Alexander in his usual finished style. Mme. Goldstein sustained Schifre with commendable effect, and Mr. Fischman was natural as Vladimir Vorobeichick. The scenery and effects were in the best possible taste. Performances have been given during the week of Deborah, The Jewish Hamlet, The Jewish Zaza, and Holy Sabbath.

GRAND, FULHAM.

On Monday, May 6, H. J. Byron's Comedy,
"OUR BOYS."

Is Our Boys to become immortal? It would seem so from the reception given to H. J. Byron's comedy this week at the Fulham Theatre. Mr. Russell Rosse, who has got together a good company, takes the leading rôle of Sir Geoffrey Champneys, giving a good representation of the stiff-necked old aristocrat. Mr. Norman Clark plays capitally as Perkyn Middlewick, and makes the most of the rich humour of the butterman, being an excellent foil to Sir Geoffrey. Mr. J. Edward Fraser does well as Charlie Middlewick, playing the part with all the necessary youthful vigour; Mr. George Mudie, jun., must be voted a success as Talbot Champneys, getting plenty of fun out of the part. Miss Rachel de Travis is an amusing Clarissa Champneys, and Miss E. Nolan O'Connor a properly dignified and stately Violet Melrose; Miss Edith Hesketh as Belinda gives a good study of the lodging-house "slavey"; and Miss L. Kingston must be given warm praise for her work as Mary Melrose. Her acting is full of life and spirit. Our Boys is preceded by Theyre Smith's A Happy Pair, which afforded amusement, the parts of the newly-married couple being capitally played by Mr. George Mudie and Miss L. Kingston.

THE LYRIC, HAMMERSMITH.

On Monday, May 6, the Drama, entitled
"THE LOVE THAT WOMEN DESIRE."

A crowded house on Monday night witnessed this interesting play, and the audience followed with keen interest the evolution of the plot. Mr. Carlton Wallace has got a most capable company together. Mr. H. Bonhote Wilson has an excellent part in Philip Carnaby, the hero, and he acquits himself admirably in it. Philip's sweetheart, Sybil Thorburn, is prettily played by Miss Lalla Stanhope. Mr. J. O. Stewart is a good Squire Abingdon, the unscrupulous guardian of Sybil, and his villainous son, Richard Abingdon, is well portrayed by Mr. Alfred Brandon. Mr. Graham Winsford makes Frank Hardy a most interesting character; Miss Gladys Murray plays Madge Abingdon with good effect; Dennis O'Rourke is capably portrayed by Mr. John Hignett, who keeps the audience thoroughly amused in his comic scenes, and he is just as good in Act 3 when for a while he has to be serious. As P.C. Sowerburry, Mr. J. W. Wilkinson is excellent, and is the cause of much merriment; Miss Emmie Litchfield is a smart Pattie Swift; Miss N. Griffiths is clever as Mariquinha, an Indian maid; and other parts are well filled by Mr. Hugh Wallace as the Rev. Arnold Cathorne, Mr. Charles Franklin as Adam Frere, Mr. B. Morris as Amos Gibson (the squire's bailiff), Mr. Oliver Turnbull as Sammy Hogg, and Mr. James Heath, Mr. Bert Butler, Mr. S. Bale, and Mr. Stephen Willis (an Indian brave). The play is well mounted, the Brazilian scenes in Act 3 being particularly effective.

THE TERRISS.

On Monday, May 6, the Drama,
by Fred S. Jennings, entitled
"WHY WOMAN SINS."

Mr. Ashley Page brings all his well-known ability to bear with the most successful results upon the character of the hero, Lieut. Harry Maxwell, R.N., in Why Woman Sins. Miss Marion Denvil plays with distinction and true womanly feeling as Nell Desmond; Mr. J. C. Aubrey well illustrates the villainy of Captain Herbert Carlson. Mr. Johnny Chippendale gets many a laugh as Sam Spavins, and Mr. Gerald Morgan helps the fun materially as Bobby Beans. Miss East Robertson supplies a powerful impersonation of the adventuress, Ida Valetta; and Miss Mollie Percival is a pert and prepossessing Nancy Nibble. Miss Mattie Everett gives an excellent interpretation of the music hall star, Lily De Vere; Mr. John Sargent is forcible and realistic as the ne'er-do-well, Jim Rainbird; Mr. Tom Taylor, the able stage-manager at this theatre, is a dignified Admiral Headfast; and Mr. Weldon Atherstone does all that is possible with the rôle of Major Algy Belton. Mr. David Noble is good as Cecil Spencer; while Miss Elsie Jezzard makes a pathetic sketch as Jack Smith, the cabin boy. The scenery and effects are quite adequate. On Friday last week and at a matinée on Saturday a special performance was given of The Merchant of Venice, with Mr. Ashley Page as Shylock and Miss Marion Denvil as Portia, the production being very favourably received.

THE WEST LONDON.

On Monday, May 6, the Drama, in Four Acts, by Walter Howard, entitled
"MAN AND WIFE."

A capital representation of the absorbing play Man and Wife is being given this week in Marylebone by the talented members of Mr. T. Edward Ward's carefully-selected company. As Paul Revere Mr. John F. Traynor puts in some highly-effective work, his earnest methods and robust activity being peculiarly suitable to the part; Mr. Ambrose Horton decisively portrays Sergeant Jacques; Mr. Edward Van Biene is alertness itself as Colonel Latour; and Mr. Wilson Coleman plays with such deliberate brutality and harshness as Captain D'Esparre that the indignation of the West Londoners is deeply stirred. As Bimbo and Bambo Mr. Sydney Bryant and Mr. Val Gully are agile and versatile, their comicalities being much appreciated. The important rôle of the crippled boy, Jean, is sustained by Miss Ethel F. Greene with much emotional force, her performance being a thoroughly sound one; Miss Pollie Denville is a bright and cheery Rosette; Miss Kate Hallam as the long-suffering Marcelle brings tears to many eyes. The minor characters are all carefully played, and the interest in the piece is well maintained throughout.

ACTORS' ASSOCIATION.

An extraordinary general meeting of the members of the Actors' Association was held on Monday afternoon, at the Passmore Edwards' Settlement, Tavistock-place, W.C., for the purpose of considering, and, if thought fit, of passing, certain resolutions affecting the constitution of the Association. Gideon Warren, Mr. Ben Webster, Mr. M. Davies Webster, Mr. Stephen Wentworth, Mr. Arthur Whitby, Miss May Whitty, Mr. Frank Withers, Mr. Arthur Wontner, and Mr. Charles Cruikshanks (secretary).

Fully 800 members of the Association did not take part in the voting, either personally or by proxy, but others had sent in their proxies or had appointed Mr. Charles Cruikshanks, the secretary, to vote on their behalf.

After the Secretary had read the notice convening the meeting,

Mr. Cecil Raleigh said that the Council had issued an inaccurate document, and that, as this document was therefore invalid, he begged to propose that the proxies also be considered invalid. He begged to challenge those proxies on the ground that they were illegal and unjust.

It transpired that the inaccuracy to which Mr. Raleigh referred concerned a paragraph on the question paper as follows:—

"Do you agree that in future the President and Vice-Presidents be elected for life by the Council, but that they shall be members of Council unless elected as ordinary members?"

The latter part of the sentence should have read, "but that they shall not be elected as members of Council," &c., the word "not" having been omitted.

The Chairman said that he did not think that anyone had been misled by what was a clerical error.

After some discussion it was agreed that the question should be adjourned.

The following resolutions, which were before the meeting, were then dealt with:—

That the Articles of Association be amended as follows:—

To Article IV. add—

"But no Manager shall be qualified to become President, Vice-President, or Member of the Association, and any such office-holder or Member becoming a Manager shall ipso facto vacate his office and be suspended from all privileges of membership so long as he shall remain a Manager.

"The term Manager is to be held to include all responsible Managers of Theatres, or Theatrical Companies, and their General, Business, and Acting Managers."

At the commencement of Article IX. add the words—

"The Council shall elect a President and shall have power to elect Vice-Presidents. The President and Vice-Presidents shall be or shall have been actors, and, subject to the provisions of Article IV., shall hold office for life or till they resign."

To Article IX. add the words—

"The provisions of Article IV. shall not apply to Life Members elected before January 1, 1907."

Delete Article XI. and replace by—

"The Association shall be governed by a Council consisting of 25 Members, who shall hold office for one year and shall retire at the time appointed for the Annual General Meeting, any retiring member being eligible for re-election. The Council shall have power to transact all the business of the Association, five to form a quorum.

"Any two Members whose subscriptions for the current year are paid may give to the Secretary a notice or notices signed by them nominating any qualified member or members as a candidate or candidates for the Council. Such notices shall contain the name and address of the proposed candidate or candidates, and shall be signed by him or them. Such notices shall be sent to the Secretary not less than 21 days before the date of the Annual General Meeting. If the candidates are not more in number than are required to fill the vacancies they shall be declared to be elected at that Meeting. But if a greater number of candidates are nominated than there are vacancies to be filled, voting papers shall be issued by post to all the Members of the Association containing the names of the candidates. The voting papers shall be sent out by the Secretary 14 days prior to the date of the Annual General Meeting, and must be filled in and signed by the Members and returned to the Secretary before the commencement of the Annual General Meeting."

Article XV. to read—

Delete from "time when the term" to the end of Article, and add the words "next Annual General Meeting."

Article XXIII., Delete "President, Vice-Presidents, and"

Article XXIV., Delete.

Article XXV., Section 2, Delete from "But if a greater number" to "hereinafter provided."

Article XXV., Section 3, Delete section and substitute "If the election has been by voting papers the members present shall elect four scrutineers who shall examine the voting papers, and after the same have been counted the result shall be published at the Offices of the Association."

That Articles 7 and 8 be deleted and be replaced by the following :—

SUBSCRIPTION.

7. The Entrance Fee shall be Five Shillings.

8. The Annual Subscription shall be Fifteen Shillings payable in advance on January 1 in each year, or Eighteen Shillings payable in advance by equal instalments on January 1, April 1, July 1, and October 1 in each year, and only those Members whose Subscriptions are paid shall be entitled to vote at any Meeting.

Should a Member fail to pay his Subscription within seventy days after it is due his membership shall cease, but he may be re-elected by the Council upon payment of arrears and a re-instatement fee of One Shilling.

The Subscription of any person elected on or after April 1 shall be regulated by the quarterages for the remainder of the year.

The Council may, at their discretion, suspend payment of Subscription by Members travelling Abroad.

MR. GRANVILLE BARKER, in proposing the first resolution, said there were people who thought that the Association should be the representative body of the theatre, and there were other people who thought that it should be an association of actors. A profession should be governed by a body acting under a charter which gave them the power to say to anyone, "If you do not agree to that, you cannot practise in our profession." The professions of medicine and law had that power. The Actors' Association had not, and he did not see any possibility of their gaining it. The other alternative was that the profession should be regulated by agreement between employers and employed. But the Association, consisting, as it did, of employers and employed, did not contain the proper mechanism for arriving at an agreement. What they required as actors was an association that could do collective bargaining with managers. They should bring their Association into line with the objects of the Actors' Union, so that those who had already joined that body would come back to the Association.

MR. AUBREY SMITH thought that the exclusion of managers would be tantamount to opening the door to strikes. The presence of the actor-manager had not been detrimental to the interests of the actor, and it was a hostile action to attempt to drive the managers away. If they removed the actor-managers, to whom would the public have to look to as the representative body of the theatrical profession?

MR. ACTON BOND said that Parliament and the London County Council had from time to time appealed to them as the representative body of the theatrical profession. Artists should remember that the actor-managers had always been on their side against the trusts. The name of the Actors' Union had been mentioned. He would point out that that Union charged £1 a year for doing something less than the Actors' Association did for 15s.

MR. A. E. DRINKWATER stated that during several years' experience he could not recall one instance where the interests of the actor in any degree suffered by the presence of the manager among them.

MR. CECIL RALEIGH said affairs could not be satisfactorily carried on by master and man working together; they must be dragged apart by their separate interests.

MR. BRANDON THOMAS said he had served on the Council, and if the resolution was passed and his service was not required any longer, it would afford him the utmost pleasure to have two days in the week to himself. He wished the new régime every success.

The CHAIRMAN said he could not see why the members of the Actors' Association should be in the least alarmed because this new association had been formed. They could not possibly object to that new association; in fact, they should do all in their power to help it. He had heard a good deal about the employer and the employed. As far as the actor-manager was concerned, he did not think it was possible to ask the actor and the manager to feel towards each other in the ordinary manner of employed and employer. He knew that Mr. Cecil Raleigh was a very practical man, but he had heard Mr. Raleigh talk about matters which were not wholly connected with the position of the actor and of the manager. Mr. Barker had said that there was no chance of getting a charter from the Actors' Association, but Mr. Bolton (their solicitor) would tell them that the charter was a perfectly possible and a perfectly safe thing to obtain. He entreated them not to destroy the fabric of the Association without giving it another trial. He did think that the actor-managers of London had done a great deal for the welfare and comfort of members of the profession, and he was fully of opinion that the Association could exist on its present basis, and that the question of trades unionism could be discussed and dealt with in another association.

The meeting then divided on the proposition, and of those present

71 voted in favour, and 61 voted against.

The Secretary announced that

93 proxies were in favour, and 75 were against,

the total voting showing

164 in favour of exclusion of managers from the Association, and 136 against.

The figures were received by the "ayes" with considerable enthusiasm, which somewhat abated when they were told by the Secretary that the resolution was lost, as there was not a three-quarters majority, which, according to the rules of the Association, was necessary to the carrying of any proposition affecting the constitution of the Articles of Association; 265 out of the 300 votes would have been required to pass the resolution, and there were only 164.

It was decided not to proceed with the resolutions concerning Article IX.

MR. LEWIS CASSON, in proposing the next resolution, said that there had been 3500 names on the books of the Association, but at the present time there were only 1200. They had lost by resignations 2000 members, and that meant that they were losing members at the rate of 125 a year. There were members of the Council who had not attended a single meeting, and the contention of these transgressors was, that as there were as many as forty-two on the Council, it would not make much difference if a few kept away from the meetings. It was thought that if the number were reduced to twenty-five every one of the twenty-five would feel an obligation to attend.

MR. ACTON BOND stated that it had always been their endeavour to get as many members of the Council to meet as they possibly could, so as to be thoroughly representative of the provinces, and all the circumstances did not favour a better condition of things with the reduced membership.

On a division being taken, it was found that there was a preponderance of those present in favour of the resolution, in addition to 111 of the proxies, there being only 59 proxies against.

The resolution was therefore declared to be carried.

The second portion of the resolution, taken as a separate item, was proposed by MR. CECIL BROOKING, seconded by MR. AUBREY SMITH, and carried.

MR. MORLAND proposed, and MR. FREDK. TOPHAM seconded, the resolutions in regard to Articles XV., XXIII., XXIV., and XXV. Carried.

MR. AUBREY SMITH proposed, and MR. WM. DEVEREUX seconded, the concluding resolution in regard to the subscription.

MR. TOPHAM proposed an amendment to the effect that the subscription, payable by instalments, be 16s., and not 18s.

MR. RALEIGH seconded the amendment.

The SECRETARY stated that he held 149 proxies in favour of the original resolution and 17 against.

The amendment was lost, and the resolution was carried.

A vote of thanks to the Chairman concluded the proceedings.

The resolutions passed at this meeting are to be confirmed at another extraordinary general meeting to be held on the 27th inst., at two o'clock, at the Passmore Edwards' Settlement.

A REPLY TO MR. BARKER.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—I beg to enclose you a reply to Mr. Barker's open letter of last week :—

(COPY.)

MY DEAR BARKER,—I have to thank you for your most interesting letter to me published in The Era of to-day's date. Should the suggestions of the "Reform Party" of the Actors' Association be approved of at next Monday's meeting, the greatest loss that will accrue will be in your self-enforced exclusion. There are only two points where I differ from your views—this is one of them.

The other is that, in my humble opinion, the existing state of affairs in the Actors' Association does not permit of the managers being requested to withdraw. You say "I am also told that, after all the financial help given by managers to the Association, this treatment will appear ungrateful."

I am afraid it decidedly will. All actors who have an independent spirit will echo your words, "No one regrets more than I that charitable help was ever begged, no matter from whom."

But that charitable help was solicited and accepted. When one has been living, practically rent free, in the house of a friend, one cannot well shut the door in his face. If the obligation has become irksome, surely the more dignified way out of the difficulty is to give up the tenancy, while thanking our friend for his hospitality, and take a house on our own account.

I quite agree with you that the Reform Party of the Actors' Association and the newly-organised "Actors' Union" should join forces and start housekeeping.

They would begin with the respect and goodwill of the public, of managers, and of actors, for, having solicited no man's charity, they could not be reproached with benefits forgot.—Yours always sincerely,

W. F.,

May 4, 1907.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—The result of Monday's meeting is unsatisfactory. The actor-managers of London, whose goodwill to us has never been doubted, have naturally sent in their resignations, and yet the Association has not barred out any actor-manager who does not choose to resign—so no parties are satisfied.

Mr. George Alexander, Mr. Tree, Mr. Frank Benson, and others of our actor-managers belong to the A.A., and have helped it most generously, because they are actors first and managers afterwards, and have always said publicly if it were for the good of the Association for them to retire they would retire at once, so that they probably cannot understand the strong feeling against the presence of managers in the Actors' Association that exists among the rank and file of the profession. I, and many others, have absolutely failed to get anyone to join the Association this year, though I have tried my hardest to gain recruits, and in every case the answer was the same: "What's the good of it? You've got managers belonging to it." And to Mr. Aubrey Smith's argument that "the presence of managers has never been in any way prejudicial to the Association and that managers' and actors' interests should be identical," the answer was: "Why have the managers an Association for the protection of their interests to which actors are not eligible if the actors and managers interests are identical?"

The fact that the membership of the A.A. has decreased from a possible total of 3,000 to 1,200 speaks for itself as to there being something radically wrong. That is why the Reform Party was so loyally supported at the last election, and that is why I, and many others who think like me, voted for the Reform Party last Monday. We supported the motion for the exclusion of managers as the lesser of two evils, but, at the same time, we do consider it an evil to lose the comradeship and "association" of our actor-managers. Is there not the possibility of a compromise?

Apart from the unfortunately large body of actors, both inside and outside the A.A., who take no interest in their profession, and who if they belong to the A.A. do nothing but vilify it on every possible occasion, there are three distinct parties at present in the Association :—

1st. The Radicals, or whole-hoggers, who say every manager must go;

2nd. The Moderates, who object to managers as managers, but think the actor-manager has a claim as an actor, and do not wish to lose the most distinguished members of the profession through excluding actor-managers entirely, but wish to limit their power;

3rd. The Conservatives, who wish to admit managers of every description, whether qualified as actors or not.

I venture to say many of the members of the reform movement are Moderates, and feel that the Actors' Association should be primarily an Association for the furthering of the interests of actors, exactly on the same principle that the Managers' Association exists to protect managers' interests. But the actor-manager is an anomaly. He combines in his person the employer and the employee. If we lost him the Actors' Association ceases to be representative; we lose the flower of the dramatic profession, and, moreover, we lose the men whose sound business instinct and whose experience and respected position are of incalculable value to us. Yet if we retain him we lose the confidence of the rank and file of the profession, and probably the A.A. will come to an end of its existence owing to the leakage in its membership increasing. I, therefore, suggest a compromise.

Could we not have two forms of membership and two Councils—Lords and Commons, or members and associates? The members should be actors only, and should elect their own Council of members. The associates to be actor-managers and hon. members, and to be eligible (with the members) for the General Council of the Actors' Association.

The Council of Members should have sole power to control the finances of the Association and to deal with all matters that referred to the employment of the actor by the manager, or of the conditions under which the actor worked on the form of contract between actor and manager. These matters could be discussed and decided by the Members' Council alone, and if any member became a manager (temporarily or otherwise) during his term of service he should automatically retire from the Council and lose his vote for so long a time as he remained a manager.

The General Council should consist of the president, vice-presidents, and an elective body of associates and members elected by the members and associates of the A.A., and should deal with all the matters that the old Council have dealt with so ably, in the past—such as Actors' Day, the Irving Memorial, sanitation of theatres, &c.—but should have no power over the finances and no power to discuss the relations of actor and manager.

Will our actor-managers hold their resignations over until this scheme has been fully discussed?—Yours faithfully,

ITALIA CONTI.

LONDON.

The enthusiasm of the members of the Actors' Union was put to a severe test on Tuesday, when, despite a heavy downpour, a good muster attended the weekly meeting at 3, Bedford-street, Strand. Mr. H. Tripp Edgar occupied the chair, and those present included Mr. Arthur Bawtree, Mr. W. Ruddle Brown, Mr. James C. Taylor, Miss Gladys Ffolliott, and Messrs. Charles Sugden, Robson Paige, Oswald Marshall, William Lockhart, Frederic Jacques, H. Paulton, jun., Edward Petley, P. Howard Sturgess, Edwin J. Collins, Roy Barraclough, Edward Chester, Gifford Reynolds, Arthur St. John, Edwin Palmer, Edwyn Wolseley, Stanley Roberts, Henry Nelson, Harry Scott, W. H. G. Wynne, Reynolds, E. Y. Rae, Fred Prior, Robin Shiels, James Manning, F. H. De Quincey, Geo. H. Child, Hugh Mewburn, H. Carlyle Pritchard; Mrs. Marshall, Misses May Conrade, Beatrice Lloyd, Mabel Syringa, May Bessle, Nellie Howitt, Agnes Paulton, Lily Crammonde, and Dorothy Mackenzie.

The CHAIRMAN, whose speech was warmly applauded throughout, said they were not there for the purposes of pleasure, but on business. They had a set purpose before them—that of the advancement of actor unionists. He thought that no person there was at all pessimistic as to the ultimate result of their efforts, that the Actors' Union had not only arrived, but had come to stay. Why? Because they were fighting earnestly in a good cause, and a good cause needed no recommendation. They were vigorously prosecuting their work, and he believed in the end they were bound to achieve a success. One great thing they should all bear in mind was that they should be practical in everything they did. Sentiment had too long ruled their councils, and they must be more businesslike in the future. Their Union was to be ruled on democratic lines, for they all knew that the age of democracy had arrived, and the days of privilege were numbered. They should have every legitimate protection that they could get by combination, and he believed that if they succeeded as they felt they were bound to succeed, they would soon see on the stage reputable and decent companies instead of the retrograde combinations that were simply clearing out audiences from the theatres and driving them into the music halls. Then would they return to fair percentages and to the respectable salaries that they remembered in the far-off days. He would, if he might, give an idea of the percentages that existed. Last year he was playing in a certain theatre a very good piece with a company every one of whom had a reputation and a well-known name. The manager took £100, and the company got £82 gross for seven shows. He would take them for a moment to the question of chorus girls, to whom their sympathies were given. They were often called upon to rehearse for five weeks, and the play did not run more than five or six. They had to pay perhaps a £2 fare, and they would get at the very most £2 per week—that would mean that they would have a sovereign a week during the run. Could they expect girls to lead a respectable life on £1 a week and possibly send a little home to their mothers and families? They would endeavour to remedy these things, and get for these girls a minimum wage of £2 a week, and payment for rehearsals. Referring to "Actors' Day," the speaker said they had given their performances that night very willingly. He had the pleasure of giving a night's salary, and several other members of the company—not all, but several—contributed; but he believed that, to this day, the Actors' Benevolent Fund had not received one farthing. The money still laid in the hands of three trustees. They were not there to discuss other societies' affairs; but, he asked, were those funds to still lie there idle? If they were in trouble as to how to allocate the funds they might call in the council of the Actors' Union. It was suggested to him the other day that one or two people had crept into their Union and were calling themselves "Fellows," when they could only qualify for "Associates." They did not want anybody to occupy that position who had only served eight or ten months. They should be very careful to nominate only those who had had the necessary five years' experience. Should there be any members who were made "Fellows" when they should only be "Associates," they should very seriously consider their position. Mr. Edgar, referring to the unfair competition of premium paying unpaid people, thought it was something of an anomaly that actor-unionists should hold their meeting in an academy for the incubation of anæmics. He recalled the fact that after making what he would bluntly call a hit in a part in a London theatre, he rather anticipated and hoped that he would have had the honour of being asked to play it on tour; but a raw amateur was engaged instead. The man did his best in the part, and when he returned he said, "My dear Tripp, that part was built for you—and me!" Referring to advertisements in the newspapers, Mr. Edgar quoted an extract from one in which artists were required for a sketch on the halls to give a week's rehearsal, then play for a week, on the chance of being afterwards engaged if the sketch was sold or produced. The subject of payment for rehearsals, continued Mr. Edgar, should be approached very, very seriously, because it established a principle. Rules and regulations were sometimes altered, changed, or rescinded, but principles they must leave alone. There was a very scarce amount of equity in their profession, despite the fact that the law distinctly states that there must be consideration given to every contract. What consideration did they get for the amount of rehearsals that they gave? No material consideration and very little of the other. The law distinctly told them there must be consideration for a man's work. They maintained that an actor does work, and that he is entitled to be paid. If he was rehearsing, and the manager said, "You must not only attend in the morning, but must come in the afternoon," and he replied that he was very sorry, but he had got a concert on, no Court in this country would give the manager a verdict. He had a little plan of his own which he would unfold presently, but before doing so he would ask them seriously to consider their standpoint. What was the basis of their profession? It had a very slender foundation. The stage was essentially a luxury and not a necessity. It was built entirely on speculation, and anything that they did to thwart that speculation might be to their ultimate disadvantage. He would suggest that they should be careful not to do anything that would check the sources of supply. They wanted to tap the sources of supply, not restrict them. They must be very careful, therefore, not to upset the equation of supply and demand. The great majority of plays produced were distinct failures; therefore, if they did anything to pile up the sum of monetary speculation on the managerial shoulders they might be checking that speculation. His plan with regard to payment for rehearsals was that advance monies should be paid to artists per week at the rate of half salaries, recoverable on the salaries after production. A manager might rehearse them for a couple of months, but the play only run for a week. He, therefore, stood to lose, and that, he maintained, was the consideration as demanded by law. He wanted managers to feel that there was no animus in their proceedings. There was nothing more pleasing to notice than that, although they had been suffering under bitter wrongs, they never allowed the waters of bitterness to flow. They wanted to look upon managers as the same right-minded men as they hoped to be by an adherence to principles that were right, fair, and just. Finally, he trusted they would be inspired with the belief that the stage was a great and noble calling, not a mean and grovelling thing to travel through as you may, but an elevated and lofty destiny.

Mr. J. C. TAYLOR said the Actors' Union was not formed with the idea of being antagonistic to anybody. Their idea was to organise a body of artists for the protection of one another. Several organisations had already been formed, and certain grievances settled; but the only occasion on which they had attempted to do anything for the profession they had given way in favour of the managers. In a properly organised body it would never have been possible for the Actors' Day Fund to be collected without knowing beforehand what was to be done with the money. They had formed their Union because they felt that they wanted to be able to meet freely and without being spied upon by the people they had difficulties with. They wanted to try and right some of their wrongs, and to hear all sides of the question. He would like it to be clearly understood that it was not necessary to have a five years' qualification to be eligible for membership; that period referred only to the position of a "Fellow" as distinguished from an "Associate." Referring to the remarks of the chairman with regard to payment for rehearsals, he thought that theatrical performance was a matter of public demand. If the public wanted a performance, and the manager saw a way of making money, then he would have the show, whatever he had to pay for it. They had decided that it was necessary to unite. Let them stick to the principles of unity, and not split at any time on minor points.

Miss GLADYS FFOLLIOTT said that first of all, before they could do anything, they must increase their numbers, and remember that their watchword was "Unity." It was by absolute unity that the Japs licked the Russians. They should go by the majority, and it was only by sinking personal feeling that reforms were achieved. The V.A.F. had achieved a very good thing for the variety artists; but theatrical people differed from those of the music halls from the fact that the latter were very often their own managers, while the former were dependent one upon the other. Miss Ffolliott deprecated any tendency towards a strike. If they showed their teeth, let them show them properly. She thought they might do without ladies on the committee for the first year. There was some hard work to be done that really required men to do it, and she thought they would be doing right in having a "he" committee. Payment for rehearsals would, no doubt, come in time. They should endeavour to winnow out those terrible moneyed amateurs. They should re-enact the story of St. George and the dragon, with the Union in the part of St. George. Then the performances would improve, and percentages would go up.

Mr. CHARLES SUGDEN, who was very cordially received, said he had been advised to answer some advertisements in a contemporary, and he would read two of the replies from the advertisers. He had used the name of "Violet Fanshawe," as being a likely draw. One was from a theatrical and musical comedy company, and said "Yours received. Will call on Monday between 6 and 6.30." But at 7.30 a gentleman rushed up to Mrs. Sugden and asked how much her daughter would be likely to find! He also had a letter from a lady which said, "Dear madame, thanks for your favour received. I require a lady to understudy my part and play small part also. The premium would be £50, to be returned at £1 per week for twelve months. I guarantee a very long engagement." His reply was to the effect that arrangements could be made with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sugden to produce the drama The Last Drop of the Mug, and that the rights could be had on very favourable terms. Mr. Sugden referred to the letter in The Era in which it was suggested that the Actors' Union should go in a body into the Actors' Association, but he hoped that the Association would have to come to them in a body. His advice to them was not to argue about trifling things until the Actors' Union was settled. Let them get two or three thousand people, and then make rules and argue.

Mr. EDWARD BEECHER read the report of the Hull meeting last week, which was enthusiastically received. With regard to payment for rehearsals he referred to an incident in his own experience. After rehearsing eight hours on Friday, and seven on Saturday, there was a call for Sunday, which read, "Everybody at two o'clock on Sunday, and no waiting, as the stage hands have to be paid!"

Mr. W. RUDDLE BROWN said that last week Mr. Hamilton Deane got up a meeting in Manchester, when thirty joined out of the ninety present. They wanted better salaries, but they could do nothing unless 75 per cent. of the profession joined. If they got one set of actors fighting against the other it would be absolutely impossible to create any minimum, or do anything else to improve their position. Mr. Deane, he added, pointed out that if this Union were allowed to drop, never in their time would another Union be started.

Mr. ROBSON PAIGE declared they were not going to allow the Union to drop. He advocated payment for rehearsals, and said there should be a minimum of £1 and a maximum of £5.

Mr. ARTHUR BAWTREE said there were one or two knotty points to be decided. The meeting at which the rule with regard to sketch artists had been passed consisted of only about sixty, or one-fourth of the membership. The executive committee had therefore decided to send out, in the course of a few days, papers asking for "Yes" or "No" with regard to sketch artists having the protection of the Union, and whether ladies should serve on the committee. He personally thought that a member of the Actors' Union should be entitled to every protection from the Union. If he were acting at the Vaudeville one week, and the next week stepped over to the Tivoli, he maintained that while playing on the boards of the music hall he should be entitled to protection from the Union.

Mr. OSWALD MARSHALL drew attention to a clause in a contract of a company which read: "The artist agrees to allow the manager, should he so require, to deduct a sum not exceeding 10s. from his or her salary at any time to cover insurance under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906."

The CHAIRMAN pointed out that 3s. would cover the insurance, and advised the members to resist the charge, which in the opinion of many was illegal.

Among the speakers were also Mr. EDWIN PALMER, Mr. HARRY PAULTON, jun., and Mr. FREDERIC JACQUES. In closing the meeting the chairman urged those present to bring as many as possible to next Tuesday's assembly when Mr. Hamilton Deane would be in the chair.

LIVERPOOL.

A meeting of the Actors' Union took place last Friday, May 3, on the stage of the Royal Court Theatre, Liverpool, and was attended by the following:—E. D. Allen, Percy Bourchier, Robert Wilton, Cecil Ravenswood, Leo Montgomery, H. Armitage, Bernard Hishin, Hamilton Deane, Ruddle Brown, Campbell Goldsmid, Violet Thorold, H. Lewis, D. Hayes, Eric Campbell, Herbert Belmore, A. M. Watson, H. Hodgkins, Carl Mora, Ronald Bayne, H. M. Dayne, G. B. Murray, Mrs. C. Wybert, Mrs. H. Hesslegrave, J. Winter, Miss Seymour Hodges, Miss Gladys Gardener, Miss Irene Greville, Miss Nellie Moore, Mr. Sidney Russell, H. Newburn, Mr. T. Benson, Mr. Cole Aspinall, Miss Hughes, C. Medwin, Miss Ethel Russell, Miss Maude Grosvenor, Miss Nellie Howell, A. Lesham, Miss K. Russell, Leyton Cancellor, J. English, F. Strickland, Miss G. Walton, H. G. Brandon, F. E. Wybert, Miss Winifred Hart-Dyke, R. White, Miss White, William Matthews, V. Smith, Milner Noble, Leslie Rolfe, B. Rush, Mrs. N. Langford, G. Goodwin, G. Fox, C. Herbert, Mr. Mackarness, Wallace Campbell, Guy Buckland, W. E. Brandon, A. Wilie, E. Reynolds, Miss L. Nazeby, Fred Carroll, Mr. Barrett, F. Stanhope, F. Maxwell Stewart, Montague Corri, Miss Corri, Bert Byrne, Edwin Adeler, S. James, F. Lister, Kennedy Allen, A. Sember, W. Percy, Miss Madge Vincent, Ada Dunville, S. Grant, H. Tresham, and F. Bates. Of these some forty were members already, and about twenty were members of the V.A.F.

Mr. Hamilton Deane was proposed to the chair by Mr. Ruddle Brown, and seconded by Mr. Campbell Goldsmid.

Mr. DEANE said he was sure there was one subject upon which they were all agreed—and if it was only one that was something—and that was the absolute necessity for unity. Suppose, Mr. Deane continued, the A.U. to be in full working order, in what way will it affect the artists of our time? In the first place, the mere fact of his being an A.U. man will imply five years' experience. If a man can point to this, it stands to reason he will be worth a salary of £2 per week. There had been many objections to this minimum clause, but in his opinion it was necessary to have it or nothing. If at the end of five years a man were not worth his £2 a week, then he had no right in the business at all. He further contended that the A.U. would give the actor a definite position in the social scale. At present the profession was being used as a dumping ground for all and sundry who had a desire to paint their faces and pretend they were someone else. Why should this be? Why did it exist? Because there was no body of appeal to put an end to it. The only way to stop it was by the introduction of the minimum wage. How would the introduction of the £2 minimum affect the touring manager? He thought for good. By the raising of the standard of his artists, by the employment of A.U. artists, his percentage would, he thought, be bettered. Now, said Mr. Deane, as regards the benefits you are to derive from this Union. You pay 2s. 6d. entrance fee, and 6d. per week for 40 weeks, thus allowing 12 weeks for illness, loss of work, or holidays. You can pay weekly, quarterly, half-yearly, or yearly. Although many ideas are on the agenda of the Provisional Committee, I think one of the most laudable is the establishment of the loan fund, old age pension fund, &c. If there be a profession requiring the latter it is ours. If for no other plank in the platform except this one, the A.U. is worthy your consideration. Mr. Deane then read a letter from Mr. Rutland Barrington expressing sympathy with and interest in the movement. There must be a good deal in the idea, he said, when men like Mr. Ben Webster, Mr. Frank Cooper, Mr. Charles Sugden, Mr. Arthur Bawtree, and others were in it. If the A.U. is going to be a success, concluded the speaker, it will be a gigantic success; but do not let it fizzle out, as so many other attempts have done. If you do, I can see that this will be the last attempt of actors to combine within the limits of memory of any of us. It behoves you, then, not to let this chance slip, but to come forward and subscribe your names. (Cheers).

Mr. RUDDLE BROWN said that he and his wife were glad to be starters, in a measure, of the A.U. It was bound, in his opinion, to have far-reaching effects. The only way to get at the root of the evil was by the sanctioning of the £2 minimum salary—it would fix a standard of merit which no manager dare go under. If a travelling manager could not afford the £2 minimum, he should not have a company out. We wanted 75 per cent. of the actors of to-day inside the Union.

Mr. H. ARMITAGE said the £2 minimum seemed to be the stumbling-block for most of them. As a proprietor, he could not become a member of the Union, but he claimed the privilege after being twenty years in the profession to speak at any actors' meeting. He urged them not to be afraid of this minimum wage. If an actor were a real actor, he was worth £2 a week, whatever managers might say to the contrary, and no decent manager would scruple to pay this amount. If, on the other hand, an actor was not worth £2 a week, he had no right at all to be in the business, and under the minimum clause would not obtain this sum. He would fail to earn a living in the profession, and so would automatically cease to be a burden, and would make way for a better than he who had the instincts and talents of an actor.

Mr. ADELER, a prominent member of the V.A.F., said he was glad to see that actors were at last making a move. He perceived that in some respects the new Union was being formed on V.A.F. lines, and he assured them they could not do better.

Mr. RUDDLE BROWN said that the £2 minimum would drive the bogus manager and the small manager off the road.

Mr. PERCY BOURCHIER replied that it was inadvisable to drive the small manager off the road. If that were done, we should have the travelling companies governed by a few big syndicates. The small manager was a safeguard.

Mr. RUDDLE BROWN replied that he did not refer to the small manager apart from the bogus manager.

Mr. MAXWELL STEWART said he thought something should be done, as the actor at present was at the mercy of the syndicate, who could not only bar him a company, but a whole country, say, Scotland. With regard to commission, that was one of the evils which should be fought.

The objects were then read, and passed unanimously.

The CHAIRMAN called upon all to sign who were not members, and the following responded :—

Effie Bartlett, Wallace Campbell, Francis Wybert, Sidney Thomas Russell, George Goodwin, Mrs. C. Wybert, Leyton Cancellor, H. G. Brandon, Florence Barnes, Frank Strickland, Percy Bourchier, Charles Herbert, James English, Herbert Belmore, Charles Medwin, Lena Nazeby, H. Victor Smith, Sidney Grant, Ada Dunville, Hubert G. S. Buckland, Fred Carroll, Henry Hodgkins, Muriel Seymour Hodges, E. D. Allen, Gladys Gardener, J. Michael Watson, Joseph Winter, Ruby White, Reginald White, and Samuel Spencer.

A vote of thanks was proposed to the chair.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—I was sorry to read of the decision of the members to admit sketch managers into the Union, there to work and shape the rules and regulations. It is no personal objection; on the contrary, many a good man among them we want, but we are running in direct opposition to the very principle which makes us feel so confident and proud of our Union. The democratic vote, "controlled and developed by actors for actors," is demonstrably impossible while there are managers there, however small they may be.—Yours faithfully,

J. TELLY DILLSEN.

Royalty Theatre, Barrow-in-Furness.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—With all due respect to Mr. J. L. Stein and one or two others, we do not want the manager in the Union at all. They are employers of labour. The Union, if it is going to succeed, must be governed by actors only. The manager must have no influence. If we get him on the Council dissension is sure to ensue. I trust all actors and actresses will vote for the actor, and strongly against those associated with management in any way.—Yours faithfully,

CHARLES STIRLING.

THEATRICAL GOSSIP.

Mr. Beerbohm Tree, who is a life member of the Actors' Association, has sent the following letter to the Council, as a result of the voting at the special general meeting of the Association, on Monday, by which a majority decided that in future managers should not be eligible for membership:—"I have just heard of the result of your meeting this afternoon. Although I believe your constitution does not allow you to exclude me, I feel that in the face of the majority I can no longer remain on the Association. I feel sure that you have good reason for the course that you have taken. Probably the Actors' Association is strong enough to stand by itself, and I am glad that we may at least have been useful in helping it over the initial difficulties."

Referring to the publication of the above letter and the announcement of the subsequent decision of managers to retire from their membership of the Actors' Association, Mr. Tree writes:—"Would you kindly allow me to state that a number of my brother managers had independently formed the same conclusion as I had, and were in no way influenced by my individual action. In taking this step I know that their action, like my own, was prompted solely by a desire to defer to the view expressed by the majority of the members who voted at the meeting of the Association."

Sir Squire Bancroft, Mr. John Hare, and Mr. W. S. Gilbert were among the brilliant gathering at the Royal Academy Banquet, at Burlington House on Saturday, at which the Prince of Wales was present. Music had eminent representatives in Sir Hubert Parry and Mr. Charles Santley.

Mr. George Alexander will not be long absent from London this autumn. He begins his provincial tour with His House in Order at Blackpool, on September 9, following on to Manchester, Liverpool, Birmingham, Glasgow, and Edinburgh, and will return in October. August Bank Holiday will see Mr. Edward Compton installed for a brief season at the St. James's.

Mrs. D'Oyly Carte has now received official notice of the withdrawal of the licence of The Mikado, and, in consequence, will not be able to give any further representations of the opera. She has very generously sent a cheque for £25 as a subscription to the local charity funds, in aid of which the Middlesbrough Amateur Opera Company were to have given a performance of The Mikado this week, but were prevented by the Lord Chamberlain's prohibition.

Two of our foremost dramatists helped to swell the number of presents which marked the occasion of Sir Henry and Lady Norman's marriage this week. Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Barrie gave a set of buttons, and Mr. Henry Arthur Jones's gift took the form of a Rhodian pot.

Mr. Arthur Williams has arranged with Mr. Tom Craven to revive the celebrated comedy Milky White, which will be reproduced at Mr. Davey's charming County Theatre, Kingston, during Whit Week. Subsequently, Mr. Williams will produce other pieces from Mr. Tom Craven's pen at an outlying London theatre. Mr. Williams will sustain the title-rôle in Milky White, and Mr. Fred Emney will represent the stolid Dick Duggs. Mr. Tom Craven will appear in the first piece, the authorship for which he is responsible, but the title is to be kept a secret until the last moment.

May Day witnessed the wedding of Miss Dorothy Minto, the pretty Prunella of the Court Theatre, to Mr. Shiel Barry. The bridegroom is the son of the veteran actor whose performances of Gaspard, the miser, in Les Cloches De Corneville ran into such a lengthy record, and is playing the part of Gille in Clancarty at the Lyric. Miss Minto attracted notice some three or four years ago as the child-Juliet in the Elizabethan Stage Society's boy-and-girl production of Shakespeare's tragedy. She has since appeared in nearly the whole series of the recent Court plays, and will be particularly remembered as the suffering little Salvation Army girl in Major Barbara, as the youthful suffragette in Votes for Women! and as the pretty ingénue in The Return of the Prodigal. Apart from the Court, her appearances in Robin Hood at the Lyric and in A School for Husbands at the Scala will be recalled with pleasure.

Mr. Charles Cruikshanks, the secretary of the Actors' Association, has been signally honoured by the Grand First Principal of the Royal Arch, receiving from the hands of Field-Marshall H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught and Strathearn, K.G., &c., the collar and rank of a Past Grand Assistant-Director of Ceremonies in the Grand Chapter of England. Mr. Cruikshanks has received the congratulations of a host of Masonic friends.

At the congratulatory dinner to be given by the Playgoers' Club in celebration of Mr. Beerbohm Tree's recent artistic success in Berlin in the Grand Hall of the Hotel Cecil to-morrow, Mr. Hall Caine, the president, who has just returned to this country, will preside, and will propose the toast of "Our Guest," to which Mr. Tree will respond. Mr. J. T. Grein will give the toast of "The Visitors," and Miss Constance Collier will reply on behalf of the ladies present.

Mr. Henry Arthur Jones has for some time past been engaged in his country retreat upon the play which he has been commissioned to write for Messrs. Klaw and Erlanger, and which is to be seen for the first time in America during next autumn. Within the next few weeks Mr. Jones will go to New York with the completed manuscript of the play, which is said to be one of modern character, and, having read it to the American producers, will return to this country later in the summer.

Mr. Martin Harvey's welcome return to London will be made at the Adelphi on Monday June 3. The season will be limited to four weeks, during each of which a different play will be presented. The first week will be devoted to The Breed of the Treshams, the second to Great Possessions, the third to The Corsican Brothers, and the fourth to The Only Way.

Great Possessions, it should be noted, is the title selected for the play by Karl Rossler, which has hitherto been called The Rich Youth. The scene, as already stated, is placed in Palestine, about the year A.D. 31, and the setting will be from the brush of W. Telbin. The costumes, which will be on a very complete scale, have been chiefly reproduced from the drawings of Tissot, and Mr. Harvey has derived much assistance from several well-known artists, including Mr. William Hole, R.S.A., and also acknowledges hints from Professor Margoliouth, of Oxford.

Mr. Beerbohm Tree will revive Julius Cæsar this evening, and next Saturday will see Trilby in the bill at His Majesty's. The cast of A Woman of No Importance, which is to be revived on the following Wednesday, the 22nd, will consist, in addition to Mr. Tree, of Messrs. J. Fisher White, Langhorn Burton, Charles Allan, Edmund Maurice, Charles Quartermaine, Clive Currie, F. Cowley Wright, Mrs. Charles Calvert, and Misses Kate Bishop, Kate Cutler, Ellis Jeffreys, Viola Tree, Hilda Moore, and Marion Terry.

Mrs. Patrick Campbell started her Magda tour at the Devonshire Park Theatre, Eastbourne, on Tuesday with Miss Stella Patrick Campbell and Mr. Laurence Irving in the cast. A brilliant audience filled the theatre, which has also this week been full for Mme. Jane Hading's charming representations. Messrs. Murray King and Clark are so encouraged by the success of their venture here that they have arranged to keep open every night throughout the whole year.

Mr. W. S. Penley has given up his beautiful residence at St. John's, Woking, and at a meeting of the shareholders of the local Public Hall Company last week it was decided to leave the popular comedian's place on the board of directors unfilled. A hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Penley, who was always to the fore in good works in the town, was accorded. Our information does not say to what part of the country Mr. Penley has transferred his habitation, and it may be hoped that he is contemplating a return to the London stage. If our memory serves, the famous exponent of the Private Secretary and Charley's Aunt was some little time ago engaged in the writing of a comedy in which he was to make his reappearance at his own theatre in Great Queen-street. Can it be that that welcome promise is about to be realised?

An interesting little function took place on Tuesday last, at the usual monthly meeting of the Suburban Theatre Managers' Association. Mr. J. B. Mulholland, the principal founder of the Association, which was started about three years ago, and the hon. secretary since its inception, having found it necessary to resign that position, in consequence of his numerous other engagements, the members presented him with a loving cup, inscribed as follows: "This loving cup is presented by the following members of the above Association to J. B. Mulholland, Esq., as a token of goodwill and good-fellowship, in appreciation of his invaluable work in the founding of the Association, his excellent services as Honorary Secretary since its inauguration, and to congratulate him and ourselves, upon his first appointment as our chairman. Robert Arthur, William Bailey, William Bennett, Milton Bode, Arthur Carlton, Edward Compton, Peter Davey, H. D'Esterre, Frederick Fredericks, Frederick Melville, Frederick Mouillot, Cecil Paget, F. W. Purcell, Ernest Stevens, Clarence Sounes, Walter Melville (Chairman), H. G. Dudley Bennett (Hon. Treasurer)."

The cup was presented on behalf of the members by Mr. Frederick Melville, and, after a brief response by Mr. Mulholland, was duly filled and emptied in honour of the donee. The position resigned by Mr. Mulholland, as secretary, has been taken over by Mr. Moverley Sharp, of Criterion Chambers, to whom all communications with reference to the Association should in future be addressed.

An athletic carnival was carried out on Wednesday by the members of the Peter Pan company, which is this week playing at Birmingham. The first event, a two-mile walk for ladies, was won by Miss Winifred Geoghegan in the excellent time of 22min. 26sec.; Miss Marie Ashe finished in 22min. 42sec.; Miss Lytton (third) in 23min. 45sec.; Miss Pauline Chase 24min. 25sec.; and Miss Evelyn Stuart, 24min. 27sec. A two-mile walk brought out Messrs. Vigors, Kelt, and Hersee, the last-mentioned winning in 30min. 8sec.; Vigors doing the distance in 30in. 18sec. A tug of war between Mr. Kirby's Staff v. Actors ended in a win at the third pull for the former. A one-lap running event saw Mr. W. Anderson (scratch) the winner, he doing the 397 yards in 1min. 4 2-5sec.; Master Hollom with 50 yards start, was second; and W. Scott (scratch), third.

"The Mikado" was again the subject of inquiry in the House of Commons on Monday, when Mr. Gladstone, replying to Mr. Trevelyan, said that the order of the Lord Chamberlain applied both to London and the provinces, and to all public performances of the opera, the order being operative from the date of issue, which was March 26. No compensation was payable under the Act. As to the reasons for the prohibition, he could add nothing to the answer given by the Foreign Secretary on the previous Thursday, but he was informed by the Lord Chamberlain that it would be a matter for consideration whether, after certain modifications in the text, the present restriction could be subsequently removed.

The ninth bi-monthly meeting of the members of the Actors' Association was held in the saloon at 10, King-street, Covent Garden, on Thursday, the 9th inst. Mr. Adnam Sprange was elected chairman. There were also present Mesdames May Conrade, Florence Harcourt, Louise L'Estrange, and Charles Cruikshanks (secretary). The secretary read the minutes of the previous meeting, and also the minutes of meetings of the Council dealing with matters arising out of the resolutions passed at the last bi-monthly meeting. A vote of thanks to the chairman concluded the proceedings

The health of Miss Topsy Sinden's mother is causing great anxiety. Miss Sinden is taking a rest for a week in order to nurse the invalid.

Mr. Maundy-Gregory has taken up the position of acting manager at the Waldorf Theatre. His touring enterprise will, however, continue as usual.

Owing to the sudden collapse of the late Mr. Paul Belmore, whose illness terminated fatally on Monday, his part of Kleschna had to be undertaken last week by Mr. Armitage, who, however, lost his voice on the third night, whereupon Mr. Campbell Goldsmid (Schram), had to assume the lead. Another distressful event occurred on the Friday evening, when Miss Bessie Rignold (Mrs. Belmore), who during the week had paid several flying visits to her husband, gave way at the close of the second act. The curtain was lowered, and a statement made to the audience, but in the course of a few minutes Miss Ethel Russell, a member of the company, took up the rôle of Leah, and finished the play. On Saturday Miss Haidee Wright was given the title part, and Mr. William Clayton has been engaged for Kleschna.

"What the Butler Saw" company has been doing phenomenal business this spring. At Bolton, Cardiff, and Cheltenham the capacity of the theatre was tested to its utmost, return dates being at once offered and accepted. Mr. Lionel Rignold and Miss Ada Blanche's tour, which has been akin to a triumphal march, will finish a forty-three weeks' run by paying a return visit to the Kennington Theatre early in June, after only a week or two to recuperate. Their autumn tour will start early in July, and extend to the middle of June, 1908. The company, it may be added, has had enticing offers from American and Australian managers for an extended tour in 1909

The Shakespearean Festival at Tunbridge Wells was exceedingly successful, and Mr. Norman V. Norman has been the recipient of numerous requests that the performances may be repeated next year. Mr. Norman finished the week by giving performances of David Garrick and Robin Hood on the Friday and Saturday, the house being crowded in every part.

Miss Tita Brand has opened a stall at the Home Industries Exhibition, held this week at the Albert Hall, where the materials woven by her "Brema Loom" girls, which on a previous occasion gained several awards, may be seen.

Mr. Lewis Waller is prepared with another production to follow Clancarty should it be necessary, though the excellent houses being drawn to the Lyric renders it unlikely. The novelty consists of a play by Mr. William Somerset Maugham, author of A Man of Honour, entitled The Explorer, in which an interesting problem is presented. A headstrong youth who, through his own foolish misconduct, comes to grief, moral and social, is afforded an opportunity, by the man who loves and is beloved by his sister, of rehabilitating himself in the eyes of the world, albeit at the risk of his life. At the supreme moment his nerve fails, and he dies, the victim of his own cowardice. The horror of the sister when she is led to believe that it was the man she adores who sent her brother to a premeditated doom is intense, and the working out of the situation in Mr. Maugham's play is bound to be engrossing.

The usual weekly meeting of the Council of the Actors' Association was held last Tuesday; there were present:—C. Aubrey Smith (chairman), A. E. Drinkwater (deputy chairman), Henry W. Mote (solicitor), Carlotta Addison, Fanny Brough, Clare Greet, Georgina Hamilton, Edith Wynne Matthison, Kate Phillips, J. Cooke Beresford, Acton Bond, Cecil Brooking, Burton Cooke, C. Hayden Coffin, William Devereux, H. Athol Forde, Fredk. Morland, Kenyon Musgrave, and Charles Cruikshanks (secretary).

The secretary reported that in connection with the meeting held on Monday last he had issued 1,080 notices, with questions and proxies, that he had received back 223 proxies out of the 1,080 sent out, of which 17 were disqualified owing to want of signature or stamps, or being received during the meeting or on the day after, and 34 of such proxies were not used, the senders being present at the meeting. It was proposed by Mr. Cecil Brooking, seconded by Mr. Burton Cooke, and carried unanimously, "That a special vote of thanks be tendered to the secretary, Mr. Charles Cruikshanks, for the highly satisfactory manner in which he had carried out his arduous duties in connection with the extraordinary general meeting of the members, held on May 6, 1907, and the Council's appreciation of his efforts, especially in a particularly difficult position with regard to the recording (by proxies) of the votes of members absent."

The hon. solicitors reported they had advised several members. Four former members were reinstated. The report of the Social and Library Committee was given. A question arising out of the proposal for payment of subscriptions by instalments was under consideration, and was referred to the Finance and General Purposes Committee, for them to furnish the basis of the estimate upon which the increase was founded, and an explanation of the reasons for such increase.

The Finance and General Purposes Committee held a meeting on Tuesday last; there were present Messrs. Acton Bond (chairman), J. Cooke Beresford, A. E. Drinkwater, H. Athol Forde, C. Aubrey Smith, and Chas. Cruikshanks (secretary). Mr. William Devereux was unanimously elected a member of this committee. The committee, dealing with the question referred to them by the Council, supplied the following estimates of increased expenditure entailed by the payment of subscription by instalments:—(1) Additional cost of insurance per member, at least 6d.; (2) ascertained additional cost of postage per member, 3d.; (3) estimated additional postage per member, 6d.; (4) cost of additional printing, and of four sets of account books, stationery, &c., together with the cost of extra clerical labour at times of collection, 1s 3d.; (5) there will inevitably be sundry additional expenses which cannot be estimated at the moment, but for which a margin must be allowed. Rules governing the Library Committee were drawn, and it was agreed they should be submitted to the Council. It was also agreed that the question of separating the "Social" from the "Library" Committee be brought before the Council, with a recommendation that two separate committees be formed.

Mr. Alfred Northway and Mr. W. V. Garrod's tour of The Prodigal Parson has proved so successful that they have purchased the play outright, and with the exception of the smaller towns, now hold the entire rights for Great Britain and Ireland. Several new posters are now being struck which will bring the plant of printing up to 350 sheets without a repeat. The play has been written up by Mr. Garrod, more incident introduced, and the comedy strengthened. It is now played in three acts, and the innovation of presenting drama with only two intervals has proved very popular.

Mr. Henry Dundas, the painstaking general manager of the Royal Opera House, Leicester, will take his first benefit on Thursday, May 30. It will be under distinguished patronage. The Leicester Amateurs will present Captain Billy, which will be followed by a miscellaneous concert, and the entertainment will terminate with the sketch Maria and Baby, in which the beneficiare will appear.

By special arrangement with Mr. Ernest Dare Messrs. J. McLeod Foster and Clarence Napier will shortly tour the well-known drama, The King of Thieves, by Mr. J. M. Loader. The tour will commence, under the personal direction of the author, on the 20th inst.

Mr. Fredk. Mouillot has secured from Mr. Charles Frohman the provincial rights of Clyde Fitch's successful play, The Truth, in which Miss Marie Tempest is drawing crowded houses to the Comedy Theatre. The rights include all theatres which Miss Marie Tempest does not personally visit. Miss Decima Moore will play Miss Tempest's part on tour.

Mr. William Haviland and his wife (Miss Edyth Latimer) are due in England by the Kinfauns Castle on Saturday next. The talented couple have had a most enjoyable and successful holiday diamond digging on the Phiel (Vaal River) Estate since their big tour out there.

Mr. and Mrs. Chalmers Mackey entertained the members of their company to supper on the 3rd inst. in celebration of the farewell performance of the almost phenomenal success, The Wearin' o' the Green. The company drove from the Opera House, Blackpool, after the performance, to Mr. and Mrs. Mackey's charming home, "Ashdale," Poulton-le-Fylde, where a sumptuous supper was spread in the private theatre, beautifully decorated for the occasion, attached to the house. A souvenir of the final performance in the form of a replica of the programme printed on emerald green satin, with the story of the play in verse, written for the occasion by Mr. Frank Dalton, was presented to each guest. An enjoyable drive back to Blackpool terminated a most pleasant and interesting function. Mr. and Mrs. Mackey will take a well-earned holiday prior to the production of their new play, Rollicking Rory, at the Theatre Royal, Preston, on August 3.

Mr. William A. Armour will produce at the Colosseum Theatre, Oldham, on Monday, the new domestic drama, entitled The Best of Her Sex, by William A. Armour and Robert Cheval. A strong company has been engaged, including Miss Dora Price and Mr. Edward M. Hamilton. The very fine tour, which has been booked embraces most of the best dramatic houses, and extends up to November, 1908.

Mr. Arthur Collins has selected a brilliant cast for The Last of His Race, the Indian drama, which is to be produced at Drury Lane next Saturday. Miss Constance Collier will be the heroine, and Mr. Lyn Harding and Mr. Basil Gill will have interesting studies of the dusky race. The rest of the cast will consist of Messrs. Reeves-Smith, Austin Melford, Arthur Poole, Richard Norton, L. Ashton-Jarry, Alec Davidson, Gregory Clark, and Henry White; and Misses Esmé Beringer, Robertha Erskine, Winifred Ingham, Minnie Terry, and Beatrice Hodson.

Miss Emma and Mr. Percy Hutchison will finish both tours of Peter's Mother, which has been playing to remarkable business throughout the spring, at Oxford and Blackpool respectively in Whit week, and will restart for the autumn early in August. The third company of Peter's Mother, which Mr. Hutchison is now organising, also opens at Margate in July. Two companies of The Stronger Sex have been fully booked by this enterprising and energetic management, which will control no less than five different companies of the above plays. Negotiations are now pending for another London success, which Mr. Hutchison intends sending out in September.

The first tour of The Stronger Sex opens at Scarborough on August Bank Holiday, and the second on September 9 at the Coronet Theatre, London. The Stronger Sex has more than once outrun its allotted period at a London house, and so continuous is its success that its transference to a more permanent home seems inevitable. The work possesses all the elements of lasting popularity, and playgoers in all parts of the country will no doubt eagerly avail themselves of witnessing a piece that is proving so remarkably attractive in the Metropolis.

Mr. Allan Wilkie and his company paid their first visit to the Theatre Royal, Blackburn, last week, when crowded houses were the rule. On the Friday evening the performance was under the patronage of the Mayor and Mayoress of Blackburn, Lord and Lady Ribblesdale, and several other distinguished persons. The advance booking for this particular night was well over £45, and half-an-hour before the rise of the curtain the "House Full" cards were displayed in front of the theatre. The performances were witnessed, during the week, by over 800 pupils and teachers from the various schools. The new and elaborate scenery for The Merchant of Venice, used for the first time, was the subject of high commendation.

Mr. Edward Marris, the popular new lessee of the Jersey Opera House, has scored a gratifying success with his stock company, the booking having gone up by leaps and bounds. The engagement terminated last evening (Friday, 10th), when His Excellency, Major-General H. S. Gough, Lieut.-Governor, and Colonel H. Ringwood, with the officers of the 1st East Surrey Regiment were announced to attend to witness the popular musical comedy, The Orchid. Mr. Marris, by the way, intends reopening the bar, which has now been closed for about two years.

Mr. E. Graham Falcon, we understand, is interested in the new comic opera, entitled The Silver Stick, written by Mr. Alfred England, and supplied with music by Mr. Carl St. Amory, which recently had a very successful trial week at Northampton. The play deals with the superstitions which die so hard in Cornwall, and in the second act there is a picturesque representation of "the Furry dance," a quaint spring festival, which from time immemorial has been held at Helston, in Cornwall, annually on May 8.

At the West London Theatre, on Thursday next, Mr. James Sinclair, the popular acting-manager there, takes, by the courtesy of Mr. William Bailey, his third annual complimentary benefit. In addition to the drama, A Woman's Revenge, several other items will be introduced, and amongst those who have promised to assist are George Robey, Wilson Hallett, Albert Le Fre, Joe O'Gorman, Harry Tate, Rose Hamilton, Kitty Malone, and Amy Clevere.

"The Palace of Puck," which is to be withdrawn in a few weeks from the Haymarket will be followed by Mr. Michael Morton's adaptation of MM. Paul Garault and Robert Charvay's comedy, Mademoiselle Josette, Ma Femme, produced at the Paris Gymnase last November. The title chosen for the new piece, which is to be to some extent Anglicised, is that of My Wife, and Mr. Weedon Grossmith will rejoin the Haymarket company to take up an eccentric comedy rôle, which should be admirably suited to his style. Miss Marie Lohr, a young actress of great promise, is to be entrusted with the rôle of the heroine.

The Fanny Coleman testimonial matinée, which is to take place at the St. James's on Thursday, the 30th inst., is assuming interesting proportions. Mr. Jerrold Robertshaw has already succeeded in securing the services of Mr. John Hare and Mr. Charles Groves, in A Quiet Rubber, and of Mr. Cyril Maude and Miss Winifred Emery in a new duologue; while Miss Constance Collier and Mr. Robertshaw himself will appear in an adaptation entitled The Mummer's Wife, which the latter produced a few months ago. Songs and recitations by Mr. Lewis Waller, Mr. Hayden Coffin, Miss Helen Mar, Miss Irene Vanbrugh, and Miss Marie Tempest, will also figure in the programme.

A marked improvement is manifest in the Grand Opera House, Middlesbrough, since it was taken over by new management some few weeks ago. Mr. J. E. Jowsey, the popular managing-director, has left no stone unturned to secure the comfort of his patrons, and it is pleasant to notice that his efforts are being highly appreciated. The Opera House is a first-rate up-to-date provincial theatre, and as a number of the latest London companies are booked for the coming autumn, there is a treat in store for the Tees Side public, which we venture to predict will be taken full advantage of.

"Don Juan in Hell," the dream from Bernard Shaw's Man and Superman, will be included in the next series of Vedrenne-Barker matinées at the Court Theatre, which begin on June 4, and continue on each Tuesday and Friday of the month. The part of Don Juan will be played by Robert Loraine, that of the Devil by Mr. Norman McKinnel, the Statue by Mr. Michael Sherbrooke, and Donna Anna by Miss Lillah McCarthy. The programme will be made up by the same author's Man of Destiny, in which Mr. Dion Boucicault, Miss Irene Vanbrugh, Mr. Trevor Lowe, and Mr. H. de Lange will appear.

Miss Violet Ley (Mrs. Townsend Whitling) played with success the title-rôle, Lady Mary Crewys, in Peter's Mother at the Opera House, Southport, last Saturday.

Mr. Cecil Klein, while on his way recently to a rehearsal of Hearts Adrift, was an interested spectator of an amusing scene in an overcrowded Vanguard, of which the passengers were principally ladies. When the 'bus stopped at Tottenham Court-road, one of the ladies gave a shriek, and cried, "Mouse!" Instantly there was a stampede for the door, and the vehicle was quickly emptied with the exception of Mr. Klein and a small boy, who had been standing for some distance. The lad calmly collected three little white mice and placed them in his pocket, and then took up his position in the most comfortable corner of the 'bus. Judging by the expression on the boy's face, he had tried the ruse before.

Baron Harriss, who is ever to the fore in the cause of charity, during the visit of his Prince of Pilsen company to Aldershot, last week, organised an entertainment on Wednesday afternoon on behalf of the inmates of the Cambridge Hospital, which was attended with most gratifying results. The programme, arranged by Miss Sophie Harriss, who rendered a dainty number of her own composition in charming style, was contributed to by Misses Ada Watson, Connie Leon, Mollie Wynne, Ada Vincent, Violet Orme; Messrs. Frank Crimp, Lindon Lang, Albert Rhodes, G. F. Hume, Harry Kilburn, and Albert Vernon.

Miss Sophie Harriss celebrated the anniversary of her birthday at Norwich on Wednesday, when from an early hour in the morning wires, cablegrams, letters, and registered packets were literally showered upon her. The gifts from the company, in addition to a Marie Antoinette riviere in diamonds from Baron Harriss, included a magnificent basket of orchids from Mr. and Mrs. Harry Kilburn, bouquets from Misses Vincent and Orme, panel photograph frame in embossed silver from Mr. and Mrs. Albert Vernon, a quaint cut crystal case of Venetian design, containing rare Eastern perfumes, from Hugh Fleming, a gigantic floral trophy from the company en masse, and a simple basket of primroses and violets from the Nottingham gallery boys. After the performance in the evening Miss Harriss entertained the principals of the company to a recherche supper at the Opera House Hotel.

The company of Drury Lane children who recently gave a highly successful series of performances of their pantomime, The Forte Thieves, at Bexhill-on-Sea, have been secured by Mr. Bannister Howard for his Whitsuntide attraction at the Crystal Palace Theatre. These young people have been in the habit for several years of having a performance on their own account at Drury Lane during the run of the annual pantomime, in which they all appear, and the success they achieved at the charity performance at Bexhill was so great that the company was engaged for the entire week. The proceedings on each opening night are prefaced by a speech giving a short history of the combination. The flying matinée of Whit week will be furnished by Mrs. Patrick Campbell, who will appear on Thursday, May 23, in Magda.

The Balkan Exhibition at Earl's Court was opened on Saturday last by the Lord Mayor, who was supported by Lord Fitzmaurice, on behalf of the Foreign Office; M. Nicola Pachitch, the Servian Prime Minister; M. Stoyanovitch, Servian Minister of Commerce; M. Planenatz, of the Montenegrin Home Office; M. Ghenadieff, Bulgarian Minister of Commerce; M. Militchevitch, Servian Minister; and the diplomatic agents of all the Balkan States. Mr. P. Cremieu-Javal presided at the luncheon which followed, Sir William Treloar proposing "The Balkan States Exhibition," which was responded to by the Servian Minister. Few, if any, of the side-shows are as yet in working order; but the minor attractions which will soon be open to the visitors to Earl's Court are interesting and numerous.

The gold medal annually presented by Sir Squire and Lady Bancroft is awarded by the judges, Sir Charles Wyndham, Mr. E. S. Willard, and Mr. Dion Boucicault, to Mr. H. C. Bentley for his performance of the Prince of Morocco in the matinée last Monday at the St. James's Theatre, given by the students of the Academy of Dramatic Art. Miss Beatrice Smith, Miss Pauline Straus, and Miss Sheba Brozel are "honourably mentioned."

Mr. John R. Rogers, "Yours merrily," writing from America, says:—"I get my Era regularly, but sometimes it has a great chase to catch me. The last copy I received chased me over 9,000 miles, and caught me here in Pittsburg, Penn."

Little Miss Minnie Mills, the "baby mermaid" of the Peter Pan company on tour, doubled the part with that of Michael last week owing to the sudden indisposition of Master Phillip Tonge. Miss Mills, who is continuing in the rôle this week, is the daughter of Mr. Stratton Mills, the Gentleman Starkey, and is to be congratulated on her cleverness.

At the Muncaster Theatre, Bootle, on the 3rd inst., some excitement was caused by the fusing of a defective electric wire in the cinematograph box, which is situated in the pit. The theatre staff promptly quelled the outbreak before the arrival of the local fire brigade, and after a short delay the drama was proceeded with.

Mr. Frederick Melville will produce his new play, entitled The Root of Her Ruin, at the Terriss Theatre on Whit Monday, May 22. The company already engaged includes: Misses Eva Moss and Maude Stewart Drewery and Messrs. Ernest E. Norrie, A. B. Imeson, Jack Denton, Dave Clarke, and J. R. Aubrey.

Miss Agnes Verity, who concludes a successful ten months' engagement as Dynamite Ann in Miss Ida Molesworth and Mr. Mark Blow's At Cripple Creek company, has been re-engaged for the autumn by the same management.

Miss Lilly Lewis, the popular young actress, was the original of Mr. C. Perugini's "Woodland Symphony," the painting of a dainty maiden listening to the birds trilling in the trees, which has been so much admired in this year's Royal Academy Exhibition. Miss Lewis also sat for Mr. Stuart Davis's picture, entitled "Vanity," which is hung on the line in the New Gallery, Regent-street.

Dr. Distin Maddick is so much encouraged by the improved business at the Scala that he has every intention of running on for some weeks. The "lions" have now learnt their duties thoroughly and perform them excellently; and The Judgment of Pharaoh has drawn a number of the clergy to witness it. Though every seat in the house can be booked, it is curious to note that the public still cling to the queue, each waiting his turn for entry, and ignoring prominent posters announcing that "Seats can be booked in any part of the theatre."

Mrs. S. Brereton Douglas's pupils recited at the Portman Rooms on the 2nd inst. for a benefit performance for the Vicar of St. Mark's Institute, and met with a flattering reception. The young ladies who thus reflected so creditably on their accomplished teacher, were Misses Thelwall, Jean Pécriaux, and Mary Hope, the last-named having just concluded a successful engagement on tour as the official mother-in-law in A Chinese Honeymoon.

Mr. Hamilton Deane, who has met with such success in recruiting members for the Actors' Union, will take the chair at 2.30, on Tuesday next, at the London meeting, held in the Rehearsal Room, 3, Bedford-street, W.C. Mr. Goldsmid, who has so ably assisted him, will also be present.

Miss Cissie Du Cane, the young actress who has been playing the part of Prince Valiant at Hengler's, has resigned her position, and will resume her musical studies under Mr. Alderson. Miss Du Cane is the fortunate possessor of a fine voice, and a career of great promise is evidently before her.

A new four-act costume play, entitled The Song of the Torch, by Ion Hanford, will be produced at the Theatre Royal, Brighton, on Monday.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

MR. GEORGE ALEXANDER has authorised the Daily Mirror to state that there is no truth in the rumour that he contemplates an early retirement from active theatrical management in order to have more time to devote to his London County Council duties. "I am most certainly not thinking of any immediate retirement," said Mr. Alexander yesterday. "I am not quite played out yet, and though my life is full, I have time to dispense both my duties faithfully. So why should I give up my first love—the theatre? As to my taking up politics seriously and entering Parliament, well, I always have regarded politics seriously, and about Parliament—there's plenty of time yet."

Hard on Rosalind.

"A STUDENT of the A.D.A." writes:—"Dear Sir,—I should like to point out to you that not one of the daily papers has taken any notice of the non-appearance of the Duke in the second scene in As You Like It at the St. James's Theatre yesterday afternoon. When Rosalind cried 'Here comes the Duke!' no duke appeared—the actor had completely forgotten to return, and had gone to his dressing-room to prepare for his part in The Merchant of Venice. Thus Rosalind and Celia were done out of the only part in As You Like It, wherein they could have an opportunity of showing any talent they might have possessed. It was particularly hard on Rosalind, as she had no other part in the performance."

A Little Behind.

MR. MARTIN HARVEY says he is at present preparing a play for production some time in June, under the title of Great Possessions. The period of the play is A.D. 30, the scene is laid in Palestine, and the principal figure is the rich youth who was commanded to sell his possessions for the benefit of the poor. Some time ago Mr. Harvey had sent to him by a clergyman in Australia a play dealing with Joseph and his brethren, and, in the ordinary course, submitted it to the Censor, who decided that, as the story was avowedly adapted from the Scriptures, it was not eligible for licence. Mr. Harvey, however, is of opinion that Mr. Redford carries out his duties with admirable discretion. "I think," he said, "he moves slowly in the direction of public opinion, though somewhat behind it."

That Finished It.

MR. CHARLES HANNAN tells the following story against himself. One of his earliest literary efforts, long before he took to playwriting, was a story called "From the East of Time," which neither the author himself nor any of his friends could understand when it was finished. So he sent it to the theosophical magazine, which was then in its earlier numbers. It was at once accepted, and ran as leading serial for a number of months. After it had been appearing for some months, the author wrote, politely reminding the editor that no honorarium for his services had, so far, been received. The following was the reply:—"Dear Sir,—I regret to say that since the commencing of your serial, 'From the East of Time,' the magazine is no longer on a paying basis."

Realism and Rain.

DURING the visit of a certain realistic "water-tank" drama to a certain provincial theatre, the following incident occurred. The long-suffering lessee had frequently cause to complain to the proprietor that the rain came in through the roof, and begged him to come and see for himself, and have it repaired. During the second act of the drama a sailor is "marooned" on a desert island—"abandoned to the mercy of the storm"—and the scene, which is vividly realistic, culminates with the stage being deluged with "real rain," worked from a number of overhead water-tanks, concealed in the flies. It was a pouring wet night outside as well as in. This was the crucial moment the proprietor chose for his visit. He strolled leisurely past the check-taker, and entered the auditorium as the second act neared its stormy end. "Good Heavens!" exclaimed he, and rushed from the theatre. The next morning at 6.30 a.m., a gang of workmen appeared before the astonished night-fireman demanding admittance. "What do you want?" said he. "To repair the roof," said they. And they did.

Not a Bad Harlequin.

MR. LAURENCE LEVEY, who once owned the Garrick Theatre, Whitechapel, was the type of the good-humoured Israelite. Somebody asked him one Christmas Eve—"Aren't you having a pantomime this year, Mr. Levey?" "Vell," was the reply, "I don't know, my boy, whether I sha'll or not; I'm going to think it over to-morrow!" "But—the company, the harlequin, the——" "Oh," replied Levey, "I've got a thplendid 'Arlekin!" "Who is he?" said the enquirer. "Who? Vhy, Sol Jacobs!" "Oh; but he can't dance!" "No, I know that; but he's a damned good 'Arlequin though!" It was he of whom it is reported that when an actor wanted to play The Admirable Crichton the manager said—"All right! But you'll have to find your own Admiral's coat. I haven't got von!"

Bread for the Prince.

MR. EDWARD SIDNEY tells a tale of how one night in the provinces at a certain Prince of Wales's Theatre they were about to ring up the last act of a piece when it was suddenly discovered that a loaf of bread which should have been on the table was not there, the property-man having left the getting of it to his assistant, who had forgotten to obtain it. The entr'acte music had ceased, and the audience was getting impatient, so Sidney—who was dressed as a rough sailor—rushed out of the stage door across the street into a baker's shop, and, to the astonishment of the elderly lady shopkeeper—a new comer—said, snatching up a loaf and bolting off with it, "It's all right! It's for the Prince of Wales!" At the end of the play, and when he had dressed himself in his street clothes, he went across the road to pay for the loaf, but found the shutters up, the door open, and the old lady talking therein to a police officer with his pencil and notebook busy telling him how—"a mad sailor had rushed into her shop, stole a loaf, and said it was for the Prince of Wales!"

The Fat Seventh.

JOHN HUDSPETH the elder was a capital low comedian of a very comfortable rotundity. The play was The Forty Thieves, but, being short of supernumeraries, the company—John included—helped them out by walking across the front of the stage from left to right, crossing behind the scenes at the back and coming on again as before as the "Forty." This went on all right for a time, until a voice from the gallery exclaimed—"I say, Bill, every seventh's a fat 'un!"

Mr. Compton at Leeds.

MR. EDWARD COMPTON, in an address to the students of the Leeds College of Dramatic Art last Saturday, told the story of an actor who played the Duke in The Merchant of Venice, but had an unfortunate memory. His first speech was rather difficult, because he commenced before anyone else, with blank verse: "Shylock, the world thinks, and I think so too," &c. The Duke had the book there, and, not knowing the words, he had to refer to it. Unfortunately someone had turned the book over to another page, and, instead of his part he found himself confronted with Romeo and Juliet, which so upset him—though he did his best to look unconcerned—that he began, "Shylock, the world thinks, and I think so too," and then suddenly slammed the book down, with the words, "We all expect a gentle answer, Jew."

The expectations aroused by the preliminary announcements of Mr. Robert Edeson's appearance at the Aldwych in Strongheart have not been disappointed. To a certain extent the romance of the Red Indian has been discredited in the States. Artemus Ward, in one of his works, remarks, "Injuns is pizen, wherever found"; and a misconception on the part of some Western settler of the meaning of the famous line—has led to the Redskin being alluded to, with tolerative humour, as "Mr. Lo." But Catlin and Fennimore Cooper still exercise influence on English estimation; and we are quite willing to accept an Indian as an interesting hero, especially when he is represented as admirably as he is by Mr. Edeson in Strongheart.

The plot of the play deals with the passion of a copper-coloured youth for a fair American girl, and with the struggle between love and racial obstacles. Soangataha, known as Strongheart, has been sent to Columbia College by general subscription of his tribe. He falls in love with Dorothy Nelson, the sister of Frank Nelson, one of his college "chums." A bad undergraduate named Thorne plots with a sporting man, Fred Skinner, to ruin Nelson by throwing upon him suspicion of having betrayed to the college team which is shortly to oppose that of Columbia the code signals by which the captain directs his men when in action on the field. A copy of the signal code is sent to the captain of the opposing team; but he honourably returns it to his adversaries on the day of the match without reading it. Suspicion falls on Nelson; but Strongheart takes the blame—at any rate temporarily—upon his shoulders, and is accordingly forbidden to play till his character is cleared. Left behind in the dressing-room, which is the scene of the second act, and viewing the game from a window, he gives a vivid description of its progress to a wounded footballer lying on the floor in anguish. The team returns victorious; and, in the third act, Strongheart pursues investigations into the fraud, and discovers the real culprit. One of the footballers has hurt his right hand, and, at Strongheart's request, Thorne is induced to write down in a pretended telegram the principal words in the copy of the signal code. By comparing the handwriting of the latter—which was penned by the scheming Thorne—with that of the "wire," Strongheart proves him to be guilty; on which the latter turns on the Indian, and threatens to denounce him to Nelson for having made love to his sister. When the brother learns of this, he is furious at the idea of an alliance with a Redskin, and reproaches Strongheart bitterly with his "treachery." The latter refuses to accept the decision of the brother, and says he will only take his congé from the lady herself. But, in the end, he, too, is made to see that such a union would be impossible. A messenger from the tribe arrives, and reminds Strongheart solemnly that his first duty is to his people, especially as his father is now dead and he has become their chief. So, in spite of Dorothy's offer to risk all and go with him as his wife, the Indian refuses to accept her sacrifice, and, after a scene of deep distress, the lovers separate for ever.

Mr. Robert Edeson's performance as Soangataha is undoubtedly a very strong one. He has evidently studied with care the manner and speech of the educated Indian; and doubtless the deliberately accentuated enunciation and the slightly foreign accent are reproductions from life. In the emotional scene in the third act, Mr. Edeson makes the inherited savagery of Strongheart shine out most vividly. For the moment Soangataha is the child of his ancestors; on other occasions he is the adopted son of civilisation. His love-making is excellent in its tenderness and devotion, and his firm and gentle friendliness makes the character interesting and sympathetic. The intensity of his interpretation kept the house in hushed attention on Wednesday during the times when he held the stage. His description of an imaginary combat—an old familiar theatrical effect—was remarkable for the muscular vigour and physical endurance it displayed; and his fine features lent themselves well to the embodiment of the picturesque and highly "original" hero. Miss Mary Boland was a handsome, gracious, and expressive representative of Dorothy Nelson, and played well up to Mr. Edeson in the scenes between them, her outburst of grief on Dorothy's finding that she and Strongheart must part being very touching and natural. Mr. Frank McIntyre as Billy Saunders was unctuously comic and very portly and vigorous, making himself a great favourite by his adipose drollery. Mr. David Todd as a spectacled student of mild character was quaintly amusing; and Mr. Edmund Breese delivered the frantic appeals of the "head coach" with overpowering earnestness and energy, and was nobly oratorical as Black Eagle. Mr. Paul Dickey made the most of his single chance as the manager of the visiting team; Messrs Harrison Ford, Richard Sterling, and David Todd were entirely efficient as college men of various classes; Mr. F. A. Turner played Fred Skinner neatly; and Mr. Richard Bennett gave a very agreeable and effective embodiment of Dick Livingston. Miss Amy Ravenscroft was thoroughly satisfactory as Mrs. Nelson. Miss Marjorie Wood was a charming representative of Molly Livingstone; Miss Giulia Strakosch played Betty Bates very sweetly and prettily; and Miss Gertrude Thornton gave a delightful performance as Maud Weston. The minor rôles all had competent exponents.

The production will be memorable by reason of the remarkable realism of the football scenes, in which all the details of a club dressing-room in an interval in a college match are supplied. The care of the wounded, the angry expostulations of the "coach," the dilapidations in dress caused by the struggle, the dirt, and the wild devotion to the sport on the part of its devotees are shown with a realism which leaves nothing to be desired, and is valuably instructive as to the methods of our footballing brethren across the Atlantic. Strongheart had a most enthusiastic reception at the Aldwych on Wednesday from a highly-pleased house, and can hardly fail to be as successful in England as it has already been in America.

MARRIAGE OF ELLEN TERRY.

Miss Ellen Terry entered for the third time into the bonds of matrimony at Pittsburg on March 22, the bridegroom being the leading actor of her company, Mr. James Carew. The wedding, to avoid demonstration, was a very quiet one, and took place before a magistrate, who consented to keep the event a secret, Mr. Gordon Craig, who was in Italy, being the only person informed of it. The news was made public by Mr. Carew in New York on Saturday night. He and Miss Terry, it appeared, had been engaged for several months.

Mr. Carew's parents were Alsatians, and emigrated to Indiana, where he was born. At a suitable age he became a clerk in a Chicago bank. He saw Miss Terry act with Sir Henry Irving in Chicago, and immediately conceived a passion for the stage.

Mr. Carew, who is thirty-one years of age, has only been on the boards in America and London for nine years. He early distinguished himself by excellent performances as Tom Stafford in Sweet Kitty Bellairs at the Belasco Theatre, New York; in Clyde Fitch's play, The Climbers, and as Sam Coast in Her Own Way, sustaining the latter part with Miss Maxine Elliott when she came to the Lyric Theatre on April 25, 1905. After fulfilling an engagement with Messrs. Vedrenne and Barker at the Court, he appeared at the Criterion in The Little Stranger. He also played Frank Bruce in An Angel Unawares at Terry's on September 12, 1905; and his reputation as an actor of ability was secured when he came in contact with Miss Terry as Captain Hamlin Kearney in Captain Brassbound's Conversion at the Court Theatre in the March of 1906. He accompanied Miss Terry on her provincial tour, supporting her in such parts as Shylock and Benedick. He was the leading man in the company which Miss Terry took to America early last January. Captain Brassbound's Conversion proved a great success in the States; and Mr. Carew was unable to resist the combined fascinations of Miss Terry's genius and personality, and fell in love, "first with her art and then with herself." Miss Terry sailed from New York on the Minnetonka on Saturday, and it is Mr. Carew's intention to join his wife in England very soon.

Miss Terry's first husband was Mr. G. F. Watts, the artist, and her second Mr. E. A. Wardell, known on the stage as Charles Kelly. He died in 1885. By him Miss Terry had two children, Miss Ailsa Craig, who has concerned herself with such excellent effect with costume, and Mr. Gordon Craig, whose innovations in scenery and stage lighting are famous.

MR. JAMES CAREW.

Some doubt having been thrown upon the report of Miss Terry's marriage, a Tribune correspondent succeeded in communicating with her by means of wireless telegraphy to and from the Minnetonka. Miss Terry wired in reply: "Please ask my leading man, Mr. James Carew."

Mr. Campbell, Justice of the Peace at Pittsburg, has admitted that he officiated at the marriage.

The New York American publishes an interview with Mr. James Carew. "She is my senior by many years," said Mr. Carew, "but I can think of her only as a young and charming woman."

It appears that the judge who married them at Pittsburg asked Miss Terry if she had ever been married before. "Yes, twice," she replied.

"What became of your first husband?" he inquired, and Miss Terry replied: "It was a most unhappy marriage, and we obtained a divorce. It was a great mistake."

To the judge's question, "How old are you?" she said, laughingly, "Good gracious, must I tell that, too? I am fifty-nine. Please don't tell anyone."

The judge agreed to keep the marriage a secret, as the parties did not desire publicity to be given it, fearing that it might be imagined they wished to make advertising capital out of it.

THE REHEARSAL CLUB.

A fashionably-dressed crowd, mainly composed of ladies, had possession of the St. James's Theatre on Tuesday afternoon, when the annual meeting of the Rehearsal Club was held. Princess Christian of Schleswig-Holstein, the president of the Club, attended, and was accompanied by Princess Victoria. Their Royal Highnesses were presented with bouquets by Master Esmond, the small son of Miss Eva Moore. Mr. George Alexander was detained at a meeting of the London County Council, but Mrs. George Alexander occupied a seat on the right of the chairman, Mr. Edward Terry acting in that capacity. Others on the stage were the Rev. Canon Holmes, Miss Lilian Braithwaite, Miss Eva Moore, Mr. Allan Aynesworth, Miss Phyllis Broughton, Miss Gertrude Kingston, Miss Marie Tempest, Miss Helen Ferrers, and Mr. F. Kerr.

The report for 1906 was as follows:—

The committee, in issuing their fifteenth annual report (with duly audited accounts), deem it almost unnecessary to dwell upon the need of such an institution, since the keen appreciation of its advantages, displayed by the members, must be a proof that it supplies a real want.

The Rehearsal Club was founded in 1892, with the view of furnishing a quiet retreat to which minor actresses might resort between the hours of rehearsals and matinées and the evening performance. Many of these actresses live too far from their work to admit of their returning home during the intervals, and, in such cases, warm, cheerful rooms, where rest and shelter from inclement weather can be obtained, together with refreshments at moderate charges, must be an invaluable boon.

Among those accustomed to view the theatre only from the auditorium, and who derive pleasure from the gay scenes on the stage, few perhaps realise the amount of hard work involved in the rehearsal of a play, or can imagine the strain on nerves, brain, and body necessary to produce the precision of "ensemble" and brilliancy of effect which they have so much admired. It has been the endeavour of the Rehearsal Club to afford the much-required repose and shelter to those for whom health means livelihood.

Is it not the duty of each and all of us to assist the hardest-worked members of a hard-worked profession, and endeavour to make their lives less difficult, remembering that their exertions have often helped to distract our minds from our own cares and anxieties.

It must be evident to all that the Club can never be self-supporting, and that a central position is an imperative necessity and a costly one, so the committee are obliged to depend on outside help.

The annual subscribers' meeting was held on May 8, at St. James's Theatre, thanks to Mr. George Alexander's unfailing kindness in helping the Rehearsal Club. The meeting was honoured by the presence of the president, H.R.H. Princess Christian of Schleswig-Holstein, who found time, among her numerous engagements, thus to show her kindly interest in the Club; H.R.H. Princess Victoria of Schleswig-Holstein also honoured the meeting by her presence.

The committee thank very heartily Sir Squire Bancroft, who presided at the meeting; also Viscount Halifax, Mr. George Alexander, Mr. A. W. Pinero, Mr. Edward Terry, Miss Lena Ashwell, Miss Constance Collier, Mrs. Jopling-Rowe, Mrs. Cecil Raleigh, and Mrs. Beerbohm Tree, who all spoke warmly of the great benefits conferred by the Club on those who have joined it. Warm thanks are also tendered by the committee to the many kind friends who, by special gifts, have shown personal interest in the Club.

The members' subscription is 2s. per quarter. The Club is open from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m., and contains comfortable reading and refreshment rooms, the former well supplied with books, papers, and magazines. Anyone wishing to see the Club will be gladly shown over it by one of the committee or by the matron.

Fifty-eight new members joined during the year; the attendances amounted to about six thousand.

Subscriptions and donations may be paid to the Hon. Treasurer, Mrs. Mayne, 101, Queen's-gate, S.W.; or into the Victoria-street Branch of the London and Westminster Bank, "to the credit of the Rehearsal Club."

THE CHAIRMAN, in a brief opening statement, remarked upon the success of the Club, and to the fact that there was a greater access of new members in 1906 than in any previous year. The Club had inestimable advantages to the younger lady members of the profession, inasmuch as they would find a happy and comfortable refuge there between matinées or rehearsals, and the evening performances. He felt sure that everybody present would do all in his or her power to assist such a useful and entirely commendable institution.

MR. ALLAN AYNESWORTH proposed a vote of thanks to Princess Christian, and voiced the gratitude of everybody present for the kindly interest which Her Royal Highness took in the Club.

MISS EVA MOORE seconded the vote of thanks in a graceful little speech.

CANON HOLMES, in proposing a vote of thanks to the committee, said that the Club was run for the benefit of minor actresses. He himself was a minor actor in the great play of life. It was just these minor people to whom they should stretch out a helping hand. The idea of these minor people was to become what so many in that theatre had already become, and it was in the processes of that "becoming" that great difficulties had to be encountered. He concluded by an appeal for funds.

MISS LILIAN BRAITHWAITE, in seconding, said that as a member of the profession for whose benefit the Club was founded she was glad to have an opportunity of thanking the ladies who were responsible for its management. Especially did she feel grateful to the indefatigable hon. treasurer, Mrs. Mayne. The Club was of inestimable benefit to the girl who had to fill up her time between the day rehearsal and the evening performance. She had a place wher she could rest and obtain refreshments at a small cost. It was their ambition that the Club should be self-supporting, but this was not possible if the present low subscription was to be maintained, and it was the privilege of all present to subscribe to the institution.

THE CHAIRMAN said that it required no words of his to advocate that vote of thanks.

MRS. MAYNE, in responding, said that the committee did not want to be thanked. She was voicing the ideas of every one of its members when she said that it was a pleasure for them all to do any work for the Rehearsal Club. The committee, on their part, desired to return thanks to Princess Christian, the Press, and all the other people who had helped. They had never had so many new members as they had last year, which seemed a very satisfactory state of things.

MR. FREDERICK KERR, proposing a vote of thanks to Mr. George Alexander, expressed the opinion that it was a great joy to them that their leaders in the profession were not spoiled by prosperity. Mr. Alexander was no exception to that rule. In spite of his strenuous labours in various directions, he still managed to take an interest in such institutions as the Rehearsal Club. Mr. Alexander had worthily upheld the best traditions of the stage. He had given the public the best plays and the best actors. Many famous actors and actresses had made their triumphs on that stage, notably Mrs. Patrick Campbell and Mrs. John Wood. Mr. Alexander, too, had taken a delight in bringing forward the most promising young actresses of the day—Miss Irene Vanbrugh, Miss Gertrude Kingston, Miss Eva Moore, Miss Lilian Braithwaite, and others. They owed him a deep debt of gratitude for his work in connection with the Rehearsal Club. The Club was as dignified as any ladies' club in London. He (Mr. Kerr) would ask Mrs. Alexander to tell her husband how grateful they were to him for his kindness and generosity.

MISS PHYLLIS BROUGHTON, in the absence of Miss Alexandra Carlisle, briefly seconded the vote.

MISS GERTRUDE KINGSTON proposed a vote of thanks to Mr. Edward Terry for presiding, and it was announced that Mr. James Welch, who should have been present to second the vote, was unable to attend, but had sent a couple of guineas.

The chairman's reply brought the meeting to a close.

COUNTY THEATRE, KINGSTON.

On Monday, May 6, the Comic Opera, by Planquette, entitled

"LES CLOCHES DE CORNEVILLE."

Kingston playgoers assembled in considerable force at the riverside theatre on Monday, and again gave a hearty reception to this favourite comic opera, which, like good wine, seems to improve rather than grow stale with age. Mr. E. St. Alban, who is producing, plays Gaspard, which he has depicted now some eight hundred times, and it may suffice to say that he gives a picture of the avaricious old man worthy of the best traditions. Mr. Wm. Everard makes a commanding Marquis de Corneville, and gives evidence of culture in the numbers allotted to him. The part of Gremcheaux is agreeably filled by Mr. Charles Rose; Mr. Fred Dark makes a typical Baillie; and Mr. Richard Martin an amusing Gobo. Encomiums are bestowed from all parts of the house upon Miss Marion Ayling for her Germaine; and Miss Madge Roberts is equally successful as Serpolette, the singing of both ladies being much enjoyed. Miss Nellie May acquits herself well as Christophe. There is a numerous and well-trained chorus, which is kept well under control by Chevalier Legrand, the chef d'orchestre. In the matter of scenery, costumes, and stage appointments nothing is wanting.

THE ENGLISH DRAMA SOCIETY.

Under the direction of Mr. Nugent Monck, the English Drama Society opened a season at the Bijou Theatre, Bayswater, on Monday evening, when two new pieces were produced. The first was a play in one act by Arthur Symons, entitled

"CLEOPATRA IN JUDÆA."

Herod ..... Mr. Arthur Goodsall
Pheroras ..... Mr. Geoffrey Saville
Costabaras ..... Mr. Edward Landor
Hyecamus ..... Mr. Frederick Morland
Phanuel ..... Mr. Gordon Bailey
Sohemus ..... Mr. Tom Shelford
Officer ..... Mr. Edgar Playford
Cleopatra ..... Miss Esmé Beringer
Charmion ..... Miss Ina Royle
Iras ..... Miss Hilda Bruce Potter

Cleopatra in Judæa is one of those plays that strike one as being more suitable for the study than the stage. The plot is thin, and there is a long, tedious opening scene before the entrance of Cleopatra, King Herod and his councillors being assembled in the palace in solemn conclave. The arrival of Cleopatra is the topic which occupies their attention, and the councillors have some very uncomplimentary remarks to make concerning the queen. One of them refers to her as the "Egyptian plague," while another strongly advises Herod not to grant her an interview, as it is well known that she casts her spell upon all men she comes into contact with. The discussion, however, is interrupted by the entrance of Cleopatra, and her interview alone with Herod is the only interesting part of the play. Cleopatra's evident intention is to add the King to the list of her lovers, and she begins by hinting that Herod's wife is like all other women—capable of deceit and treachery. The King, however, expresses the firmest faith in his wife's virtue. Then Cleopatra shows him the portrait of his wife, which has been sent to Antony, the superscription being in her handwriting. The King is furious at this convincing proof of his spouse's perfidy, and next he learns that Antony has designs against his life. Believing that Herod will now fall in with her desires, she tells him that she can make him more powerful than Antony. He momentarily yields, but finally quits the Queen's presence, bidding her a long farewell. Her attendant, Charmion, enters, and her mistress indulges in a furious fit of temper at her failure with Herod. The play concludes with the departure of the Queen from Judæa.

Miss Esmé Beringer gave fresh evidence of her ability as an actress by her admirable embodiment of the leading character, the imperious, passionate Egyptian queen. An excellent elocutionist, she gave the poetic lines their due value, and the outburst of passion, when Cleopatra exclaims to her attendant, "I have failed, Charmion—and with this Jew!" was most effectively done. Altogether, Miss Beringer may be congratulated on her very clever and artistic creation. Mr. Arthur Goodsall deserves every credit for his dignified impersonation of Herod; Mr. Gordon Bailey did well as Phanuel; and the other councillors were ably played by Messrs. Geoffrey Saville, Edward Landor, Frederick Morland, and Tom Shelford. Miss Ina Royle was a satisfactory Charmion; and Miss Hilda Bruce Potter as Iras and Mr. Edgar Playford as an officer completed the cast. The play had a favourable reception, and was followed by a comedy in three acts, by Nugent Monck, entitled

"THE HOUR."

Rev. Matthew Lane ..Mr. Frederick Morland
Roy Lane ..... Mr. Arthur Goodsall
Esta Lane ..... Miss Lucy Wilson
Dennis Hinton ..... Mr. Gordon Bailey
Miss Kate Brett ..... Miss Clare Greet
Charles Craddock ..... Mr. Edward Landor
Jane Abbott ..... Miss Armine Grace

In his so-called comedy Mr. Monck has tackled a problem that borders on the tragic. The Rev. Matthew Lane, Rector of Winterton, is a benevolent clergyman of the simple Vicar of Wakefield type. He is always more or less in pecuniary difficulties, and this is not surprising seeing that he never refuses those who apply to him for assistance. Besides, the college education of his son Roy, who is intended for the Church, has drained his slender resources, and his daughter Esta is driven to despair in her attempts to keep up appearances and to satisfy the demands of the village tradespeople, whose little accounts have been long outstanding. A climax is reached when the local grocer, who combines the Socialist with the Methodist, presses for payment in the presence of Dennis Hinton, a wealthy young man, and one of Roy's college chums. Roy confesses to his sister that he has been studying theology and philosophy, and has come to the conclusion that the atheists are right; he cannot, therefore, enter the Church. This avowal drives Esta to desperation, and she announces her intention of running away with Dennis Hinton, whose proposal she had just previously rejected. The eccentric conduct of the young lady in refusing to wed her lover when the opportunity comes, kills all the sympathy that the audience might otherwise have felt for Esta in her difficulties and trials, and one is not inclined to take a deep interest in her subsequent adventures. Regarded as a whole The Hour does not exhibit those qualities which combined go to make a successful modern play.

The new production was fairly well acted. Mr. Frederick Morland played naturally as the benevolent, unworldly Rector of Winterton. Mr. Arthur Goodsall undertook the part of Roy Lane with considerable success; and Mr. Gordon Bailey was good as Dennis Hinton. Miss Lucy Wilson made capital use of her opportunities in the part of the Rector's daughter with unconventional views on the subject of marriage; and Miss Clare Greet rendered excellent service as Kate Brett, one of the objects of the good Rector's charity. Mr. Edward Landor as Craddock, the plain-speaking grocer, and Miss Armine Grace as Jane Abbott, were well placed. In the somewhat long intervals a programme of music was played on the pianoforte by Miss Constance Schultz.

Presentation.—There was a crowded audience at the Blackburn Theatre Royal on Friday evening, the 3rd inst., when Mr. Reginald Yorke, the popular manager of the theatre, took his benefit. Mr. Allan Wilkie's company appeared in the plays, David Garrick and The Bells. At the conclusion of the performance of David Garrick, Mr. "Reggie" Yorke was presented with a silver clock and silver candlesticks, the former article bearing the inscription, "Presented to Mr. Reginald Yorke by the staff of the Theatre Royal and a few friends." Mrs. Yorke was presented with two silver brushes and a silver looking-glass. The presentation was made by Mr. J. W. Carter, who observed that Mr. Yorke was a "chip of the old block," and a worthy successor to his father, Mr. Harry Yorke. Mr. Yorke briefly replied; and Mr. Harry Yorke, the proprietor of the theatre, in a short speech, announced that next year he intended to rebuild the Theatre Royal. He had purchased property on the Cliveworth-street site which would give them an increased width of 80ft., and when completed they would have a theatre well worthy of the town. When the theatre was rebuilt he intended to keep to the popular prices.

The professional musicians of the Orchestral Association and the Amalgamated Musicians Union are to meet together in general meeting on Sunday evening, at the small Queen's Hall, to decide as to their common action in the future, and to fix a minimum salary at the various music-halls of London. They will also take into consideration the position of non-members of either society, and their attitude towards them.

THE COURT.

On Tuesday afternoon, May 7, revival of the Pierrot Play, in Three Acts,
by Laurence Housman and Granville Barker,
Music by Joseph Moorat, entitled

"PRUNELLA; OR, LOVE IN A DUTCH GARDEN."

Pierrot ..... Mr. W. Graham Browne
Scaramel ..... Mr. James Hearn
Kennel ..... Mr. Trevor Lowe
Callow ..... Mr. Allen Wade
Mouth ..... Mr. Edmund Gwenn
Hawk ..... Mr. Kenelm Foss
Tawdry ..... Miss Dorothy Marsdin
Doll ..... Miss Margaret Busse
Romp ..... Miss Mary Hamilton
Coquette ..... Miss Hazel Thompson
A Light Baritone ..... Mr. Julien Henry
Prim ..... Mrs. Charles Maltby
Privacy ..... Miss Amy Lamborn
Prude ..... Miss Agnes Hill
Queer ..... Miss Clare Greet
Quaint ..... Miss Agnes Thomas
First Gardener ..... Mr. Jules Shaw
Second Gardener ..... Mr. F. Cremlin
Third Gardener ..... Mr. Edmund Gurney
Boy ..... Mr. Norman Page
Statue of Love ..... Mr. Lewis Casson
Prunella ..... Miss Dorothy Minto

Originally produced at Christmas, 1904, Prunella was revived at the Court Theatre last spring for a short season. This dainty and charming little play has always been much appreciated by Court audiences, who enjoy its fantastic love story, its delightful humour, and delicate pathos. It will be remembered that the plot is based on an episode in the life of Pierrot, and the moral which one can draw from the story is that, after all, selfish love is but vanity, and that the love that is ready to prove itself faithful even to death is the only real and abiding joy. The picture of the Dutch garden, with the gossiping gardeners, and its suggestions of a place remote from the toil and turmoil of cities, is delightful, and the authors of the piece, fully aware of the value of contrast, bring the first act to a close by the intrusion of Pierrot and his noisy, romping crowd of followers, who suddenly transform the peaceful scene into one where the fascinating elements of the world of love and pleasure are first brought under the notice of youth and innocence, with the result that the girl Prunella takes flight from the nest which has sheltered her from childhood.

The part of Prunella, originally played by Miss Thyrza Norman, is now undertaken by Miss Dorothy Minto, who also portrayed this leading character at the revival last year. She is just the simple, childlike little maiden that the authors evidently had in mind, and Miss Minto again won the favourable verdict of a critical Court audience. Mr. Granville Barker was the original Pierrot. His successor in the part, Mr. W. Graham Browne, appears by kind permission of Mr. George Alexander, and his performance throughout reaches a high level of excellence. Mr. James Hearn also deserves commendation for his capital embodiment of the Mephistophelian-like Scaramel. Mr. Trevor Lowe is good as Kennel; and Callow, Mouth, and Hawk, also members of Pierrot's motley company, are capitally portrayed by Messrs. Allen Wade, Edmund Gwenn, and Kenelm Foss. Miss Dorothy Marsdin does well as Tawdry; Miss Margaret Busse is vivacious as Doll; Miss Mary Hamilton ably plays Romp; and Miss Hazel Thompson deserves mention as Coquette. Mrs. Charles Maltby gives a neat sketch of Prim; Miss Amy Lamborn supplies an effective portrait of Privacy; and Miss Agnes Hill's Pride is a meritorious piece of work. Miss Clare Greet as Queer and Miss Agnes Thomas as Quaint do justice to their respective parts. Mr. Jules Shaw makes good use of his opportunities as the First Gardener; and the Second and Third Gardeners have capital exponents in Mr. F. Cremlin and Mr. Edmund Gurney. Mr. Norman Page puts humour into his clever embodiment of the Boy; and Mr. Lewis Casson represents the Statue of Love. Mr. Julien Henry, as "a light baritone," sings the serenade to Prunella in charming style.

"MISS SELINA OF K."

A New Musical Comedy, book and lyrics by E. C. Mabel Leeds, music by Claude Blakesley-Yearsley, produced for the first time on any stage at a matinée at the Royal County Theatre, Kingston-on-Thames, on Saturday, May 4.

"Molly," Lady Selina ..... Miss Emily Taylor

There was a numerous audience at the Royal County Theatre on Saturday afternoon, when the joint efforts of Miss Leeds and Mr. Blakesley-Yearsley was presented for the first time, and obtained a favourable reception. The plot has to do with the adventures of a certain young lady, the wayward daughter of the Duke of Camden Town. For a bit of fun apparently, she dresses up as a cockle girl, and in that capacity makes the acquaintance of a Captain Blake, who happens to be in the bay of Bryncawl, South Wales, when "Molly," as Lady Selina calls herself, is there. The Captain, of course, falls in love with her. He confesses that he is not worthy of her, being only the captain of a schooner, but he explains that he had once occupied a much more responsible and lucrative post when he was the captain of a liner, which he lost through running down a yacht and drowning a duke and his son and grandson. In due course the amorous captain finds out that the seeming cockle girl is really a lady of title, and he feels that his chances of winning her are smaller than ever, until he meets her father, who learns for the first time that the young man, in sending his ducal ancestor to a watery grave, was the potential agency that had brought the dukedom and the vast estates connected with it into his hands. For this service he bestows his daughter's hand upon him. There was an abundance of lyrics, some of them set to rather tuneful airs, and all cleverly written, but they appeared to have no connection with the plot.

The play was performed by a company of amateurs, of whose efforts it would not be fair to speak in terms of strict criticism. Suffice it to say that the part of "Molly" was charmingly portrayed by Miss Emily Taylor, that Mr. Ernest Crespan made a very good Duke of Camden Town, whilst admirable assistance was also given by Mr. Alec Davidson as Major Walker, by Mr. E. Christopher as Colonel Wyatt, by Mr. Gilbert Dewar as Professor Septimus Stanhope, and by Miss Marjorie Seymour as Nancy Gay. The play was produced by Mr. A. F. Alfen Tower.

DEATH OF PAUL BELMORE.

We regret to record the death of Mr. Paul Belmore, at the early age of thirty-four, from cerebro-meningitis and heart disease. The deceased was a member of the Leah Kleschna company, playing the part of Kleschna, originally created by Mr. Charles Warner. While the company was in Sunderland Mr. Belmore was taken seriously ill, and had to be left behind. He passed away on Sunday last, at 5 p.m., after an illness of only ten days' duration. His devoted wife, Miss Bessie Rignold, who played the title-part in Leah Kleschna, made three journeys from Seacombe (where the company was engaged last week) to Sunderland and back to visit her husband, but the terrible strain proved too much for her strength, and on Friday night she broke down in the second act of the play, her part having to be taken at a moment's notice by Miss Ethel Russell. Mr. Belmore was known chiefly in the provinces as an actor of genuine ability, and he was held in high esteem by all those with whom he was associated. He was a prominent member of the late Wilson Barrett's company for six years, up to the time of Mr. Barrett's death, playing such parts as Jaikes in The Silver King, Reggie Mount-fallon in Lucky Durham, &c. He was well known and popular, both in America and Australia. He also enacted Svengali in Mr. Beerbohm Tree's Trilby company, and was excellent as Levison in East Lynne. Deep and general sympathy will be felt for his widow in the severe bereavement she has so suddenly sustained.

The funeral took place at Norwood Cemetery yesterday morning. The chief mourners were Mr. Wm. Belmore Garstin (brother), Mrs. Cooper Cliffe (sister), Mr. George Belmore (nephew) son of the late George Belmore, Mr. Wm. Cooke (son of the late proprietor of Astley's), Mr. Claude Cooke, and Mr. Victor C. Cooke (uncle). There were also present Miss Rignold, Mr. J. Finighan, and others. The funeral service was conducted by the Rev. W. S. Mathews, the cemetery chaplain. The polished oak coffin, which bore the name of the deceased (Paul Belmore Garstin) and his age, was covered with many floral tributes of affection and respect from relatives and friends, including the widow (Miss Bessie Rignold), Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Belmore, Mr. and Mrs. Cooper Cliffe (brother-in-law and sister), Mrs. Belmore (mother), George and Edward Belmore (nephews), Miss Ettie Carlyle (cousin), Agnes and Doris Cliffe (cousins), Alf and Lilley Cooke (cousins), Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Gay, Mr. Arthur Leigh, Francis Wolverton, Mr. Harold Armitage, Mr. Stanley Harrison, Mr. J. Finighan, Miss Dora Green, Miss Emmerson, Miss Eunice Newey, Mr. Harry Rutland, Mr. Chatterton, Mrs. Deley, and Mrs. Heginbothom; also from members of the Leah Kleschna company, the Lucky Durham company, and Frank Lloyd (East Lynne company).

The funeral arrangements were satisfactorily carried out by Messrs. W. Garstin and Sons, of Wigmore-street, W.

MADAME KATE FLINN'S CONCERT.

At Steinway Hall on Thursday afternoon Mme. Kate Flinn gave a highly-successful concert, attended by a large and fashionable audience. Mme. Flinn was assisted by Mr. David Bispham, Mons. Léon Sametini, and several of her advanced pupils, who did great credit to their gifted teacher. The programme, which was interesting and varied, commenced with Lane Wilson's duet, "At dewy morn," cleverly sung by two of Mme. Flinn's pupils, Miss Barbara Battishill and Miss Ruby Cobbett. Miss G. von Jaysen also was intensely successful in two songs from Landon Ronald's "The cycle of life." The songs are set to verses of Mr. Harold Simpson's; the second proving pleasing in melody and with a most artistic accompaniment. Miss Margaret Webster, another of Mme. Flinn's pupils, gave a capital rendering of "The bee's courtship," by Guy d'Hardelot. A song with dance, entitled "Good-night at the Zoo," by Lionel Monckton, was well sung and most cleverly danced by Miss Elaine Hawkins, a pupil from Brighton; this being encored, Miss Hawkins responded with another song and dance. Miss Barbara Battiskill, who has a very high soprano voice, sang with no little delicacy, Liszt's "Comment disaient-ils" and "L'Amour captif," by Chaminade. M. Léon Sametini played Vieuxtemps' "Romance" for the violin, and Lederer's "Bourrée" with much grace and expression, and in the second part of the programme "Witches' Dance" (Paganini). Mme. Kate Flinn, who had a most hearty reception, sang "Le Crépuscule" of Massenet and Gounod's "Chanson de la Sorcière (Mireille) with great success, and being, of course, encored, responded with a little English and American song, given by desire. Mr. David Bispham, who was in excellent voice, sang Clara Schumann's "Liebst du un Schönheit," and "L'Heure Exquise," by Reynaldo Hahn, with delightful phrasing and perfect intonation; being encored, Mr. Bispham sang "Ich grolle Nicht." Other successful pupils of Mme. Flinn were Miss Ruby Cobbett, who greatly pleased the audience by her rendering of "La Cieca" from Ponchielli's "La Gireonda," and for her encore, singing the Gavotte from Mignon; Mlle. Sowinska, heard in Auber's "Nina, Jolie et sage"; Miss Leah Barnato, a daughter of the late Barney Barnato, and a very handsome girl, proved a great credit to her clever instructress, Mme. Kate Flinn. The young lady has a golden voice, and her enunciation was perfect in a recitation, entitled "The Little Breeches," one of Col. John Hay's clever sketches. In the second part the Misses Hayden-Price sang the duet, "A Madrigal in May," and Mr. Bispham was again heard in "The Irish Kings" (H. F. Gilbert) and "The stuttering lovers" (old Irish air by Mr. Herbert Hughes). Miss Xenia Greville performed a graceful skirt dance and song (by Lionel Monckton), and the concert concluded with Cowen's trio, "In our boat," in which Miss Battishill, Mlle. Sowinska, and Miss Cobbett were heard. The accompanists were Miss Adami and Mr. Russburg.

INSURANCE OF ARTISTS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—At a meeting held by the Touring Managers' Association to-day (Friday) the attention of the members was drawn to a paragraph in the Press in which it was said that a certain manager was already attempting to deduct the amount to cover the insurance from his artists' salaries. I have been requested by the Touring Managers' Association to say that such a course is quite foreign to their views, and they consider it undignified.—Yours faithfully,

G. B. LAMBERT, Hon. Sec. T.M. Assoc.
Savoy Mansions, W.C., May 10.

At the Theatre Royal, Wednesbury, Mr. Frank Lindo and company in the interesting drama Home, Sweet Home, are proving a great attraction this week. Mr. Lindo achieves marked success in his impersonation of Steve Armitage; and as David Armitage Mr. Lawrence Doyle leaves little to be desired; Mr. Gerald Gambier's portrayal of the Duke of Ancaster is received with hearty applause; the rôle of Lucas Lyle is artistically rendered by Mr. F. M. Hodgson; Mr. Geo. Overs is responsible for some clever work in the part of Dick Redmayne; Miss Marion Wakeford proves herself a highly capable artist in her interpretation of Joan; Miss Cecil Ward as Lady Summerton and Miss Ray Rochefort are seen to advantage in their respective parts.

The King, Princess Christian, Princess Victoria of Schleswig-Holstein, the Duchess of Connaught, and Princess Victoria Patricia of Connaught were present at the performance of Bastien und Bastiene and Hansel und Gretel at the Royal Opera, Covent Garden, on Saturday.

"ORDERED TO THE FRONT."

A Dramatic Sketch, by William Bourne, Produced at the Stratford Empire, on Monday, May 6.

Capt. Harold Montrevor ..... Mr. Chas. Boult.
James Woodruffe ..... Mr. Arthur Rodney.
Rev. Arthur Graham ..... Mr. Harry Crane.
Mike Kavanagh ..... Mr. Allan Wye.
Helen Montrevor ..... Mrs. Bennett.
Jennie ..... Miss Alys Eden.

The ancient Romans had a warning to those who wrote which is even more applicable to-day than it was over two thousand years ago. That warning was Litera scripta manet. Had the wife of Harold Montrevor remembered that warning some years previously, in her irresponsible early womanhood, she would not, perhaps, have written a note to one James Woodruffe, asking him to meet her. On the other hand, she could not have foreseen that Handsome Jim, as he was then called, would turn out such a despicable cad as to convert what was, at the time it was written, a perfectly innocent missive into, some years later, a most incriminating document. Captain Harold Montrevor is on the eve of sailing for South Africa—the period is the late Boer War—and he is visited by Woodruffe, formerly a brother officer of Montrevor, but now a disreputable character. Woodruffe offers to sell certain Boer papers to Montrevor, who declines to purchase them, and, as apparently the former is unable to obtain money from the gallant captain, he indulges in threats. Mrs. Montrevor enters the room during the quarrel. She is recognised by Woodruffe, who impudently calls her by her Christian name. In the hope of causing further mischief the unwelcome visitor hides behind a screen, the others believing that he has gone. When Montrevor leaves Woodruffe sneaks from his hiding place, and is confronted by Mrs. Montrevor. There is a violent scene in which the ruffian throws the lady to the ground, and then departs, after placing the old letter on a table. Captain Montrevor sees the letter, suspects his wife of a guilty relationship, and renounces her. He goes to the front, and it is reported that he is making every effort to get himself killed. In the dangerous enterprise of fusing some of the Boer ammunition he is rendered blind. Mrs. Montrevor has gone out to South Africa as a nurse. She hears of her husband's misfortune, and she must tend him herself. When he finds out who is nursing him, there is a reconciliation, he regains his sight, and the curtain falls upon the announcement of peace just as the renegade Woodruffe and some Boers are setting fire to the cottage which is being used as a nursing shelter.

Mr. Charles Boult cuts a fine figure in his handsome full Highland "regimentals," and he acts with considerable forcefulness. It is in a very able manner that he typifies the gallant soldier and the man of honour, who feels that he has no further use for life after what he believes to be the unfaithful conduct of his wife. In the somewhat pathetic rôle of Helen Montrevor Mrs. Bennett plays with fine feeling and emotion, and admirably sustains her reputation for tragedy. Mr. Allan Wye is amusing as an Irishman, and Mr. Arthur Rodney furnishes a good character study of a desperate ne'er-do-well. Mr. Harry Crane, as a military chaplain and Miss Aldys Eden as a maid perform their parts in an adequate manner. The little piece is admirably staged.

MR. ARTHUR VERNE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—May I encroach upon your kindness and space to present to your readers and friends the sad case of Mr. Arthur Verne, comedian? Mr. Verne joined my Dare-Devil Dorothy company in December, 1902, as principal comedian, and played the part till March, 1906, when, through weakness in the legs, he was compelled to relinquish his engagement. He was under medical treatment at his home till May, when he went into hospital as an in-patient till July. He was discharged, and rejoined the company, Aug. 13; but in September, four weeks after, at Manchester, was suddenly stricken with paralysis in the right side, leaving him entirely helpless, and, of course, had to resign his part again. Since then, to the present time, he has been totally incapacitated, and although a very prudent and well-living man, his savings are quite exhausted.

Mr. Verne's previous engagements were:—Four years with The Prodigal Parson; he also toured with The Days of Cromwell, Our Irish Visitors, &c.; pantomimes at Standard Theatre, London; Princess's, Glasgow (two seasons); Theatre Royal, Manchester; Grand Theatre, Cardiff; Theatre Royal, Plymouth, &c.

I should like to say that during the long period Verne was under my management I always found him sober, industrious, and a splendid comedian and dancer, and always willing to help brother artists in distress.

I feel sure there are many old friends who would be glad to help poor Verne now he is unable to help himself.

Subscriptions will be gratefully received and acknowledged by Henry Swinerd, Royal Artillery Theatre, Woolwich; or by J. W. Cordiner, Dare Devil Dorothy Company, en route.—Yours truly,

At a special session of the Aldershot Licensing Bench, held on the 3rd inst., Mr. Clarence Sounes, in applying for a renewal of his stage licence for Aldershot Theatre Royal and Opera House, which holds both a theatrical and music hall licence, asked that in Clause 20 of the licence there should be inserted a stipulation that no smoking should be permitted in the auditorium when the theatre was being used for the production of stage plays, but that smoking be permitted when variety performances were being held. There was no intention whatever of allowing smoking during the production of stage plays. No objection was raised to the concession, and the licence was renewed.

On the evening of the 3rd inst, at Stratford-on-Avon in connection with the Shakespeare Festival, was produced a play in four acts, constructed by G. E. Marrison and R. P. Stewart, written by G. E. Morrison, and entitled Don Quixote. In spite of certain drawbacks, the result of imperfect rehearsal, the piece had a cordial reception. The principal incidents of Cervantes' novel were utilised; and there was much pathos in the incidents when, at the conclusion, the Don's mind cleared, and in the scene of his death. Mr. Benson gave a fine performance of the part of the Don; and Mr. G. R. Weir was excellent as Sancho Panza. Miss Helen Haye acted creditably as Antonia; and Mr. E. A. Warburton was effective as the villainous Palamque, Miss Leah Hannan winning applause in a picturesque dance.

"The Era" can be obtained at the principal bookstalls throughout the provinces.

MISS WANDA RADFORD'S RECITAL.

At Steinway Hall, on Monday evening, Miss Radford gave a highly successful dramatic recital, this being her first appearance in London. Miss Wanda Radford, who is only ten years old, is an Australian, and has had already some stage experience, having played the part of Oliver Twist in the provinces with Mr. Beerbohm Tree's company. Miss Radford is a pretty and graceful child with a confident and collected style that at once won the hearts of her large audience, and if her programme was somewhat ambitious, it is certainly due to the little lady to state that her greatest success was in some of Shakespeare's scenes. Miss Radford was assisted by Mr. C. Ganz, who sang "She alone charmeth my sadness" and Gounod's "Maid of Athens." Mr. C. Ganz was accompanied by Mr. Wilhelm Ganz. The first recitation was a selection from Dickens's "Oliver Twist"—"Mr. Brownlow's House," "Fagin's Den," and "Fagin's Cell," and Miss Radford, being encored after these, gave "The Skinners," a domestic aside, with no little skill and comedy feeling. She was also successful in the Potion Scene (Romeo and Juliet, Act iv., scene 3), and especially so in "Portia and Nerissa" from The Merchant of Venice (Act i., scene 2), the youthful reciter causing a laugh by saying "by Shakespeare." Miss Radford was also much applauded for Lehmann's "Fairies on the Lawn" and "An Orphan's Address to Her Doll," the audience being much amused at the close of this recital by a real doll, as well as flowers and sweets, being presented to the reciter by her friends and admirers. Other items included in the programme were "Henry before Harfleur" (King Henry V., Act iii., scene 1), and "Shylock Vows Vengeance," from The Merchant of Venice, both rather too trying examples for so youthful an artist.

Dr. Hans Richter celebrated on Tuesday (May 7) the thirtieth anniversary of his first public appearance in London. He has never mastered quite the intricacies of our language; but a man who devotes his life to solving the orchestral difficulties of Wagner's titanic scores has no time to become a linguist.

THEATRICAL INVENTIONS.

The concise descriptions that we give below of recent applications for patents are specially contributed by Messrs. Howard and Co., patent agents, 57 and 58, Chancery-lane, London, W.C., who will assist readers in all patent matters:—

APPLICATIONS.

10,035. Elizabeth McEvoy, of Strand, London, for attachment to theatre and other seats or chairs for the reception of hats and other articles.

10,078. Emil Gottlieb Homes, of Chancery-lane, London, for improvements in kinematographs or the like for preventing accidents through fire.

THE Santley jubilee celebration began many hours before three o'clock in the Albert Hall on Wednesday, the 1st inst. For early in the morning of that day the eminent baritone (to say nothing of his neighbours) was aroused from sleep by the strains of an itinerant German band, which, after regaling him with, roughly speaking, a potpourri of airs appropriate to the man and the occasion, finally blew "Auld Lang Syne" and the National Anthem under his very windows. Such is fame!

THE LAW OF COPYRIGHT FOR ACTOR AND COMPOSER.
BY ALBERT A. STRONG, LL.B.

Copyright confusion is, like the poor, always with us, and as it seems likely to remain so until at least the crack of doom, it were well for all concerned, or likely to be concerned, to take immediate steps to secure a copy of Mr. Albert A. Strong's new work, entitled "The Law of Copyright." Mr. Strong is already favourably known to the profession for his text-book on "Dramatic and Musical Law," which, like his latest production, is published at "The Era" Office. "The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer" essays to make clear to the non-legal mind what is—or, in some cases, what probably is—the law as to musical and dramatic copyright. The chapters on the Berne Convention and on the Chase Act, passed by the United States Congress last March, are full of interest.—Referee.

Mr. A. A. Strong has published a book on "The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer," which should be in the hands of everyone who is obliged to know about this perplexing subject. Dramatic copyright in England is in a particularly unsatisfactory state, and it is much to be hoped that ere long some more rational method of securing protection for a play may be devised than the slovenly and sometimes costly "production for copyright purposes," which is at present required.—St. James's Gazette.

CHURCH AND STAGE.

Mr. George Alexander has done good service by drawing the attention of the public to an article on the above subject in the Christian Commonwealth and giving quotations from the same. The writer pointed out that while a large proportion of ministers of the gospel, editors of religious newspapers, and ordinary church members attended the theatre frequently or occasionally, it was never officially and openly recognised or commended, and was either denounced or ignored by the religious Press. He also bore testimony to the fine morality of most modern plays, and to the excellent lessons taught by their stories. It is somewhat curious that almost at the same time we find the Lord Bishop of Birmingham at St. Paul's, Knightsbridge, last Sunday, in a special service under the auspices of the Actors' Church Union, protesting against the attitude of the Church towards the Stage. Said the Bishop in his address: "The Church has been in constant alliance with the Army at its worst times as well as at its best. I ask, 'Is there any reason in the world why exactly that same charity should not have been exhibited by the Church towards another great profession which holds a great place in the imagination of men?' There is, also, surely the greatest reason why the Church should show the most generous charity towards those whose lives are so very often uncomfortable, hard, isolated; who need the charity of religion in the sense that they need that large love which we show to all persons who minister to human convenience under circumstances which must put the greatest strain on nerve and patience and endurance. Priests and actors are playing their part in mutual succour, and should keep one another constantly in mind of the largeness and dignity of our nature, and the depth and thoroughness and largeness of Divine Grace."

The real difficulty of the rapprochement between Church and Stage lies in the unreality of much of what is called Religion. It is unfair to make sweeping statements regarding any class; there are always exceptions to every rule, and it is easy to make out a case for the average by pointing to the exceptional. But it is notorious that, broadly speaking, Religion and church or chapel-going are two entirely different things. Attendance at a "place of worship" is in most cases simply a ceremonial observance, like wearing a high hat or having one's doorstep whitened. The sermons are carefully planned so as to avoid attacking the besetting sins of the patrons. A man may be a grinder of the poor, or a cheat, or an adulterator of human food, and yet go to church and sit there every Sunday without hearing anything to ruffle his self-complacency. Father Vaughan's recent Sermons to Society were a tremendous novelty, something altogether unknown; and who ever hears from a Dissenting pulpit denunciations of the false weight and measure, the under-feeding and over-working of employees, and all the scampish "tricks" of trade?

Church-going, as usually practised, is merely a manifestation of Respectability. Now, the artistic class to which the actor and actress belong have an entirely different set of temptations from those of the middle classes. An actor has nothing to gain by being what is called Respectable. If there are two grocers in a village, and one is a regular church-goer and the other an open Atheist, other things being equal, the sales of the former will exceed those of the latter. The late Mr. Whiteley told an interviewer that he attributed his early success in business to attracting the attention of his employers by his attendance as a teacher in a Sunday school. But if an actor leads a religious life he has only the approval of his conscience as his reward; it will not increase his chance of engagements. If he has the religious instinct, he prefers to gratify it in private and carry it out to its logical conclusion in practice. But no manager will pay an actor any the more because he "professes religion." The tendency of the Church is to ignore the respectable vices and attack the disreputable ones. The tendency of the drama is to fall into exactly an opposite error. The Bishop makes a shrewd hit when he says, "We are living under a reaction from Puritanism. There is the Pharisaism of the publican who thanks God that he is not a Puritan." Charles Surface is loaded with approval, and marries the "nice girl" of the play; while Joseph is hounded out with scorn. But one is just as selfish and contemptible as the other. The rake and the cheat, the spendthrift and the "sweater," are all enemies of society. Still, for several generations there has been a steady levelling-up going on. The artist has become more respectable, and the Puritan has become more humane. And as Religion becomes more and more a matter of faith and feeling influencing conduct, so it becomes more and more possible for the two classes to meet on common ground. But the actor, having no inducement to deal in the imitation article, wants his Religion real.

And the actor is apt to be a little impatient of sermons; feeling, as he does in many cases, that he is "in the same business" himself. The higher drama, as the writer in the Christian Commonwealth notes, is a perpetual preacher, with a vast influence on human life. It is all very well to sneer at melodrama from an art point of view; the fact remains that for the hundreds who are unconscious of its artistic defects it represents a stimulant to goodness in the glorification of virtue and the denunciation of vice. And the virtues which the drama extols are not those of the old Puritan type, which is fast dying out, but the more humane and affectionate qualities which were recommended by the Founder of Christianity.

Before a most sympathetic audience at the St. James's Theatre, kindly lent by Mr. George Alexander, a special performance was given on Monday afternoon by the students of the Academy of Dramatic Art, established at 62, Gower-street. The kind friends in front included many prominent actors and actresses. In a box were seated Sir Squire and Lady Bancroft and Mr. and Mrs. Cyril Maude; and in the stalls were Mr. John Hare, Mr. and Mrs. Cosmo Gordon Lennox (Miss Marie Tempest), Mr. James Fernandez, Miss Alexandra Carlisle, Mme. Cavallazzi, and a number of others. The matinée opened with a fencing salute by Miss Margaret Hollister, Miss G. Sinclair, Miss M. Sinclair, Miss Broadley, Miss Lewis, Miss Rhodes, Miss Roach, Miss Faith Celli and Miss Charity Cell (the handsome daughters of the late Frank Celli), Miss Carmichael, Miss Wootton, and Miss Dale. These young ladies are evidently benefiting by the instruction of that expert maître d'escrime, M. Bertrand, whose lessons in a graceful art have given them command of poise and also taught them something of the harmony of movement. Miss Vera Wilson, Miss Hilda Bewicke, and Mr. Swem interested one and all by their elegance and rhythmic grace in a pas de deux and pas de trois, and showed themselves to be apt and promising pupils of Mr. Louis Hervey d'Egville.

The three excerpts from the Bard which were played afforded eloquent testimony of the great value rightly set by the Council upon the early education of the student in Shakespearean characters. There is much to be said in praise of the performance of the first act of As You Like It, and there would have been more had not Mr. Edward Vernon entirely omitted to come on as Duke Frederick and banish Rosalind from his court. Miss Catherine Sedley showed intelligence as Rosalind, but has not yet learnt to manage her voice, and lacked distinctness. Miss Pauline Straus as Celia realised something of the playfulness of the part, and her delivery was admirably clear. Miss Dulcie Conroy rather overdid the affectation of the coxcomb, Le Beau, but her acting evidently amused the house, and she promises well in comedy rôles. Mr. E. V. Stuart was a passable Touchstone; Mr. Rowland an effective Charles; and Mr. Clifford a commendable Adam. Mr. Bertram Forsyth, a well-grown and graceful Orlando, and Mr. H. G. Bentley, a duly forbidding and scowling Oliver, both did exceedingly well in the Casket scenes from The Merchant of Venice, specially arranged by Sir Squire Bancroft, with appropriate music from the pen of Mr. William Robins. Mr. Bentley, indeed, made quite a hit as the Prince of Morocco. The beautiful lines "Mislike me not for my complexion" were given with much impressiveness, dignity, and no little tenderness by him. Mr. Bertram Forsyth's Bassanio was a lover-like young Venetian courtier, and he played with much grace and expressiveness. Both young actors possess fine voices, Mr. Bentley's being heavier in timbre, reminding one of Mr. Forbes Robertson. Mr. Edward Vernon compensated for the earlier disappointment by his success as the Prince of Arragon. Miss Muriel Dole did not quite catch the romantic spirit of Portia, though there was some tenderness in the fair châtelaine of Belmont's speech to Bassanio at the conclusion of his choice. Miss Bessie Boyle's Nerissa may be highly commended. There was nothing particularly striking in Miss Dulcie Conry's Devonshire recitation; but Miss Beatrice Smith's representation of Lady Macbeth in the sleep-walking scene electrified the house, and proved that we have in our midst a young tragedienne of considerable promise. The conscience-stricken queen has not often appealed with such strength of horror as depicted by Miss Smith, whose shuddering intensity awed her audience into a silence that might have been felt. She was effectively supported by Mr. Clifford as the doctor and Miss Margaret Omar as the gentlewoman. A recitation by Miss Daisy Goulden formed a prelude to L'Ideal, represented by permission of Lieut.-Col. Newnham-Davis, the author of the scenario. This pantomime, in one act, which was originally presented in 1896 at the Palace Theatre, concerns the jealousy of an artist's wife at his devotion to his art and to a portrait he has painted which he calls his ideal. Jealousy overmasters wifely devotion, and in her rage Evelyn destroys the picture. Reginald, heartbroken at the destruction of his chef d'œuvre, drinks heavily; but Evelyn raises him and herself from the depths of despair by a clever ruse. Donning a dress similar to that worn by the lady of the picture, she persuades him that she is his ideal. Miss Sheba Brozel distinguished herself by her eloquent gesture-play as Evelyn, and her resource and power are unquestionable. She is the clever pupil of Mme. Cavalazzi. In a recitation, "The Young Scottish Martyrs," Miss Jean M'Dougall showed considerable ability.

In a scene from The Ambassador Miss Beatrice Smith and Miss Pauline Straus again distinguished themselves as Lady Beaudevere and Juliet Gainsborough, and Mr. Gerald Bruce played with easy distinction as Lord St. Orbyn; but the rest of the cast did not show any particular merit.

The students were rehearsed by Sir Squire Bancroft, Mr. George Alexander, and Mr. A. W. Pinero, members of the Council, and by the permanent instructors, Mr. E. Lyall Swete and Mr. J. Fisher White. The Council are much indebted to Lady Bancroft, who rehearsed the Sleep-walking scene, and to Miss Violet Vanbrugh for valuable assistance in the preparation of the Ambassadors. Mr. George Alexander's great kindness in lending his theatre and costumes is also warmly acknowledged, as well as the valued help of Mr. Tree and Mr. Arthur Bourchier, who generously lent certain scenes. Neither must we overlook the hearty co-operation of Mr. C. T. H. Helmsley, Mr. H. R. Kimpton, and other heads of departments at the St. James's; the chef d'orchestre, Mr. W. Robins, being responsible for the music in the Casket scenes.

"A ROYAL FAMILY" REVIVED.

Mr. Charles Frohman on Saturday evening, in his revival of Captain Robert Marshall's A Royal Family, played a very safe card; for even that terrible person the hardened playgoer would find it difficult not to restrain his hilarity at the amusing way in which the author has treated the troubles and cares of a monarchy sufficiently fictitious and sufficiently actual to be applicable to any other country besides Arcacia. The company entrusted with the representation of the comedy romance, in three acts, at the Duke of York's Theatre, is as follows:—

Louis VII. ..... Mr. C. M. Lowne
Prince Charles Ferdinand ..... Master Andrews
Prince Victor Constantine .. Mr. Henry Ainley
The Duke of Berascon .... Mr. Philip Desborough
1st A.D.C. ..... Mr. Alexander Cassy
2nd A.D.C. ..... Mr. H. G. Bentley
3rd A.D.C. ..... Mr. Charles Wellesley
The Count Varensa ..... Mr. Herbert Bunston
Baron Holdensen ..... Mr. Herbert Ross
The Cardinal Casano ..... Mr. Lyall Swete
Father Anselm ..... Mr. B. Forsyth
Lord Stapleton ..... Mr. Drelincourt Odlum
Mr. Vanderdyke Q. Cobb ..... Mr. G. Courtney
Lord Chamberlain ..... Mr. Sidney Hamilton
Queen Margaret ..... Miss Nella Powys
Queen Ferdinand ..... Miss Dolores Drummond
Princess Angela ..... Miss Alexandra Carlisle
Countess Carini ..... Miss L. Bilbrooke

In the original production at the Court, on Oct. 14, 1899, the Princess Angela was played by Miss Gertrude Elliot, now Mrs. Forbes Robertson, whose successor at the Duke of York's is Miss Alexandra Carlisle. This young actress, who has migrated from one London theatre to another to endow with her sweet personality heroines of comedy since she appeared with Mr. Nat Goodwin in February last year in A Gilded Fool, has completely justified the good opinion we then expressed of her powers, and by her charm of manner, her winsomeness, her sensibility, in the character of Princess Angela, she carries the older playgoer back to the days of Robertsonian comedy at the old Prince of Wales's in Tottenham-street. She has an excellent and well-graced stage-lover in Mr. Henry Ainley, and the pair completely captivated the house on Saturday night in the love-making scenes in the idyllic glade painted by the artistic Mr. W. McCleery. The simple wooing of the unconventional couple and the poetry of it all evoked the heartiest approval of gods and pit. Mr. C. M. Lowne's reading of the character of Louis VII., King of Arcacia, is a shade more serious than that of Mr. Eric Lewis; but he never fails to give the necessary unction to the many good things put into the monarch's mouth by the author, and is irreproachably correct in his kingly dignity. Mr. Philip Desborough's Duke of Berascon is a neat embodiment of a court official who carries out his instructions with unquestioning and unhesitating obedience; Mr. Herbert Ross catches just the right tone of injured dignity in the part of the fussy and stupid Baron Holdensen, the chief of police—a remarkable discoverer of mares' nests; and nothing more finished and agreeable than the acting of Mr. Lyall Swete as the genial Cardinal Casano is to be found in the cast. Mr. B. Forsyth, we are given to understand, is, or was, a student of the Academy of Dramatic Art in Gower-street, and his appearance on the stage of the Duke of York's on Saturday in the part of Father Anselm (originally played by Mr. Marsh Allen) was his professional début. He played with considerable quiet strength as the young priest, whose asceticism is not proof against the love engendered in his heart by the kindness and sympathy of the Princess Angela; and in the little scene of parting in the third act Mr. Forsyth showed a restraint and tenderness that were wholly admirable. That ripe and experienced actress, Miss Dolores Drummond, finds a part after her own heart in that of the Queen Ferdinand, whose copious store of reminiscences and strong sense of her own importance enable her to score. Miss Drummond's utterances are invariably followed by laughter, and the roar of merriment that went up from the audience on Saturday at the simple words "I knew it" is a gratifying tribute to her diction and power of characterisation. Miss Nella Powys is an attractive Queen of Arcacia, and Miss Lydia Bilbrooke an adequate representative of the Countess Carini. Master Andrews realises intelligently his responsibilities as the royal enfant terrible; and Mr. Herbert Bunston does well as the Count Varensa. Mr. Alexander Cassy, Mr. H. G. Bentley, and Mr. Charles Wellesley as the aide-de-camps are smart and effective; and Mr. Drelincourt Odlum as the English Ambassador, Mr. G. Courtney as Mr. Vanderdyke Q. Cobb, and Mr. Sidney Hamilton as the Lord Chamberlain lend efficient aid in minor parts. The betrothal scene in the last act is brilliant, the ladies' dresses being a dream of elegance and beauty. Mr. Bruce Smith and Mr. W. Hann's interiors are, as usual, quite excellent. The play is produced under the experienced direction of Mr. Dion Boucicault.

BROADWAY THEATRE, S.E.

On Monday, May 6, Pinero's Comedy, entitled "HIS HOUSE IN ORDER."

Mr. Pinero's clever comedy is being thoroughly appreciated by the large audiences it is drawing here, and the story is followed with interest throughout. Mr. Frank Fenton is admirably suited to the character of Hilary Jesson, which he plays with great success. Mr. Cyril Harcourt gives an excellent rendering of Filmer Jesson; Miss Maisie Richardson as Derek Jesson is interesting and clever; Mr. George Fitzgerald submits an impressive performance as Sir Daniel Ridgely; Mr. George Silver is very good as Major Maurewarde; Mr. Lloyd Lowndes is excellent as Doctor Dilnott; Mr. A. E. Benedict is a capable Harding; and Mr. Cyril Battley gives a skilful portrait of the newspaper representative, Forshaw; Mr. W. Barnett Parker and Mr. Frank Elton are good as the Servants; Miss Auriol Lee is a very charming and attractive Nina; Miss Kemmis is well placed as Lady Ridgeley; Miss Audrey Campbell is pleasing as Geraldine Ridgeley; and Miss Lilli Kehr is very good as Mlle. Thome. Mr. A. P. Horne is the general manager for the company.

At the St. Bride Foundation Institute, Ludgate Circus, on Saturday evening last, a concert was held in connection with the London Association of Correctors of the Press, a crowded audience being attracted by a first-class programme which had been arranged by Messrs. E. Croft-Williams and W. A. Perkins, who acted as musical directors. Miss Kathleen Dwyer displayed a wonderful command of the pianoforte in a solo and in accompaniments; and Master E. A. Clarke (a young boy) showed promise of becoming a most proficient performer on the same instrument. Miss Ethel Sawyer gave an excellent violin solo, and Mr. J. T. Bailey surprised the audience by the skilful way he treated the bassoon. The vocalists included Misses Ethel Syrett, Helena Foxen, Muriel Stanton, and M. Butler, all of whom did well in their various selections, the voice of the last-named young amateur being specially admired. Mr. T. C. Bell's baritone songs were much appreciated; the whistling items of Mr. Fred Bishop formed a pleasing variation; and the comic element was in the safe hands of Messrs. Fred Edwards (well known at St. Bride Institute, and always welcome), George Buck (a rising South London concert artist), and Harry Good (whose efforts were accorded most hearty applause). Somerset dialect songs were contributed by Mr. W. A. Perkins, and recitations by Miss Daisy Fletcher and Mr. J. W. Harris. Altogether a delightful and successful evening.

VARIETY GOSSIP.

The new committee of the V.A.F. is decidedly representative, and the profession should have every confidence in their zeal, discretion, and administrative capacity. Arthur Roberts, who has represented the artists before Mr. G. R. Askwith, the arbitrator, unquestionably occupies his correct position at the head of the poll with 1,063 votes. Close up are Tom Costello, J. W. Cragg, the veteran acrobat, G. H. Chirgwin, F. V. St. Clair, Harry Freeman, Harry Blake, Cliff Ryland, and Edwin Barwick—men of ripe experience. A leaven of younger men is found in Neil Kenyon, Fred Sinclair, George Leyton, Tom Woottwell, J. Alexandre, Fred Ginnett, Carl Hertz, Horace Goldin, and other prominent performers.

We have, therefore, a happy combination of the older and newer generations of artists, and thus the praiser of times past will be impelled to "express" into his methods some of the juice of up-to-date opinion. The old coach of conservatism—an excellent vehicle in its way—will have to be progressively re-wheeled. But though the Federation may be congratulated on the choices made for its administrative body, we must express our regret at the non-success of Mr. Charles Coborn.

Mr. Coborn advocated co-operation or combination as far back as the eighties. Then his was like the voice of one crying in the wilderness of indifference or the wastes of apathy; but he never slackened his efforts to promote the wish nearest his heart—professional union. In season and out of season he pounded away trying to quicken by the spirit of union the lifeless insensibility into which the profession had sunk. From the seed that he sowed has grown the most powerful Federation of entertainers that the world has ever known.

Mr. Joe O'Gorman has been elected chairman of the Federation, and Mr. W. H. Clemart vice-chairman. Both these gentlemen gave evidence before the Arbitrator on the barring clause, and the prominent position of both in all the affairs of the Federation and during the strike need not be here insisted on.

Mr. Bransby Williams, it will be remembered, produced during his engagement at the Empire last year a sketch by Miss Beatrix de Burgh, entitled The Last of His Race. The same title is used for the drama to be produced immediately at Drury Lane Theatre; but Mr. Williams considers he has a prior right to it.

Mr. Williams has just been presented by an old admirer with a pen-and-ink sketch of the late Mr. J. L. Toole receiving the present King as Prince of Wales on the houseboat in Mr. J. M. Barrie's first successful stage piece, Walker, London. Another admirer has given him a picture which used to hang in Mr. Toole's bedroom, of the late Sir Henry Irving and his terrier, Fussy, carrying his stick. Mr. Williams starts on the Stoll tour next week, and will give up pantomime this year. He has just concluded his third engagement at the Empire, and is now recovering from an attack of pharyngitis.

America is not to have a monopoly of the revival of burnt cork minstrelsy. We are given to understand that Mr. Horace Livermore intends to resuscitate in the provinces, upon a very complete and up-to-date scale, the Court Minstrels founded by the family, and the famous combination will again be an actuality when the leaves begin to fall. The Vogel crowd, to which we referred last week, will tour the provinces for six weeks before commencing a season in London.

Miss Florrie Robina (Mrs. Reed Pinaud) has a daughter who, at her recent début at the Apollo Theater, Dusseldorf, showed considerable hereditary gifts. She appeared in the part of the saucy serio in that farcical sketch Mumming Birds, and delighted her father, Mr. Reed Pinaud (with whom she is travelling) by a performance full of promise of future excellence as an eccentric dancer. It is a curious coincidence that the débutante was born in Providence, Rhode Island, the same town as her sire, whom she strongly resembles.

Miss Connie Ediss, the favourite Gaiety actress, arrived at Southampton on Saturday morning. While in South Africa she longed for the Strand, and abandoned her intention of making a world tour. She was away only fifteen weeks, and played six weeks at Johannesburg and three weeks at Cape Town, getting a whole-hearted reception at each place. Connie says she created a record at the Cape. Well, of course!

The usual monthly meeting of the Management Committee of the Music Hall Sick Fund was held on Wednesday afternoon at the York Hotel, York-road, under the presidency of Mr. W. J. Wainratta. There were also present Messrs. Frank Hall, W. Brisco, W. West, and R. T. Baines (secretary). A letter was read from Mr. Frank Gerald, general secretary of the Variety Artists' Federation, calling attention to the celebration on June 27 next of "Federation Day." In London the celebration will take place at the Crystal Palace. His committee hoped that "Federation Day," which is to be celebrated thoughout the world, will be the means of placing all the music hall charities upon a sound financial footing, and he had been requested to write and ask for the hearty co-operation of the Music Hall Sick Fund in the movement.

It was unanimously agreed to co-operate, the members present pledging themselves to do all in their power to further the success of "Federation Day"; and the secretary was directed to forward a copy of the resolution to Mr. Frank Gerald. Some other business of a private character having been transacted, the meeting closed with a vote of thanks to the chairman.

Mr. Horace Goldin, who is appearing at the Palace Theatre, relates a funny story of a mistake that might have been a tragedy for him if the audience had only known. He was performing his duck trick, in which he wraps up a duck in a sheet of newspaper, squashes the parcel up, and shows that the duck has vanished. One night the duck didn't vanish. He was busily crumpling the paper up, when suddenly a yell of laughter from the audience pulled him up. The duck was waddling around the stage, quacking with might and main. He told the people that he often did things in that way, and that the real trick was to follow. He then put the duck into a tub, clapped the lid on for a second, and showed that the solitary one had grown into a dozen. Mighty near thing, and a lucky "get-off," he thought it was.

The late Mr. James Chappell's will was proved on Saturday. Mr. Chappell left £24,973, and desired to be buried in his family grave at Bow. In one of the clauses of the will he requested that no woman mourner should attend his funeral.

Mr. Oswald Marshall, assisted by Miss Agnes Paulton, will produce at Richmond on Monday comic episode, entitled A Hot Time, by Mr. E. L. Furst.

On Friday evening there was a gala performance at the Empire, when the City of London International Commercial Association entertained the Comité Républicain du Commerce de l'Industrie et de l'Agriculture. Lord Strathcona and other distinguished men were expected to be present. Practically all the reserved seats in the house had been disposed of.

Mr. Clarence Sounes has arranged to run a season of variety at his Aldershot Theatre, commencing June 10, and later will make another application for the licence for his new hippodrome, which he will commence building shortly. Meantime, there will be an autumn dramatic season, reverting to variety business again about the end of November, should the present experiment prove successful.

By the departure of Mr. Charles Bush from the Palace Theatre, Leeds, that city's playgoers will miss a very genial and familiar figure; but regret will extend far beyond the boundaries of stageland, for his work in behalf of local charities will ever be remembered to his credit and distinction. Mr. Bush, however, will not leave Leeds immediately. The Parks and Watch Committee have granted him permission to give six concerts in the different parks, commencing in June, for the benefit of the Bush Consumptive Fund, and unless business should call him away he will remain to organise these recitals.

The Derby Palace, during the summer, is to undergo structural alterations and to be reseated throughout, and whilst that building is closed to the public, Mr. T. Allen Edwardes intends to run, experimentally, a short variety season at the Derby Grand Theatre at the prices which have made the Palace so popular. The greatly superior seating accommodation of the theatre will of course enable the management to present an entertainment which would be impossible at the Palace. The experiment will be first made on Whit-Monday. It is interesting to note that permission has been granted by the Derby Improvements Committee to smoke in the auditorium during the variety season. Happy Mr. Edwardes to be able to allow his patrons to smoke at a house with a theatrical licence, and no Lord Chamberlain to extinguish the fragrant weed!

A number of Mr. and Mrs. Leoni Clarke's friends in Northampton assembled together at the Mitre Hotel there on Sunday evening to wish them farewell. Mr. E. S. Dunkley presided, supported by Mr. A. Penn (general secretary of the Licensed Trades Association), and Mr. E. Abrahams (district secretary of the Northampton and District Licensed Trades' Association). Mr. Arthur Penn said he was sure all present that evening regretted the departure of Mr. and Mrs. Clarke. They had been in Northampton some eight or nine years, and had made many friends. He wished them every happiness in their tour. The chairman and Mr. E. Abrahams also spoke.

Mr. W. A. M. Bell, in presenting Mr. and Mrs. Clarke with a gold medal and gold chain and locket respectively, said he could only re-echo everything that had been said. The medal bore the inscription, "Presented to Leoni Clarke as a token of respect, by a few Northampton friends, May 4, 1907. Good luck." The locket was inscribed, "Presented to Mrs. Leoni Clarke by friends in Northampton, with best wishes. May 4, 1907." The presents were accompanied by an illuminated address, the work of Mr. W. H. Meredith. Both Mr. and Mrs. Clarke feelingly replied. Mrs. Clarke said she thought they could both say that they had made more friends than enemies. They were going away now in the hope that Mr. Clarke would get better health, and the time would come when they again would be at Northampton.

At the recent foundation-stone laying of the new Palace Theatre and Hippodrome in Warrington the Rector of Warrington, Canon Willis, at the subsequent luncheon, said he considered the stage a great and increasing power for good. People must and would have recreation, and it was the duty of the clergy to encourage the provision of innocent amusement. If the Church turned its back upon the profession of the stage, how could they be expected to take a higher tone? Sympathy and encouragement, on the other hand, might be the means of doing real good. Father Byrne also spoke of the educational value of the stage.

Mr. Frank Macnaghten, who has control of the new place of amusement, explained, in answer to the Rector, why he called the houses he was connected with hippodromes. It was to distinguish them from the music halls of former days, in which the bar was the chief attraction and the entertainment quite subsidiary. Their province was the stage, and it was their business to bring to the towns of England the best the world produced.

It is on the cards that Mr. Frank Macnaghten will add Burnley to his circuit, as it is understood that he has secured a site there, on which he proposes to erect a hippodrome built on similar lines that that now rearing its head at Warrington.

The executive offices of the Macnaghten tour are at present at Sheffield, but its increasing prosperity will soon make a London centre an essential to its smooth working, and we are not disclosing any secret in stating that a central position in town has been secured.

Mr. Tom Bush, of that popular professional hostelry, the Bee Hotel, Liverpool, with which he has been associated since 1890, is contemplating retirement. For years he has been in the van of any movement or scheme for the gathering of funds for local and theatrical and music-hall charities, and those who know him intimately can recall many acts of kindness to both professions. He will be much missed in the world of the footlights.

Mr. Charles Rembges, manager of the Empire Palace, Middlesbrough, in consequence of the Lord Chamberlain's withdrawal of the licence for The Mikado, wired to Lord Althorp for permission to play a selection from the famous opera. The reply was—"No objection to orchestra selections. Stage play only forbidden.—Lord Chamberlain." The telegram was immediately proclaimed by coloured posters, and The Mikado selection has been heartily applauded at the Middlesbrough house throughout the week.

Sheffield's beautiful Empire Theatre was crowded with a brilliant and representative audience on Saturday last, the occasion being the matinée given by the directorate on behalf of the Sheffield University. The performance was graced by the support of the nobility of the district, the local Members of Parliament, and the leading citizens, headed by the Master Cutler. A colossal and entertaining programme was gone through, artists from other towns strengthening the ordinary Empire company. The function was a great success, and Mr. Alan D. Dunbar deserves credit for his exertions on behalf of audience and artists alike.

Miss Josie Mooney introduced on Monday night a new comedy song, "Silly Sally," which made an immediate hit—due to the original methods of this interesting and fascinating artist.

"The Lady Suffragettes and Policemen Ballet and Burlesque," which probably owes its inspiration to the success of Miss Elizabeth Robins's dramatic tract, Votes for Women, recently produced at the Court Theatre, is to be given at the Palace, Manchester, on Monday next. Music halls do not take the question of women's franchise seriously, and the skit on it, which we noticed in our columns last week on its production at the Surrey, has a generous seasoning of obvious comedy that will commend it heartily to Mancunians.

The news of Mr. George Adney Payne's serious accident while motoring on Sunday near Tunbridge Wells, has caused widespread concern throughout the profession, among whom the managing-director of the Syndicate halls has many close personal friends. Mr. Payne was motoring with a number of friends from Herne Bay, and occupied a seat in the front car, driven by Mrs. Payne. That lady, when nearing Tunbridge Wells, in trying to avoid a cyclist steered quickly on one side. The suddenness of the movement caused the wheels to skid, and the car dashed into a ditch. All the occupants were thrown out, but no one was seriously hurt but Mr. Payne, who, besides several broken ribs, had a nasty scalp wound.

The sufferer was removed at once to the Royal Mount Ephraim Hotel, Tunbridge Wells, and a specialist telegraphed for. On Tuesday he was reported to be out of danger. He passed a fairly good night. Dr. Vise, a local medical practitioner, is in constant attendance. So far no serious internal injuries have been discovered by Dr. Lane, the London specialist, who remained with the sufferer the whole of Sunday night.

In response to our letter of sympathy, Mrs. Adney Payne writes to us from the Royal Hotel, Mount Ephraim, Tunbridge Wells, as follows:—"We had a fearful smash. We were coming to lunch here, and were within five minutes of our destination. I had already slowed down—as the people were coming from church and I did not want to leave our dust behind—when a cyclist who was coming towards us at a great pace, and was not looking, rushed right across our path, and then turned back again. It was an awful moment! I thought of his sure death, and in order to escape him I made a dash up Calverly Park Gardens. The wheels caught the kerb, broke off, and the car crashed over on top of us. My poor darling got the most awful injuries. We were all pinned beneath the car. I was mangled a bit, but, thank God, I am only bruised and shaken. Dr. Nill, the throat specialist, of Weymouth-street, was fortunately with us, and escaped with a cut lip, and the other friend was bruised and shaken. The car was smashed to atoms.

"When the accident happened we were right outside the house of Dr. Vise, from whom we received wonderful kindness and attention. My dear husband is suffering much, but, thank God, the specialist gives every hope of his recovery. I am on day duty this week, from 11 to 10 p.m., and it is glorious to be able to watch over and console the sufferer. He seems to feel the time very long. I think it will be at least three weeks before we leave here.

"Will you kindly convey through The Era my heartfelt thanks for the hundreds of letters and telegrams of sympathy from my dear friends? It has helped me to bear up in my terrible anxiety."

Banners and bunting were hung on the inner as well as the outer walls of the Alhambra on the evening of Tuesday, when an audience representative of international amity assembled at the gala performance organised by Mr. George Scott in honour of the Comité Républicain Du Commerce, de l'Industrie, et de l'Agriculture and the City of London International Commercial Association. The programme had been specially designed for the occasion in red, white, and blue, with the arms of the City of London tied to a shield bearing the monagram R.F.

A most popular turn was the exhibition of the series of films by the Charles Urban Co., recording the visit of Colonial Premiers to Portsmouth and the naval review held in their honour. This was the more appropriate, because all, or nearly all, the Premiers in question were in the house, and many of them must have had the amusing experience of recognising themselves on the Dreadnought—every action and gesture recorded by the ruthless camera.

Messrs. Bert Feldman and Bennett Scott had a good send-off on Tuesday morning, when they left Euston by the midday train for Liverpool, from which port they embarked, per s.s. "Carmania," for New York. Amongst those who assembled on the platform to wish the couple bon voyage were Miss Maude Mortimer, Miss Fifi Gordon, Mrs. and Miss Feldman, Mrs. B. Scott, Miss Scott, Mrs. Friedman, Mrs. Fish, and Mrs. Zucker; and Messrs. David Day, Julian Kandt, A. J. Mocatta, Herbert Mocatta, Ben Mocatta, Louis Sterling, Russell Hunting, Charles Dare, Simonson, Jack Wood, Chas. Montefiore, Tom Costello, jun., Fred de Lara Cohen, Fish, Percy Kebble, and David Comer; the song-writing world being represented by Messrs. A. J. Mills, Maurice Scott, George Arthurs, John Neat, Fred Godfrey, Harry Castling, and C. W. Murphy.

"The Unwritten Law" has proved a success, and Mr. John Lawson was booked to appear on Monday next at the Grand, Clapham, Putney Hippodrome, and Hammersmith Palace with this work. However, it was feared that five shows a night would prove too great a strain on the popular artist, so Mr. J. C. Coe has kindly postponed Hammersmith until May 27. The new sketch returns to the Holborn Empire again on May 20—surely a record in a quick return, just one week elapsing. Miss Buena Bent scored as Evelyn, and quite fulfilled all expectations.

Miss Buena Bent, whose striking performance as Evelyn Norman and great resemblance to Mrs. Thaw have been much commented upon during the week, was entertained to luncheon at Simpson's on Thursday. Among those present were Messrs. John Lawson, Marner, Harry Masters, and Charles Read. A company is being organised for the provincial production of An Unwritten Law.

Mr. Tom Pacey, the well-known dramatic and variety agent, who is ever on the alert to discover fresh talent, has put on his list Master Wheeler, a singer and dancer of considerable attainments, and Miss Angela Hope, who sings capably and dances particularly well. For these new turns he confidently anticipates most successful bookings.

Mrs. John Lawson has created quite a stir in Edinburgh with the powerful episode The Devil's Sunday, and this charming and clever actress will be seen this coming week at the Palace, Sunderland. The Devil's Sunday is booked well into 1908, thus putting all idea of a new production out of the question.

Miss Anna De Grey, the Secretary of the Music Hall Ladies' Guild, desires to acknowledge with thanks donations of clothing from Miss Carlotta Levey and Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Stratton.

Miss Louisa Peach, who was playing Lady Isabel last week at the Dalston Theatre, has been engaged by Mr. Henry Dundas for the same part at the Opera House, Leicester, Whit week. Miss Peach is amusing audiences at the South London with her droll comedy sketch, Taming a Husband.

Mr. O. E. Lennon has been specially engaged by Messrs. Marcus and Mapleson for their forthcoming production of The Balloonatics, a musical revue in three flights.

Mr. L. Austin Millais's copyright productions, The Stolen Duchess, The Modern Godiva, and The King's Favourite, with Venus, the late Lord Leighton's model, in the title-rôles, bid fair to become even a bigger draw than the present act.

The London County Council, on June 5, will receive a deputation, led by the Bishop of London, from the National Vigilance Association in regard to the vexed question of the exhibition of the nude as living statuary. A counterblast is promised to this deputation; and Mr. Adolf Seldom, principal of the Seldoms Troupe, has received the following reply to his letter on the subject from the L.C.C.: "I am desired by the chairman of the London County Council to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, and to say that he feels sure that the Theatre Committee of the Council would be willing to receive a deputation from you—the artists engaged in the living statuary exhibitions themselves—should they wish to lay their views before the Council."

The managers of several Birmingham variety theatres have received an intimation from the local authorities that it is undesirable that the exhibitions of living statuary should continue after the existing engagements are fulfilled; and the Lord Mayor has received a promise that the performances shall cease after next week.

At the annual Court at Glasgow for licensing theatres and music halls, held on Monday, Bailie Stewart announced that the Court wished to come to an understanding with regard to certain nude figures appearing on the stage. The magistrates wished to know if a general undertaking would be given that that kind of entertainment would be stopped. Mr. Campbell, representing the majority of the variety theatres, promised that the proprietors would give an undertaking not to produce anything of the kind in Glasgow without the special consent of the magistrates.

La Milo is appearing at the Empire Theatre, Bradford, this week, and the other night the members of the Corporation's Licensing Committee, who in some instances were accompanied by their wives, witnessed the first performance. The committee afterwards met and passed a resolution that they had observed no breach of the regulations governing the licence of the theatre.

Miss Mollie Mack, an actress, on Saturday received the first licence issued to a woman in Chicago to drive a cab. She will have her stand in front of the Colonial Theatre. If she makes as pretty a picture of a cochère as a Palace girl her daily receipts should create a record.

The professional musicians of the Orchestral Association and the Amalgamated Musicians Union are to hold a meeting on Sunday evening, at the Small Queen's Hall, to decide as to their common action in the future, and to fix a minimum salary at the various music halls of London. They will also take into serious consideration the position of non-members of either society, and the attitude to be adopted towards them.

In Mr. Louis Cohen's delicately artistic sketch, The Drummer of the 76th, Napoleon writes a letter to the poor lad's mother, at the boy's dictation. As a rule, heavy breathing rules the scene, but on Wednesday night, at the New Cross Empire, just as the letter was about to be folded, the drummer (Miss Vivian) inadvertently overturned the Emperor's favourite claret, and the epistle was flooded. A titter started—with a guffaw from the gallery, but Mr. Brodie was equal to the occasion, for without moving a muscle and speaking quite conversationally, he placed his hand on the trembling boy's shoulder, and said, "Never mind, little comrade, your mother must now be convinced that this was indeed written with your heart's blood." A short pause—then a thunder of applause.

Twenty-five years ago Mr. George Leybourne (the George of "Champagne Charlie" fame) and a party of friends paid a visit to the beautiful ruins of Furness Abbey. Accompanying the party were a son (George) and a little daughter. Visitors, as a rule, like to leave some token behind them to record their visit, and in this case money was secreted in a crevice of the old walls. George, then about eight years of age, was lifted up in his father's arms and directed to deposit a penny, and his little sister a halfpenny, between two stones.

On Wednesday, May 1, Mr. George Leybourne and a party of friends, including Mr. Harry Brett, and Messrs. C. S. Nicholson and W. H. Secker, all members of Mr. Albert Chevalier's company on tour at Barrow, took a trip to the Abbey, George, en route, saying he was going for his money, an exclamation which the party treated as a joke. It was some time before the exact spot was discovered, but eventually, in a crevice about six feet from the ground, was found what might be the likely spot, and sure enough, with the aid of a knife, the money was exposed and claimed by Mr. Leybourne. Wind and rain had left their traces on the coins, which looked as if one hundred years had elapsed since their secretion. Needless to say Mr. Leybourne is proud of their recovery of the coins. The little girl who deposited the halfpenny is now Mrs. Albert Chevalier.

The 510th meeting of the Executive Committee of the Music Hall Artists' Railway Association was held on Wednesday. Mr. Joe O'Gorman occupied the chair, and among those present were Messrs. Fred Herbert, Charles Coborn, Harry Wright, Jeff Vendome, Bernard Stavordale, Albert Voyce, Charles Pastor, Harry Blake, Fred Harrison, C. C. Bartram, and C. Douglas Stuart. The weekly statement showed that thirty-three new members had joined during the week, and that the total amount received was £34 11s.

A large gathering of Freemasons connected with the theatrical and variety professions is expected at Frascati's on Friday next, at 2 p.m., when Mr. Albert Le Fre will install Serpentello (Mr. Theodore Schreiber) as W.M. of the Chelsea Lodge for the ensuing year. Mr. Schreiber, who is an American by birth, traces his ancestry to Teutonic grandparents, and before entering the variety profession was trained for the ministry.

The latest quotations of music-hall shares are as follow:—Alhambra, 1½; Canterbury, ½; Empire (15s. paid) 1⅛, ditto (10s. paid) 1½; London Pavilion Ordinary 4⅜, ditto Preferred 5; London Coliseum, ⅛; Metropolitan, ⅝; Moss Empire 4⅞, ditto 5 per cent. Preferred 4½; Oxford, 6⅞; Palace, 12s. 6d.; Tivoli, 6; Variety Consolidated Theatres, 13s.

The friends of Mr. Charles Bush, late manager of the Palace, Leeds, will be sorry to hear that his wife passed away very suddenly on Monday morning. Much sympathy has been shown to the bereaved husband.

M. Auguste van Biene concludes to-night an enormously successful tour of the Moss-Stoll Empires with his original sketch, A Master Musician, which has been secured by the same management for several future tours. On Monday M. van Biene opens at the Standard Theatre with the evergreen Broken Melody, which has also been secured as the holiday attraction at the Shakespeare Theatre, Clapham; and in June Mr. Robert Arthur has arranged for a short suburban tour of the same play, starting at Kennington, and visiting the Camden and Coronet, so that M. van Biene's London admirers will thus have good opportunities of seeing and hearing the actor-musician. The business arrangements of these tours has for over two years been in the hands of the maestro's son, Edward van Biene.

PARIS VARIETY GOSSIP.

The first appearance of May has been indefinitely postponed, and in the meantime we are witnessing (for a limited number of days only, we hope) a special revival of January. Under these conditions, the Marigny opened its doors on Friday (the 3rd) with its summer Revue. Although decidedly better than that of last year, it suffers from a very common complaint, that of having all its good material in the first act, and nothing in the second. The chief success of the evening was the ballet of soldiers, with M. Cheron, as the Under-Secretary of War, as premier danseur. This number brought back memories of the ballet of policemen at the Folies-Bergère some years ago. An excellent biograph picture shows the building of the Channel Tunnel and the lost policeman all the way from the Gaiety, and the finale to the first act, "The Entente Cordiale," in which mingle the uniforms and dresses of England and France, forms a splendid picture.

The Marigny Girls are good, but they should certainly be given more opportunities. If not another song, at least they should have the stage to themselves in their one number, and not be surrounded by a crowd of chorus people. This year—doubtless owing to the bad weather—"Tout Paris," to whom the opening of the Marigny is an event, were conspicuous by their absence, and even La Belle Otero, smiling from her box, could not make up for their loss.

To-night will see the first performance of L'Eglé at the Moulin Rouge. The two principal rôles will be sustained by charming Mlle. Eva du Perrit, who will be remembered at the Alhambra, and who was so successful at the Chatelet in Piff, Paff, Pouf, and Morton, who made a big success as Li in The Geisha last year.

Miss Arlette Dorère, the fascinating Prince Charming in the Drury Lane Cinderella at the Porte St. Martin, the other day, while driving to the theatre, met with an accident. Her motor was caught between two trams and crushed. Luckily the fair Arlette escaped with a few scratches and a very bad shaking.

Negotiations are going on at the present moment for the taking over of the Casino de Paris by the Moulin Rouge management. Since its opening, last October, the Casino has been a rank failure, so we shall watch with curiosity the efforts of its new director to pull it out of the mire.

A really excellent programme is billed this month at the Alhambra. The Harmony Four are topping the bill, and the whole house is in a roar all the time they are on; the Mas-Andres, just back from the Palace, introduce their fine burlesque on a French revue; James Stuart, the tramp pianist, goes well; Hilda Jacobson, fresh from musical comedy, shows her fine voice off to advantage in a couple of songs; Meier and Mora do some good work; and Juno Salmo evidently believes in the motto "One good turn deserves another," as he seems to delight in turning and twisting himself into all kinds of knots. The Two Anartos rattle off their gags like a couple of Frenchmen; Martinetti and Grossi have a very original musical act; and Robert Ganthony, with his grotesque drawings, Celia Galley, in her imitations, the Sisters Klos, in a graceful gymnastic act, and Gicardo, a clever young juggler, are the other items which go to make up this exceptionally good bill.

The accident at the Apollo, the falling of the tight-rope walkers into the den of lions, did not have such serious results as was at first stated. Both the young ladies appeared on the stage the following evening, although they did not give their performance. The lions also seemed in excellent health.

The Apollo is now going in full swing, but the management give a little too much attention to the dancing part of the entertainment, and not quite enough to the stage performances. Not that any of the turns are bad, far from it, but we look to the Apollo to give us something out of the ordinary in shows as well as dancing floors.

On the present month's bill we have Miss Lorette and her statue dog, Ben. This show was a welcome relief from the many different varieties of Venus we have been seeing lately. Maude and James Thomas do an excellent wire act, some of the gentleman's tricks being very original indeed: Kioray, with a good comedy act, gets a lot of laughs, and a lot of applause for his clever work on the tight-rope (no lions this time!); the Wotpert Trio have a fine acrobatic show, in fact they are one of the best acts on the bill; and Trilby and Svengali are still causing much wonderment by their act in which the lady at the piano on the stage plays any melody the name of which is secretly given by a member of the audience to the gentleman in the auditorium with his back to the stage.

Tiller's Eight Snowdrops are dancing themselves into favour; the Piroscoffs present a capital juggling show with many novel tricks; and the remainder of the programme is made up of Allister, in impersonations of celebrities, Oterita, Spanish dancer, the Granadas, comedy gymnasts, and Mini Fritz, eccentric dancer.

The Cirque d'Hiver has closed its doors for the summer season. It will reopen in September.

Miss Marie Burnand and Gwen Zalska, newcomers to the Empress Theatre, Brixton, have been quite enthusiastically received by the packed houses which have been the rule this week. They are aptly billed as a "dainty duo," and quite captivate the audience by a sweet rendering of a ditty entitled "The moon has his eyes on you." They conclude a very pleasing turn with some smart step-dancing.

Mr. John Humphries will produce, at the Empire, Liverpool, on Monday, a new comedy sketch, by Herbert C. Sargent, entitled Ancient Britons. Mr. Humphries will be supported by Miss Iris Coley and Mr. Bay Russell.

Mr. Harry Instone, the popular stage-manager of the Royal Theatre of Varieties, Oldham, has in active preparation a grand juvenile musical and spectacular scena, which he intends to produce in the near future. Several offers have been made for the show, which is being booked by Mr. Dottridge.

The keynote of the entertainment presented by Miss Florence Elliott and Chicklets within the elegant environment of a Palace set is variety. Artistic vocalism is supplied by Miss Elliott herself, a young and handsome lady, radiant in pale blue and white, who is discovered seated upon a throne with her youthful court beside her. Descending from the dais, her majesty sings a pretty ballad in the refrain of which her attendants join. A tuneful duet and neat dance are afterwards rendered by a couple of maidens, and surpassing skill in clogs is exhibited by a lad who wins loud cheers for his efforts. Mr. Harvey Rayne, the "comedy chicklet," who has throughout been causing ripples of laughter with his drolleries, comes forward further to stimulate mirth with his ditty, "It's a girl"; and after Miss Elliott—now in pink—has sweetly sung another snatch of song, a clever quartet join in a rag-time dance which is very exhilarating. The troupe dress tastefully, sing well, and dance in finished style, and their reception at the Duchess Palace, Balham, all last week was very gratifying.

SONGS, WRITERS, AND SINGERS.

HARRY ADAMS, in conjunction with Ernée Woodville, has just supplied Mr. Arthur Lennard with a capital chorus song, entitled "She's a dear good wife." Mr. David Day's firm will publish the number immediately. The same writers have fitted Mr. Whit Cunliffe with a ditty, named "Quite sufficient, thank you!"

FELIX MCGLENNON, the author and composer, whose return to the sphere of usefulness he so long adorned, has been hailed with satisfaction by artists and publishers alike, has just placed with Messrs. Francis and Day a delightful song, entitled "Good morning, little Daisy."

THE most recent acquisitions made by Messrs. Francis, Day, and Hunter include "The braw Scotch laddie and his sweetheart's daddy," by Charles Collins and Charles Ridgewell; "My only friend," by the same talented pair; "Scoot!" (to be featured by Miss Amber Austa and Miss Daisy Dormer), by Tom Mellor and Charles Collins, who were jointly responsible for "I wouldn't leave my little wooden hut for you"; "I've built a castle in the air," by Harry Leighton, Chas. Hilbury, and Orlando Powell; "Isn't it nice to be nice to a nice girl?" by C. W. Murphy and Dan Lipton; "If I had slept another minute" (sung by Will Bentley), by Alf. Davis and Pennystone Miles; "Nightingale" and "He's my military man" (the latter sung by G. H. Elliott), by Mellor, Lawrance, and Gifford; "This is a melancholy tale," by Percy Ashdown; "A little bit of suger on the top" and "The broken-down sportsman" (both sung by Harry Bedford), by R. P. Weston; "A grain of help is worth a peck of pity" (featured by Miss Billie Burfoot), by Fred Godfrey and J. F. Lambe; "Take me with you," by Harry Castling and Fred Godfrey; and "There's room for you in my little canoe," by T. F. Robson and Fred Warwick.

MASTER MAX DAREWSKI, the gifted child pianist and composer, is sure of a large audience this (Saturday) afternoon at the Bournemouth Winter Gardens, when, in addition to playing Beethoven's Concerto, with orchestral accompaniment, he will perform five of his own compositions, including his Fantasie Impromptu, and will, moreover, accompany Miss Amy Castle in the song from his pen, entitled "I dreamed of a beautiful garden," a number published by Messrs. Francis and Day, and dedicated by special permission to that other great artist, Mme. Adelina Patti.

MR. A. J. MILLS, the well-known lyric author and director of the Star Music Company, Ltd., will take over the sole management of the business during Mr. Bennett Scott's absence in America. Artists who require something extra special for Whit-Monday would do well to call on Mr. Mills at his offices, 9, Charing Cross-road, when he will be pleased to try over the firm's latest tit-bits.

MISS AMY CLEVERE has been scoring tremendously with a pretty song, written and composed by A. J. Mills, entitled "Pearl." The London rights are reserved for the present, but the author-composer will grant a limited number of permits for the provinces. Needless to say, this number is published by the Star Company.

MISS FLORRIE GALLIMORE (on her provincial tour) is making a big hit with Murphy and Castling's pretty Welsh song, "On the Isle of Anglesey." This is one of the Star Music Publishing Company's real good things.

MISS MAY MARS intends to produce at the Oxford next week a new chorus song, entitled "In my aeroplane for two" ("A honeymoon in the sky"), another of Messrs. Mellor, Lawrance, and Gifford's compositions. The Shapiro, Von Tilzer Music Co., Ltd., are the publishers of same.

THE Shapiro, Von Tilzer Music Co. have in preparation a new song, entitled "Oh, Matilda," written and composed by Cecil Lidden and Percy Edgar, which Frank Seeley is producing next week.

MISS MARIE KENDALL has just produced her new song, "Put that in your pipe and smoke it," written and composed by R. P. Weston. This song has been one of the features of the Oxford programme this week, and will shortly be published by the Shapiro, Von Tilzer Music Co., Ltd. The same lady has also just accepted for production at the above hall a new chorus song, entitled "I want a home in old London Town."

MISS BESSIE BUTT tried a new march song during the week at the Hippodrome, Hastings, and the result has been so very satisfactory that the chorus is all over that town. It is called "Adieu, little girl," and it has a most catchy melody from the pen of that march master, John Neat. The words are by A. E. Sidney Davis. The publishers are Feldman and Co.

MISS ROSIE LLOYD has been "scoring" very heavily with the Monte Carlo Publishing Co.'s latest success, "Don't go back to Carolina," by Mellor, Lawrance, and Gifford, which taking number Miss José Collins will also be specially featuring at the London Pavilion, in addition to an entirely new and original speciality scena, by Messrs. John P. Harrington and Jas. W. Tate, entitled "Sweet Cuban Girl," of which great things are expected. The Monte Carlo Publishing Co. are also publishing this novel morceau.

THE MONTE CARLO PUBLISHING CO., in addition to issuing Harrington and Tate's big "winner," "Rosie is waiting," now have in the press a new number, by the same author, composer, and singer, entitled "Kiss your own Scotch laddie."

Two of the most asked-for songs in the Monte Carlo Publishing Co.'s catalogue just now, so far as pierrots are concerned, are "Georgie from Georgia," by Pelham, McGhee, and Rule, and "Wait for me, Fritzy, dear," by the evergreen Felix McGlennon.

"AIN'T you gwine to let me say 'good-bye'?" written and composed by Paul Knox, has been a veritable triumph at every hall on the Stoll tour at which Miss Daisy Mayer has sang it, and the Monte Carlo Publishing Co. now have this coon novelty in the press, and will issue it at an early date, so that pierrots may not lose the chance of including so taking a number in their seaside répertoires.

A VERY smart song by Mr. Fred Godfrey, entitled "Gibraltar," will be issued by the Monte Carlo Publishing Co. at an early date. The number has been in the hands of the above firm for some eight or ten months past, but has been held back for a special reason.

A CHARMING new speciality song, by Messrs. Mellor, Lawrance, and Gifford, entitled "Won't you come 'neath my sunshade, Lou?" will be produced at a leading West End music hall by a prominent artist at an early date. The Monte Carlo Publishing Co. are issuing this novelty in their "Sixpenny Successes" series.

MISS ISABEL DILLON has created a great impression at the London Tivoli with two of Messrs. Francis and Day's songs, namely, Kennedy Russell's "I'll be your golliwog" and "Pansy," by Chas. Wilmott and H. E. Darewski, jun., which latter number looks like becoming as popular as the same author and composer's "Home again, my cherry Blossom."

The lilt of old English melody and the old-world heartiness, vigour, and romance of the full-bodied days of Queen Anne—so admirably reflected throughout the new Empire ballet—should be catalogued among its claims to public favour; but the most powerful factor in its success—and the one that excited the most enthusiastic applause on the night of the production—is the last scene, which represents Vauxhall in the early years of the eighteenth century. At that period there were many similar public gardens, but Vauxhall held the pride of place. It was the arena of amusement for the wealthy and leisured classes, and the officers of Marlborough and the courtiers of St. James's mingled with a less reputable throng, and sought adventure in an atmosphere of distinction.

The wonderful picture at the Empire is not only brilliant and beautiful, but is full of life and character. The grandes dames of the period are brought to the gardens in the daintiest of Sedan chairs. They are not insensible to the flattery of the gallant young bloods, who dance with them the stately pavane with the grace of a day that is dead. The throng of gay revellers form an ever-changing kaleidoscope of colour, and the gaiety and sparkle of the scene are added to by a number of enchanting dances of the corps de ballet, which show that the practised eye of Mme. Katti Lanner has lost none of its sense of effect.

Then there is Adelina Genée! She represents an English young lady of the period, with that witchery of manner and nimbleness of foot which are beyond the vagueness of superlatives to describe. The fascinating Danish artist happens to be Lady Dolly, the daughter of Sir Roger de Coverley, immortalised by Addison, and she tells us in eloquent pantomime of her love for young Captain Fancourt and her profound indifference to the parti chosen for her by her father. All this occurs on the lawn in front of Sir Roger's country house, where the villagers gather to honour the Squire, and to sing "Here's a health unto Her Majesty, with a fallalla," and "He's a good old English gentleman—one of the olden time." The way of the lovers is made easy by the fondness of Tom, the Lady Dolly's chosen suitor, for her maid Peggy; and in the second scene, by the device of changing cloaks, the mistress gets clear away with her lover. But the maid is not so fortunate, for, after being fetched down the ladder by Tom, she is brought back with him by the watchmen, who are after Ruffler, Tom's friend, who gives a spice of villainy to the plot by stealing some of Lady Dolly's jewels.

In the third scene they are holding high festival in Vauxhall Gardens, where all the characters foregather. Dolly disguises herself as a gipsy, and foretells future happiness for Sir Roger and his old flame Lady Vallancy. The Baronet is afterwards rescued from an awkward situation by Captain Fancourt, and, learning that the young couple are married, he speedily bestows upon them his paternal blessing.

As the gipsy Mlle. Genée gets the necessary chance of letting herself go in a solo of exquisite grace; but it is in the duo—a Czech dance—with Mr. P. Sundberg that she makes the hit of the night. In red hessians she brings down the house by the irresistible abandon of her movements. We have never seen her do anything better. Mr. Sundberg rightly shares the honours of this perfect performance of a national dance. Mr. Fred Farren gives one of his characteristic solos, and joins Miss Elise Clerc in a very exhilarating pas de deux. Miss Dorothy Craske makes a gallant officer of Fancourt; and the dainty coquetry of the accomplished Mlle. Zanfretta is delightful to watch. Mr. A. Harding, a new comer to the Empire, is effective in his delineration of Sir Roger. The artistic work of Mr. R. M'Cleery is seen in the first typically English country scene; and Mr. Joseph Harker must be complimented on his brushwork in the Vauxhall scene. The wigs of Willie Clarkson admirably realise the period, and the costumes, executed by Miss Hastings and Morris Angel and Sons, make the fête in Vauxhall Gardens one of bewildering beauty.

Miss Ada Reeve, who has become an established favourite here, is reviving some of her earlier successes, among them "Love me just a little, Sue," in which she is as chic and charming as ever. A great hit is made by Le Page from America, a wonderful jumper, who in his flights is able to tread on eggs without breaking them. He is about as slick a performer as has been seen on this side, as he introduces a number of feats quite unparalleled. Mme. Graziella's cockatoos and macaws are obedient creatures, and make light of acrobatic difficulties on the bars; the Lumars include a lady who circles rapidly round a trapeze bar in a blaze of electric light; Miss Ruby Helder's baritone is heard to advantage in "When other lips"; and the Perezoffs, comedy jugglers, should be very popular with their show. Other attractions are the Biograph, and Margit and Lehner, eccentrics.

MR. HERBERT SHELLEY has been specially engaged to present his successful Gaelic protean play, Dan the Outlaw, at the Empire Theatre, Dublin, on Whit-Monday.

THE secretary of the Music Hall Benevolent Fund desires to acknowledge the sum of £4 5s. 8d. from Mr. Fred Miller, collected by him in the pence box at the Canterbury during the last month.

JAMES BIRDSALL CONSTANTINE, known as James Flahery, acrobat, died on the 5th inst. at the Consumption Hospital, Armley, Leeds, after a long illness, and was interred on the 8th. The deceased, who was a respected member of the Terriers' Association for eight years, was well looked after by that fraternity to the last.

OWING to a disappointment at the Palace, Holbeck, Leeds, on Monday, and with the permission of Mr. Wood, of the City Varieties, Leeds, where he was engaged, Mr. Frank Coyle filled in the vacancy with the greatest success, having to do three songs in each house.

MANXLAND will be ringing during the coming season with Felix McGlennon's new chorus song, "She lives in the Isle of Man," which has been placed on the market by Messrs. Francis and Day.

A DRAMATIC episode, in one scene, bearing the title, A Christmas Storm, was produced for copyright purposes at the Theatre Royal, Smethwick, on Saturday last. It will be in the programme next Wednesday afternoon at the Court Theatre, Wigan, on the occasion of the benefit matinée of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children.

MISS FLORRIE FORDE AT CARLISLE.

THE PALACE THEATRE.

Almost all the amusement seekers of Carlisle went to see Miss —— when she visited the Palace Theatre recently, but another of the favourite comediennes of the music hall stage, Miss Florrie Forde, who has this week been introduced to local audiences by Signor Pepi, has, if anything, gained an even heartier welcome, at any rate from all who have been to the theatre during the week. Miss Forde may not have the power of reflecting those sundry subtle flashes of humour which lightened the performance of Miss —— but she is far more fortunate in her songs, both in their character and in her own rendering of them. It is a primary duty of the music hall to supply the nation with its popular airs. That duty has of late years been partly relegated to musical comedy, whose authors are more anxious to supply tunes which everyone can whistle than was, for instance, the composer of the Savoy operas. But the music hall would still be able to fulfil that duty if it could get more songs of the type which Miss Florrie Forde sings. It is, moreover, a not unimportant duty. The music hall is first and foremost the haunt of the working class, and if that class can carry away a few tunes to relieve the tedium of the factory or the street they are quite justified in feeling duly grateful. One can, therefore, imagine that Signor Pepi's patrons will be clamouring for an early return visit from Miss Florrie Forde, for she has provided them with at least three new songs which will soon be whistled in all the local streets. Of these, unquestionably the best is "The Isle of Anglesey," a captivating tune, whose lilting refrain, introducing a few bars reminiscent of that delightful old air, "The Ash Grove," is quite ear-haunting. Miss Florrie Forde is an ideal embodiment of a broad, Anglo-Saxon type of songstress. Her style is robust, but never altogether meretricious. Robust is her personality, and yet her appearance is always tasteful, a slate-coloured velvet costume, with a picture hat, being succeeded by a handsome old-gold gown. Robust is her vocalisation, yet it never degenerates into the blatant bellow one too often hears on the variety stage. Robust are her songs, yet their tunes roll along with an easy swing which is irresistibly infectious. Signor Pepi has other exceptionally good artists in his programme this week, but it is Miss Florrie Forde whom his patrons will mainly go to see—to hear her songs, to hum them over in the intervals, and to carry them away for future use.—East Cumberland News, May 4, 1907.

Florrie Forde should be pleased with the reception she received in Carlisle. Signor Pepi personally complimented her, and said she was absolutely the first lady artiste whom his audience had sung with. They did sing with Mr. Geo. Lashwood, but not nearly so heartily as they did with Miss Forde. On Saturday night Signor Pepi presented her with a very magnificent basket of flowers.

MR. FRED BOWYER, who wrote that very successful song, "A little bit of sugar for the bird," in The New Barmaid, and The Little Stowaway, for Jenny Hill, is responsible for the following impromptu, which has caused considerable amusement among the author's brother Savages:—

WHAT'S IN A NAME, &c.—Shakespeare.

The names that I love are both simple and short,
Like Tom, Jack, or Charlie, or names of that sort;
But, oh! I've seen one which made me feel unwell,
'Twas Aubrey Llewelyn Coventry Fell.
'Twas marked on each tram with its workaday load—
All waiting en bloc in the Blackfriars Road.

I found 'twas the name of the secretar*ee*,
Of the trams which are owned by the London C.C.
I read it on each, and came over quite faint,
When I thought of the cost of the ratepayers' paint;
For it took quite a yard of big letters to spell—
Aubrey Llewelyn Coventry Fell.

I thought of the godfathers' anguish and shame,
Inflicting on one such a terrible name,
Whose use must have been for a hasty retreat,
In case of a fire to slide down to the street;
And if not successful, then hist'ry could tell,
How Aubrey Llewelyn Coventry Fell.

FRED BOWYER.

MESSRS. SPARROW AND BAWN, of the Empire, Camberwell, have secured Mr. Charles Dixton's admirable comedy sketch, Uncle Obadiah, as one of their principal attractions for Whit week.

MR. JOHN C. OLIVER deputised for Mlle. Yvette de Laabe at the Hippodrome, Hull, on Friday and Saturday last, and scored a success. It is only recently this clever illusionist, humorist, and vocalist completed a ten weeks' successful engagement at the Grand Circus, Hull, with the Globe Picture Company.

"ON THE ISLE OF ANGLESEY."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—On reading your interviewer's "chat" with Mr. Bennett Scott in The Era of May 4, I note Miss Florrie Forde's name is coupled with that of Miss Annie Purcell as the singer of the popular song, "On the Isle of Anglesey," by Castling and Murphy. I think it should have read, Miss Annie Purcell and Miss Florrie Gallimore. As far as I am aware, Miss Florrie Forde is not singing the song in question, but even so, as I have made it very popular in the provinces, I think I am entitled to a little credit for same.—Yours faithfully,

FLORRIE GALLIMORE.

Hippodrome, Lancaster, May 7, '07.

LONDON VARIETY THEATRES.

HOLLOWAY EMPIRE.

Still maintaining that high standard of excellence that characterises the programmes at this popular home of vaudeville, a really capital and well diversified evening's entertainment is provided for the delectation of its patrons during the week, and business, as a consequence, continues to be exceptional. Mr. Harry Roxbury and company top the bill in The Prince of Monte Carlo, described as a merry musical mélange, in three scenes. Messrs. Paul Knox and Harry Roxbury, who are jointly responsible for the book, lyrics, and music, have strung together a trifle containing the more familiar features of musical comedy, with a quick succession of song, dance, and gag. It is an amusing and vivacious production, and admirably serves its purpose. Mr. Roxbury submits a diverting portrayal of the irresponsible P.C. Longfellow. Mr. Edwin Dodds as the Count is a valuable ally in the laughter-making, and gives a clever character-study. Mr. Fred Davenporte as the Prince looks and acts well in a small part; and Mr. Alf. Clegg as James is commendable. Miss May Ross as Denise gives a semi-melodramatic performance, and does very well. Miss Ethel Bryant as Lady Carr proves a dainty exponent of the rôle, singing and dancing capably. A numerous chorus aids the production.

Mr. J. B. Preston, a Scotch comedian, gains a good reception in two songs. The Two Dixons, bâton swingers, vocalists, dancers, and banjoists, give a particularly good turn, their whole business being very smart and their reception most cordial. Mr. Lewis de Burgh presents a clever and mystifying illusion, "Dida," in which the production of two women from a tank of water is accomplished with neatness, much applause being accorded the act. Rapoli, a conjurer, gives an excellent performance, all his difficult feats being accomplished with considerable ease and finish, while a word is due to his assistant for his contribution to the amusement of the house. Maggie Bowman and Tom J. Morton in a comedy duo, She Loved a Policeman, make a good impression, the dance which concludes the piece being very clever. A popular feature of the programme is the Miles-Stavordale Quintette, in their well-known musical act, in which the human voice is reproduced with great skill on banjoes and harp. A very well-earned call greeted the end of their interesting act.

Mr. Larry Lewis, comedian, gains a good reception in two songs. The first, "Theres a silly remark to make," suits his quaint style admirably, and his second, "Tra la la," proves equally successful. The bottom of the bill is filled by no less an artist than Mr. Bransby Williams, in selections from his répertoire. For his first item he gives "An Old Man's Soliloquy to his Pipe," followed by "Uriah Heep," "A Humorous Story," and an impersonation of a penny showman announcing a performance of Hamlet. In all these character-studies Mr. Williams displays his well-known gifts, and a most flattering and well-earned tribute greets his efforts. Mention must be made of the admirable services rendered by Mr. Russell and his orchestra, the overture, "Grand Parade," proving a bright introduction to the evening's entertainment.

QUEEN'S, POPLAR.

"THE GARDEN OF GLITTER,"

An Egyptian Musical Comedy Extravaganza, by Kenney Allen, Produced at the Queen's, Poplar, on Monday, May 6.

Allsha	MISS RITA NARCELLI
B'Umptious	MR. WEBSTER PARTE
Frog-hi	MR. SAM MCCULLOUGH
Adolphus	MR. GEO. WINTOR
Miss Mamie Clancy	MISS MAY MCKENZIE
Billy Bunn	MR. JACK MCKENZIE

The Emperor of R'hadi, being informed by Frog-hi, the keeper of the sacred frogs, that one of these animals has been killed, wishes to put the law of the country—which is death for this offence—into force if the culprit can be discovered. The Princess Allsha, not knowing of this decree, has accidentally been the means of the frog's death, consequently her life is demanded as a propitiation. The people being disturbed look for a sign, when an aeroplane is seen, and Billy Bunn descends, in order to continue his search for a Miss Bunn, of Burton, whom he at once recognises in the Princess. The Emperor and keeper of the sacred frogs being determined to make the sacrifice of Allsha at all costs, conduct her to the temple of the god, there to await execution by the poisoned adder. At this moment the Sacred Frog dissents from the punishment, the people learn that the Princess has not really killed a frog, and everything is once more happiness and peace. This merry trifle is smartly written, and contains several very catchy airs, notably "Tight little island," "Barcelona girl," and "Come to the sacrifice," while it had been exceedingly well rehearsed, the strong chorus putting in some good work. The dresses were elegant, and the scenery in the best possible taste. As Billy Bunn, Mr. Jack McKenzie displayed plenty of humour, and was the life and soul of the piece. Mr. Webster Parte acquitted himself capitally as the Emperor; and Mr. Sam McCullough was good as Frog-hi. Miss Rita Narcelli was admirable as the Princess, her vocal contributions being rendered with taste and care; and Mr. George Wintor was efficient as Adolphus, Miss May McKenzie being energetic as Miss Mamie Clancy. Amongst the many excellent turns here this week we must mention Kurkamp, the singing conductor, who faultlessly renders "The Miserère" (Il Trovatore) and "In Love Land"; Miss Gertie Gitana, who charmingly sings "Always loved you" and "My dusky Princess"; and Mr. George Brooks, who is very funny in his songs, "The Fireman" and "Happy Sam." The able general-manager, Mr. Jack Woolf, with his usual energy, managed to finish on Monday a very long programme without a single omission five minutes under scheduled time, and Mr. Morris Abrahams is courtesy personified in his attention to the comfort of the patrons.

HAMMERSMITH PALACE.

On Monday, May 6, production of a new Dramatic Episode, entitled

"THE LION AND THE BEAR."

Prince Saratoff	MR. ROY JACKSON
Dora	MISS KITTY DOUGLAS
Lobenski	MR. FRED BENTLEY
Capt. Harold Vernon	MR. ALEX LUKOS

The scene is a room in the Prince's villa at Trouville, and as the curtain rises Lobenski is at the telephone explaining to his master that the English officer is expected that evening by his master's wife. While the servant is expressing his hatred of the English nation in rather forcible tones Capt. Vernon enters. The servant naturally changes his remarks into pleasant humble greetings, and announces that his mistress is expecting the Captain, and he will inform her of his presence. Vernon sings a song extremely well, and then seated in front of the fire, he talks to Dora's photograph. Dora and he love one another, but she has married the Prince, and Vernon, with difficulty, restrains the words of passion that constantly rise to his lips. He decides that he must not see her again. Dora enters, and they have just had time to greet one another when the Prince puts in an appearance and accuses the Captain of making love to his wife. Dora is ordered out of the room, and the Prince challenges Vernon to a duel. Swords and pistols are both suggested, but as the Captain is leaving for his hotel, the Prince suggests they should settle the matter there and then by playing cards, the loser to commit suicide. With reluctance, and after stating his preference for a fight, the Englishman agrees. The cards have been marked, but somehow this device fails, and they each win two games, when the servant creeps in, and by aid of a looking-glass shows his master the Captain's hand. The Prince wins, and his opponent has a hour in which to kill himself. He decides there is nothing to gain by waiting the hour, and is about to shoot himself when Dora enters. She has seen the trickery with the looking-glass, and explains matters. The Prince re-enters, and drawing his sword, dashes at the Captain, who defends himself. The servant also joins in the fight, and two are beginning to get too much for one, when Dora grasps the revolver and threatens to shoot the first one that moves. At the same time she rings up the police, who arrive in time to arrest the servant, the Prince having been shot by Dora while he was trying to stab Captain Vernon.

It is a well-written sketch, and when the fight has been worked up it should be most successful. Mr. Lukos was excellent as the Captain; Mr. Roy Jackson was a most effective Prince. The servant was played with all the necessary cunning by Mr. Fred Bentley, and Miss Kitty Douglas was an attractive Dora.

BARNARD'S, GREENWICH.

This popular hall is doing excellent business under the admirable management of Mr. Bert Dent. The bill is selected with care and judgment, and each item is warmly applauded. After the overture, capitally rendered by the band under the direction of Mr. William Skerry, Albert St. Clair opens the ball, and is well received. Grogie, with his amusing ditties, "I never grumbled" and "It don't seem just right to me," creates laughter. Chummie La Mara, always a favourite here, is well applauded for her songs, "Boys in Blue" and "In the sweet by and bye." Ruffell's Imperial Bioscope exhibits some new and interesting pictures; Yjasma, assisted by Mlle. Delouie, appears in a scena, entitled An Evening's Pleasure, which consists of some clever and novel feats in weight-lifting by teeth, trapeze act, &c.

Edgar Forest and company appear in a well-acted and smart little sketch, My Friend the Enemy. Will Sergeant, who is billed as the "Anglo-American vocal comique," sang successfully "Behind the bar" and "A little bit knocked about," and gains well-deserved plaudits. Chris Baker sings of "Another one," and causes much merriment by his funny patter. The Kyasyas give a clever turn, consisting mainly of weight-lifting by teeth and hair; and Flow Carlow, comedienne, sings brightly and cleverly, and is well applauded. The Zaro Troupe give an exhibition of skill and dexterity, and prove themselves capital tumblers and acrobats. A good mimic is found in Will Carrol, who gives some clever imitations of Harry Ford and other well-known artists. Madge Bryce sings charmingly about "Days of old," and furnishes an agreeable number. Kemp and Harris contribute "I want to be a soldier"; the Leo Comedy Quartette appear in a clever and amusing comedy sketch; Archie Crag sings well in "What a funny little hat"; and J. P. Boston is also in the bill.

GRAND, CLAPHAM.

Capital houses gather here nightly. This week Manager Ketteman has arranged a very interesting programme, which is being received with every expression of satisfaction. The task of starting the evening's entertainment is entrusted to Mr. G W. Foster, a comedian, who sings a very amusing song entitled "I'm the best banana on the bunch." The Sisters Lee, always an interesting turn, are again here, and are repeating their former successes. Their many clever acrobatic feats evoke hearty rounds of applause, and they have many times to bow their acknowledgments. The Poluskis, Sam and Will, the popular comedians, who have not been seen here for some time, are causing much laughter with their clever patter and crosstalk. Miss May Mars, a charming comedienne, is exploiting with success a new song entitled "Swing me just a little bit higher Obadiah do." This is set to a tuneful melody, and the ready manner in which the chorus is taken up by the "upper ten" shows that it will soon become popular. Afterwards she gives her "In the shadows of the Pyramids," which is going as well as ever. A great success is achieved by Mr. Whit Cunliffe, who is singing a couple of numbers in his usual exhilarating fashion. His first song is that amusing one about "Poor Old Father," which is followed by "It's a different girl again," and judging by the vim that the house puts into the singing of the chorus, its popularity is not yet on the wane. A very interesting item is that which is being presented by Mr. Fred Ginnett's "Daily Mirror" army boys, and the finished way in which they do their work shows that the greatest pains must have been spent on their training. The clever manner in which they manage their mounts in the small amount of space at their disposal is deserving of great praise, and whether they are riding in single file or eight abreast their style is always perfect. They certainly earn the applause bestowed on them. The Sisters Aindow are presenting a very acceptable musical turn. Amongst other things they play a number of popular airs on the xylophon, on which instrument they show themselves to be quite expert. Spry and Austin are very amusing, and their clever song entitled "All Sorts" is quite one of the funniest imaginable. The Stella Troupe of Girls open with a Japanese song, and afterwards give "The Yankee Doodle girls." They bring their turn to a conclusion with some neat and clever dancing. A capital evening's amusement is brought to a conclusion with the Bioscope, which is most amusing. The series of films entitled "The Busy Man" is followed with the greatest interest.

THE STANDARD.

An excellent example of Mr. T. S. Dickie's skill in framing a popular entertainment is seen in the current bill at the Standard, which is being thoroughly appreciated by large audiences. Comedians of widespread popularity are included in the programme, prominent among them being Mr. Ernest Rees, whose amusing patter is the cause of many mirthful moments. Mr. Rees cuts a quaint figure, and rattles off his yarns, which embrace a wide series of topics, with inimitable drollery. Mr. Neil Kenyon, the Scotch comedian, is also responsible for much laughter. His numberless eccentricities include a new edition of travesties of Tennyson's "Charge of the Light Brigade." Mr. Kenyon gives many original touches to his impersonations, and so successful is he that he has to accede to an undeniable encore with a comic recitation in which some of the most ludicrous devices for obtaining laughter are introduced.

A specially cordial welcome is extended to Miss Daisy James, whose song with the refrain "Tell me, Jane, why do you love a soldier?" is already in possession of the populace, and the chorus was re-echoed vigorously by the audience. Miss James gives piquant point to the tale of the maiden who "kept a dainty little shop in the West," and her success is great. Lotto, Lilo, and Otto, with whose name is associated the earliest triumphs on the wheel, give a varied display of their skill, the beauteous young lady displaying agility and grace while careering round the stage. The cyclist policeman sets the house in a continual roar during his funny escapades with the bicycle, but when later on he performs a series of incredible feats, which include the riding of a tandem cycle on the back wheel without holding, enthusiasm is aroused in every part of the house. The cycle polo match has also features of interest, and the applause lavished upon the clever artists is unbounded.

A clear and ringing voice enables Miss Alice Maple to give admirable expression to her songs, the sentiment of which is thoroughly suited to the popular ear. Her first effusion takes the form of an acrostic in which the praises of the British Isles are sung in tuneful rhyme. To the ballad with the refrain "I love the lily" is added a skilful step dance, which forms a pleasant finish to an item that makes a decided hit. Shirley and Ransom have an agreeable interlude in the coster comedy episode Art a Quid, and a farcical frolic entitled Flighty Flossie is ably presented by Jack Denton and Miss Hettie Chattell. A novelty is found in the Twin Sisters Edwards, comediennes, dancers, and drummers; and Mr. Arthur Melrose, comedian and whistler; Burnetti, character musician, Miss Lily Lawrence, comedienne, and Mr. Gus Granville, comedian, are also in the bill.

The sketch of the week is At the Stroke of Twelve, played by Mr. and Mrs. Royston-Dene and company. The chief incident of a thrilling episode is that in which a lady who has fatally stabbed a former lover betrays herself during a sleep-walking scene by re-enacting the tragedy over again in the presence of her husband and a detective. The husband is determined to hand his wife over to justice, but the lady cheats the gallows by stabbing herself to the heart. The effect of the piece was obtained by sheer force of acting, Mrs. Royston-Dene exerting an intense influence as the modern Lady Macbeth, and Mr. Royston-Dene acting well and delivering his lines with excellent elocution as the husband. A new series of animated pictures, shown by the Edisonograph, completes an enjoyable entertainment, over which Mr. Maurice Volny presides genially.

THE BRITANNIA.

A programme of exceptional brilliancy is submitted this week at this popular place of amusement. Miss Jennie Venton, a smart comedienne and dancer, renders a tuneful ditty, and obliges with a neat dance as a second effort; the Lorrisons, who are billed as "the Cream of Crazy Comedy Teams," submit an act which causes the audience much amusement, including, as it does, some excellent singing and dancing; Milner Verren, whose voice is in excellent condition, receives well-merited applause for his singing of "Be as you used to be." The hit of the evening is made by Tennyson and Wallis, and the two comedians thoroughly deserved the applause that was bestowed upon them, for they kept the audience in continual merriment the whole time they occupied the stage. Another specially meritorious turn is that of the Sisters Lunelle. The pair are smartly dressed, and sing good songs, while their dancing is of the highest order. Miss Cissie Lupino presents some admirable samples of international dancing, amongst which are a fine step dance, an Irish jig, a Scotch reel, and a Dutch sabot dance. The sketch is provided by Mr. Leonard Mortimer and his company in Dandy Dacre, and is smartly played by Mr. Mortimer in the title-rôle, Mr. Reginald Weighill as Sir Michael Collyn, Mr. Edwin J. Collins as Richard Dacre, Mr. Arthur Bawtree as Paul Hiensen, Miss Edith Lewis as Alma Hiensen, and Miss Ida Clifford as Lady Eva. The sketch is well mounted, and the incidental music is very pretty. The remainder of the programme consists of the Waltons, a fine pair of acrobats; Horace Lade, a characteristic dancer; the Four Emilions, described as the "World's Novelty Acrobats"; and Raymond's Bio-tableaux pictures, including "The Coiner's Daughter."

THE £1,000 GHOST CASE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—I trust you will consider the following facts of sufficient interest to your readers to justify you in publishing them.

In the action at law arising from this challenge, it is evident that the jury arrived at their decision on the ground that they considered the effect in question had been only reproduced in part.

It was said that the complete effect was the production of a living form from the medium's side, and the subsequent re-absorption of that form into the person of the medium, whereas I had only exhibited the production of such a form.

I declared my intention to perform the re-absorption, and bring another action to recover the reward. The effect had only been omitted because, from the point of view of stage-craft, it formed an anti-climax to the production.

Shortly after the conclusion of the trial, however, I received from Mr. Colley's solicitor the following letter:— "55, Chancery-lane, W.C.

"April 30, 1907.

"COLLEY v. MASKELYNE.

"DEAR SIR,—

"My client instructs me to withdraw the challenges issued by him to yourself. Please take notice that same are hereby withdrawn.—Yours faithfully,

"E. R. SEROCOLD SKEELS.

"J. N. Maskelyne, Esq."

I am therefore prevented from prosecuting the matter further. I think I can claim to be victor, as I have been in every previous fight.

Allow me to add in conclusion that it was not a monetary consideration that induced me to enter into this contest. I have stated hundreds of times from my stage that had the reward been paid, it was my intention to return it.—Yours very truly,

St. George's Hall, W. J. N. MASKELYNE.

NEW MUSIC.

Messrs. Price and Reynolds, of Berners-street, have published Al Fresco songs, appropriately named for whimsical ditties supposed to be sung in the open air, and in some cases really thus interpreted. "On the pier by the sea" describes how paterfamilias takes his little one to the seaside once a year to build up sand castles and pick up shells. But more pungent ditties are included. For example, the convivial young lady who is carried home when she could carry no more, is said to have a "Yarmouth bloater" thirst, and indulges to such an extent that, according to the chorus, "They had to carry, Carrie," &c. Then the year 1910 is named as the year when the Germans are to invade us, and the women are to become members of the House of Commons. Far more comical ideas are in some of the ditties, as in the song called "What! What! What!" composed by Messrs. Will Letters and John A. Glover, in which one of the verses explains how

"A Jew asked a grocer for one halfpenny egg,
He got it, then said, 'This is small, Mr. Glegg';
Glegg got the needle, and said with a groan,
'For one halfpenny hens won't lay a foundation stone.'"

Another song, arranged by Mr. Arthur Stafford, tells of "Father's corporation." Mr. Alfred Glover writes about a girl we should all like to know, as she is the "Same girl on Sunday, same girl on Monday, same girl the whole year round." Some of the songs, such as "Iona, my Indian star," by Mr. Bert H. Delman, are more sentimental; and others like "Mister Gollywog, good-night" are written to please children. "My château in Barcelona" is composed by Mr. C. W. Murphy, and sung by Miss Ella Retford; and another song states as a fact that "All little girls are pretty." In Mr. Glover's song it appears that Monty Brown has "Another little girl in his eye"; and the ditty, "There's a maid in Germany" contains a more pleasing story than the "Made in Germany" we see every day. We can highly commend the songs for the pier or shore, and the way in which Messrs. Price and Reynolds have produced their Al Fresco songs we feel certain they will secure a great circulation in the music halls, and also be frequently heard this summer at the seaside.

"THE UNWRITTEN LAW."

The profligacy of man is depicted with unsparing hand in Mr. John Lawson's newest sketch, produced at the Holborn Empire on Monday. No concealment is made in the action of the motives of the leading representative of vice, whose evil propensities are still more vividly outlined in a series of cinematograph pictures which divides the scenes. A recent sensational trial in America is recalled in the sketch, and it is in that country that the plot is laid. An unscrupulous financier named Shepston has conceived an illicit love for the beautiful Evelyn Norman, who is betrothed to a young millionaire. In order to get Evelyn in his power Shepston secures some cheques for large amounts drawn by Mrs. Norman upon the Western Bank, in which, however, she has no more than fifty dollars to her credit. Under the threat of exposure, Shepston compels Mrs. Norman to bring her daughter to the offices of the bank, where the scene opens, and Evelyn is there plied with wine in order that the villain's purpose may be served. Shepston, who has just received with joy the news of his wife's death, promises to marry Evelyn, who rejects his offer with contempt, and she is presently rescued by her betrothed, who floors the rascally Shepston and takes Evelyn away in safety. The next scene is devoted to "an incident in Evelyn's life three years before marriage, in which the spectacle of a young girl struggling with a man in evening dress is portrayed on the cinematograph. The third scene is the Roof Garden Theatre, New York, where a number of lady singers and dancers do a "turn" and then mingle with the audience. Evelyn and the millionaire have been married that morning by special licence, and make their appearance in the theatre. Shepston thirsts for revenge, and whilst the bridegroom goes to see his mother, leaving his wife in charge of Mrs. Norman, he calls in a bailiff to demand of Evelyn payment of the fraudulent cheques. The villain has in his possession a revolver, with which he intends to shoot the millionaire, but Evelyn skilfully abstracts it from his pocket; and when the husband returns and finds Shepston annoying his wife there is a fight between the men. Chairs and other articles of furniture are utilised in the combat, until a pistol shot is heard, and Shepston is found lying dead. The question arises as to who fired the shot, and the millionaire declares it was he; but there appears to be no immediate consequences, as he is able to take Evelyn away, declaring, in defiance of the "unwritten law," that she will not be the only fallen woman who has made a good wife and mother.

The mounting of the sketch is in the sumptuous style that has for long years been associated with the productions of Mr. John Lawson, the Interior of the Bank being tastefully furnished and decorated, while the Roof Garden Theatre is reproduced in every detail. Mr. John Lawson has a part after his own heart in that of the young millionaire who delights in the exposure of "social leprosy," as it is described, and is especially strong in denunciation of the employment for sinister purposes of barmaids, typewriters, and others. Miss Buena Bent acted with a sympathetic appreciation of the rôle of Evelyn; and Miss Barbara Babington, who has the part of a lady of doubtful respectability, imbued the character with all the required vigour and abandon, her attack on Evelyn in the theatre scene being very telling.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

On Monday afternoon the students of the Royal Academy of Music gave a dramatic and musical performance of The Moon Slave, and a new fairy play, entitled The Brownie and the Piano-tuner. The performance commenced with Mr. Paul Corder's terpsichorean fantasy, The Moon Slave, founded on a tale by Barry Pain, "which relates how a young Princess is so passionately fond of dancing that she seeks a deserted maze in the palace garden, and dances to the light of the moon, and offers herself to it body and soul in return for the music. Her offer is accepted, and the Princess dances her life away to the moon music." Miss Olive Turner proved a most attractive Princess Viola, and both her dancing and that of Mr. Cecil Pearson, who appeared as the ghostly Moon Spirit, won hearty applause from the large audience, and did the greatest credit to their talented teacher, Mr. B. Soutten. The second item on the programme was a new fairy play, in four scenes, entitled The Brownie and the Piano-tuner, written, and with incidental music composed by L. E. Lomax. The story relates how an old-fashioned farmer and his wife have a smart son, who, in town, follows the profession of piano-tuner, and comes home full of modern ideas, and wants them carried out at the old farm. A niece of the old farmer, a dairymaid, had formerly been engaged to the piano-tuner, but after his town experiences this matter is "off," as the tuner is betrothed to a rich young lady in town. The old couple are firm believers in the brownies, a kind of elves who every night come in and clean the kitchen, and, as new milk is always put out for them at night by the niece, they are indignant at the way she is treated by the tuner, and determine to put matters right. Of course, then all ends happily, as a letter is found by the Brownies, in which the rich young lady refuses the piano-tuner. The little piece was well written and admirably acted, and some quite original comic business introduced, as when the Brownies discover a new carpet-sweeper in place of the old birch-broom, and drink bicycle oil left out instead of new milk. The audience also were much amused with the cuckoo-clock, which, as a note in the programme observes, strikes six or seven at half-past nine, and when striking the quarter it is ten o'clock, and four it is midnight. There are three scenes of the farmouse, and one of the Sussex Downs at night, where the Brownies disport themselves on a gigantic toadstool. Mr. Cecil Pearson made a capital Farmer Podder; and his wife was cleverly played by Miss Cecil Martin. Mr. Victor de Nevers appeared with success as the contemptuous piano-tuning son, Jem, who, as the Chief Brownie says, discourses such sweet music while tuning a piano; and Miss Olga Antony, although undertaking the part at short notice, made a charming Avice, the dairymaid. The three Brownies, Tom, Dick, and Harry, were cleverly played by Master Alfred Grover Quaife, Master S. de Groot, and Master V. Harris. The performance was under the able direction of Mr. Richard Temple, with the scenes and lighting effects arranged by Mr. Harold Hammond. A small orchestra, conducted by Mr. F. Corder and Mr. Paul Corder, proved effective, and the actors in, and the composer of, The Brownie and the Piano-tuner, were warmly applauded by the audience.

MR. AND MRS. LENNARD CHARLES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—Re letter anent the above in your last week's issue, perhaps it may interest Mr. J. Thos. Charles to learn that it was I who introduced his parents to the public as "Mr. and Mrs. Lennard Charles." They took part in my touring concerts for a considerable time. It was I who christened them "Mr. and Mrs. Lennard Charles," and advertised them as "the female baritone and operatic duettists."—Yours faithfully,

HARRY LISTON, Humorist.

May 8, 1907.

ONE of the artists who sailed for Africa on Saturday was the ever-popular Dolly Harmer, who had a host of friends to wish her success and "bon voyage," amongst them being Miss Queenie Leighton, Drury-lane's principal boy, and Malcolm Scott, who presented her with some lovely bouquets.

THE WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION ACT, 1906.

EFFECT ON THEATRES AND MUSIC HALLS.

(Copyright.)

BY ALBERT A. STRONG, LL.B.

(Author of "Dramatic and Musical Law.")

The immense importance of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, to various members of the theatrical and music hall professions can hardly be over-rated. To many a trade and business the first Workmen's Compensation Act, namely, that of 1897, came as a revolution; and anyone who has had experience of the working of that Act knows what the new Act will mean to many a business which has so far been untouched.

Apart from any statute, under our Common Law, an employee, as a rule, cannot make the employer liable for an injury sustained in the course of his service. In certain cases, however, he can, e.g., when the employer has not provided competent fellow servants.

Then came the Employers' Liability Act of 1880, which considerably increased the employee's right of action; but this left many accidents unprovided for. Another drawback to the Act was the fact that the servant might contract himself out of the Act. This "contracting out" was very common, and in many theatrical contracts will be seen conditions that the proprietor of the theatre is not to be liable for accidents under the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, &c.

For instance, in the recent case of Burr v. Theatre Royal, Drury-lane, Ltd., the contract contained a clause as follows:—"Notwithstanding anything contained in the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, or any Act continuing or amending the same, the artist shall not, nor shall the artist's legal personal representative, in case of the said artist's death, have any right of compensation or any remedy whatever against the company in respect of any personal injury which may be caused to the artist by reason of any defect in the condition of the ways, works, machinery, or plant connected with or used in or out the Theatre Royal, Drury-lane, or any other theatre or place of amusement wherein the artist may perform under this agreement: or by reason of the negligence of any person in the service of the company at the said Theatre Royal, Drury-lane (or any such theatre or other place of amusement as aforesaid), who has any superintendence entrusted to him whilst in the exercise of such superintendence: or by reason of negligence of any person in the service of the company whose orders or directions the artist at the time of the injury was bound to conform, and did conform, where such injury may result from her having so conformed: or by reason of the act or omission of any such person in the service of the company done or made in obedience to the rules or bye-laws of the company, or in obedience to particular instructions given by the management."

As will be seen, in future such a clause will not avail; the proprietor will be liable in spite of it.

This Act was followed by the Workmen's Compensation Acts, 1897 and 1900, which did not apply to theatres. Finally comes the Act of 1906.

The Workmen's Compensation Act of 1906 comes into force on July 1, 1907. It will affect almost everyone connected with theatres and music halls, from the wealthy proprietor, who will have to pay, down to the smallest call-boy who, if injured, will receive compensation.

The first section of the Act contains the essence of the new law, and is worded in an unexpectedly simple manner for an Act of Parliament. It says: "If in any employment personal injury by accident arising out of and in the course of the employment is caused to a workman, his employer shall, subject as hereinafter mentioned, be liable to pay compensation in accordance with the first schedule to the Act."

The term "workman" does not apply only to the horny-handed one in corduroys, but includes everyone, male or female, adult or infant, who is employed. In short, the Act applies to all employees, with the following exceptions:—

(1) Persons employed otherwise than by way of manual labour, whose remuneration exceeds £250 a year.
(2) Persons whose employment is casual, and who are employed otherwise than for the purpose of their employers' trade or business.
(3) Members of the Police force.
(4) Outworkers.
(5) Members of the employer's family dwelling in his house.

It is quite obvious that stage carpenters and other persons doing actual manual labour will come within the Act, and be entitled to recover, but the difficulties appear to be greater when we come to other theatrical employees. Clerks and domestic servants certainly come within the Act, and so does anyone employed who earns not more than £250 a year. A person who earns more than this amount does not come within the Act unless he is engaged in "manual labour." This gives rise to one of the difficulties of the Act, viz., what is "manual labour"? It has been held that where a person earns his money mainly through the confidence that his employer reposes in his honesty, skill, or knowledge, the fact that he does in the exercise of such confidence also execute manual work would not in itself constitute his engagement one of manual labour. For instance, it has been held in various cases that an omnibus conductor, a tramcar driver, a railway guard of a goods train, a grocer's assistant, and a hairdresser were not engaged in "manual labour." Apparently an actor or actress earning more than £250 a year would not be considered to be engaged in manual labour, and would have no claim in case of accident. But performers and the officials of the theatre not earning more than £250 a year will have a good claim for damages in case of accident.

As to casual employment, it appears that the employer will be liable where the employment is casual if it is for the purpose of his trade or business. Therefore, a super, casually employed, will be entitled to recover in case of accident.

While on the subject of what employees can claim, a difference at once will be apparent between theatrical and music hall artists. In the former case the performer as a member of the company is undobtedly a "workman," and will have a claim for damage by accident against the owner of the theatre, or of the company, as the case may be—that is to say, against the person who engages him. But music hall artists may possibly be in a different position. It may be held that they are "independent contractors" and not "workmen," and cannot, therefore, recover damages from the management for an accident while performing. This would not, however, apply to a member of a troupe or sketch company, who might still have a right of action against the owner of such troupe or company.

The word "accident" in the former Acts is used in the popular and ordinary sense of the word as denoting "an unlooked-for mishap or an untoward event which is not expected or designed," and it has been decided in former cases that the fact that the results of an accidental injury are more serious owing to the physical condition of the workman at the time is immaterial.

Nor does it matter what the cause of the accident is.

It must not be forgotten that in order to give the employee a right to damages for an accident it must be one arising "out of and in the course of the employment." It is somewhat difficult to apply decisions under the former Acts to possible cases arising in the theatrical profession. If an accident happened while the employee was engaged in his own business, or in recreation, the management would not be liable. A simple instance would be that of an accident happening to a member of a touring company who was driving, walking, or cycling for pleasure in the interval between rehearsal and the performance. Here the owner of the touring company would not be responsible. But if the accident happened while the artist was on his way to or from a rehearsal or performance the management might be liable. At any rate, the question that would have to be considered would be when the employment begins and ends. In cases under the former Workmen's Compensation Acts the question frequently arose as to whether a man's employment began until he reached the place where he was going to work, and generally it was held it had not so begun, but there are exceptions to this rule, and it may well be that the case I have given is an exception. It has been held that a workman injured in his dinner-time would be entitled to the protection of the Act, and could claim damages for an accident happening then.

Of course, it could hardly be expected that the employer would be liable when the employee was injured while acting for his own purposes as opposed to carrying out the business of his employer, but as has already been pointed out, the mere fact that he breaks off his employment temporarily for the purpose of personal convenience, such as having his dinner, will not usually debar him from obtaining compensation.

One very important class of case that is likely to arise under the Act is that of a troupe of acrobats. It would appear that in case of a member of the troupe sustains injuries, e.g., falling from a trapeze, while performing or rehearsing, he would be able to get damages from the owner of the troupe. This is a very serious matter for all employer of that kind of labour. The same will apply to accidents happening in sketches, e.g., where a pistol goes off accidentally, or where swords have to be used in the course of the play, and one of the actors is injured by an accidental stabbing.

In no case is an employer liable under the Act in respect of any injury which does not disable the workman for a period of at least one week from earning full wages at the work at which he is employed.

Another important point to which attention must be drawn is as to whether the injury to the workman is attributable to his serious and wilful misconduct. If such accident causes the death or the serious and permanent disablement of the workman, then the employer is still liable, notwithstanding that it is owing to such workman's serious and wilful misconduct. If the injuries, however, are not as serious as this then the employer will not be liable.

But this small crumb of comfort to the employers has been very much diminished by the construction the Court and juries put upon "wilful and serious misconduct." Direct disobedience to the orders of the employer is apparently not necessarily "serious and wilful misconduct," if we may judge by the decisions given on past cases. As one instance, there was a case decided in the House of Lords, where there was a notice prohibiting the use of a lift on the works by anyone not carrying a load, and a workman not carrying a load, in direct defiance of the notice, used the lift and was killed. The House of Lords held that this did not amount to "serious misconduct."

Mere negligence of the workmen will not excuse the master from being liable, even when the accident has been occasioned by such negligence, and he will also be liable for injuries caused to the workman by the negligence of a fellow employee or by a stranger. For instance, if some heavy scenery is being put up or moved, and an actor about to cross the stage is expressly warned not to do so, and in spite of this he does so, and is injured by the scenery falling on him, the management will in all probability be responsible. Certainly it will be if the actor is killed or is permanently injured.

Before an employee can recover under the Act he must give notice of the accident as soon as practicable after the happening thereof, and before he has voluntarily left the employment in which he was injured, and he must also claim the compensation within six months of the accident causing the injury, or, in case of the employee's death, his representative must claim within six months from such death. The failure to carry out these technicalities will not, however, necessarily be a bar to proceedings.

Anyone injured under the Act who has given notice of his accident is bound if required by his employer to submit himself for examination to a doctor provided and paid for by the employer.

"Contracting out" of the Act is not allowed. A form has already been given of the clause contracting out of the Employers' Liability Act, 1880. Such a clause will be useless in future, even if it is signed by the employee.

The amount of compensation payable by the employer under the Act is to be:—

(a) Where death results from the injury—
(1) If the workman leaves any dependents wholly dependent upon his earnings, a sum equal to his earnings in the employment of the same employer during the three years next preceding the injury, or the sum of £150, whichever of those sums is the larger, but not exceeding in any case £300, provided that the amount of any weekly payments made under this Act, and any lump sum paid in redemption thereof, shall be deducted from such sum, and if the period of the workman's employment by the said employer has been less than the said three years, then the amount of his earnings during the said three years shall be deemed to be one hundred and fifty-six times his average weekly earnings during the period of his actual employment under the said employer:
(2) If the workman does not leave any such dependents, but leaves any dependants in part dependent upon his earnings, such sum not exceeding in any case the amount payable under the foregoing provisions as may be agreed upon, or, in default of agreement, may be determined on arbitration under this Act to be reasonable and proportionate to the injury to the said dependents: and
(3) If he leaves no dependents, the reasonable expenses of his medical attendance and burial not exceeding £10.

(b) Where total or partial incapacity for work results from the injury, a weekly payment during the incapacity not exceeding 50 per cent. of his average weekly earnings during the previous twelve months, if he has been so long employed: but if not, then for any less period during which he has been in the employment of the same employer, such weekly payment not to exceed £1:

Provided that (a) If the incapacity lasts less than two weeks no compensation shall be payable in respect of the first week: and (b) As respects the weekly payments during total incapacity of a workman who is under twenty-one years of age at the date of the injury, and whose average weekly earnings are less than 20s., 100 per cent. shall be substituted for 50 per cent. of his average weekly earnings, but the weekly payment shall in no case exceed 10s.

This little pamphlet does not profess to be an exhaustive account of the new Act. It is hoped, however, that it will have the effect of drawing the attention of theatrical employers, on the one hand, to their grave responsibilities, and of their employees, on the other, to their new rights.

THE fair-ground was well filled with caterers of amusement, and on Saturday and Monday last thousands of sightseers promenaded the market-ground. The principal novelties were Styles, Raynor, and Campbell's diving exhibition; Relph and Pedley's whirling the whirl; George Green's cinématograph theatre and motor-car set; John Collins's big boats and electric jumping horses; Hibbert's swings and steam horses; G. Stockport May Fair.

UNDER the management of Mr. T. Hurst, for the Roundabout Proprietors' and Showmen's Union, this fair gave evidence of increasing importance and interest. The show list was headed by Captain Tom Payne, with his famous American bioscope, followed by Harry Wall's dime museum and freak show; Eagle Davis's knife-throwing experts and natural wonders exhibition; and W. Shaw's portable Royal academy. The local showmen, J. Hibbert and Sons, were again to the front with their combination of machine novelties. These included galloping horses, racing cockerels, and park swings. There were also motor-car sets and steam yachts by J. Green and J. Collins, the steam swings by W. Shaw, and the big wheel by Leiskie. The shooting concerns were provided by Messrs. Kitchen, and Jewell; juvenile horses and motors, by W. Chaplain and others. Guisboro' Fair.

AMONGST the shows at this Yorkshire fixture were Mrs. S. Manders's Royal waxwork and cinématograph exhibition, and Pain's living picture show; Richardson Bros.' gondola set, Mrs. Crow's steam horse set, and big boats by Rich and Twilley; rifle saloons by Robson, Crow, Twilley; and the usual varieties and throwing games, by Smith, Watkins, Rich, and Hawker.

FOR this well-known fixture there was gathered together a capital array of shows, riding machines, and other novelties—Chipperfield's menagerie, Payne's cinématograph, Biddall's freaks, and Priest's two novelty booths; M. Murphy's switchback, Carriss and Carr's steam horses, Baker's steam yachts, Robinson's Winchester range, emma sheets, and cokers, Carriss's rifle saloon, and Sheeran's and Davey's throwing games.

Ollerton May Feast.

AGAIN this festival was under the banner of Twigdon, the Derbyshire showman, and with him were associated the usual attendant throng of caterers of minor amusements.

Switchbacks Preferred to Gallopers.

CHARLES HILL, a roundabout proprietor at Fulham, in the Greenwich County Court, on May 3, sued Mrs. Maksey, landlady of the Star and Garter, New Cross-road, and proprietress of the Deptford Fair Ground, for £48 damages for breach of contract. Plaintiff's counsel said his client took the ground for a fortnight, on the understanding that no other riding machines were to be allowed there. However, there was a switchback on the ground, and the youth of Deptford preferred this switchback to the galloper, of which plaintiff was the proprietor. He had therefore suffered special damage, because it was no use him setting up in the fair-ground when the switchback was present. Plaintiff further said that Deptford Fair Ground was one of the best in England for roundabouts, and that on the Saturday night when he should have opened he would have taken £16. Judgment for plaintiff for £15.

AT Astwood Bank we have Herbert's roundabouts, swing-boats, shooting saloons, cokernut sheets, &c.

Redditch.

AT the Royal Hotel Yard, Redditch, we have Mr. H. Ayers' fancy fair and carnival, steam roundabouts, racing cockerels, park swings, shooting saloons, &c.

Radford.

AT Radford Feast were Scarrotts' roundabouts, park swings, cokernut sheets, pipe-smasher, and other numerous fair-ground paraphernalia.

Wilton, Salisbury.

THE annual spring fair was held, as usual, in the Market-place; the chief caterer was James Bartlett, with galloping-horses, swings, &c. There were a large number of shooting saloons, throwing games, and stalls, and good business was done.

The Butts.

JOHN SCOTT'S Royal British Circus visited here on Saturday last, giving two performances to delighted audiences. Mr. Joe Hastings, the great jumper, proved a great attraction; Miss Flora Viola is a dainty equestrienne; and the bare-back riding of Mr. G. H. Scott and Mons. Biddall was very smart. Mr. W. Floyd provided a smart turn with barrels, tables, &c; Mlle. Flora and Master John delighted the audience with their wire-walking. The clowns proved to be highly amusing, and some good films were given on the Bioscope.

Chester.

THE Chester Race Carnival opened on Saturday last under the management of Mr. Pat Collins. The machines on the fair-ground include the racing cockerels of Mr. P. Collins, J. Collins's airship (a new edition of the old roley-poley), P. Collins, jun.'s twin yachts, P. Collins's motor-cars, the Newmarket gallopers of Miss M. Collins, and Hibberts' racing cockerels. Hayden's second-sight show, Harry Hughes' boxing saloon, and several fine art shows are amongst the attractions. Mrs. F. Collins' new show, with its magnificent organ front, is the chief object of interest. The inside is comfortably seated and decorated, and the Chronophone is being exploited with well-deserved success. Turner's photographic studio is located in its old place; Beech's topsy-turvy house and Mr. P. Collins's helter-skelter lighthouse complete the list of novelties. Shooters, cokers, Emmas are supplied by Messrs. Cordwell, Mercer, Wright, &c. This is the largest fair yet held in Chester, and the well-arranged ground reflects great credit on Mr. Pat Collins's ground manager.

Bishop's Castle Fair.

THE pretty Shropshire village that rejoices in being Bishop's Castle held its fair on May 3 and 4. The shows and machines present were Chipperfield's cinematograph, Herbert's novelty booth, Marshall Hill's switchback gondolas and range of park swings, Turner's rifle saloon, other varieties by the caterers on this ground.

Heckmondwike Fair.

HARRY ASHINGTON'S premier cinematograph theatre, "The World Day by Day, as Seen by the Camera" was here; the principal machine sets were provided by J. W. Waddington, who exhibited motor cars, the twin yachts in the air, and a farmyard set; Morley exhibited steam swings and gem motors; juvenile motor-cars by Houldsworth, and shooting galleries by Gledstone and Seed; emma sheets and pannum stalls by Blackburn and Joy; football frames and varieties by Ackroyd, Bassett, Hyde, Burrell, Cookshaw, Firth and Thomas.

Northallerton Fair.

THE shows and riding-machines at this fair were:—Randall Williams's (Monte Bros.) coliseum of varieties and up-to-date pictures; Walter Murphy's cinematograph theatre, Richardson Bros'.. switchback, Shipley's steam horses, and Crow's gallopers; shooting concerns and varieties by Messrs. Culine, Harker, Edwards, Crow, and Jeffries.

Wednesbury Fancy Fair.

FOR this fixture were P. Collins's motors (No. 3 set), W. Davies' three-abreast gallopers and swings, Sagor's portable variety palace, with the star turn, the great Waller from Olympia; Beaumont's varieties, and the usual minor novelties.

Leominster Fair.

AT this fair the shows included Wadbrook's electrograph, Felix Testo's cinematograph, Prince Samouda, second-sight and esoteric mysteries, Quest's boxing saloon, and a fine art gallery. Studt's motor-cars, Strickland's gallopers, Marshall Hill's slipping-the-slip, and varieties by North, Stevens, and others.

ON Friday, May 3, at Summers' Restaurant, Great Malvern, Mr. A. H. Towell, the popular musical director of Poole's No. 1 Myriorama, was presented with a silver-mounted bâton by the members of the orchestra as a token of their esteem and regard. Mr. Towell acknowledged the gift in a neat little speech. It is a noteworthy fact that Mr. Towell has not made a single change in the orchestra during the six months' tour.

SEDGWICK'S menagerie, with a large show of animals, including some well-trained lions and boarhounds, which are put through a great variety of evolutions by a clever trainer, Alphonzo, paid a visit to Bridlington on Thursday last, and were well patronised.

THE Spring Pleasure Fair will be held at Bridlington on Monday next, as usual—Monday before Whit Sunday.

THE RENARD ROAD TRAIN.

THE VERY THING FOR THE SHOWMEN.

The possibilities of the new method of road transit known as the Renard system are almost illimitable. The difficulties that attach to traction engines and in a less degree to motor wagons are completely overcome by the Renard road train. In France the invention has been as the solution of the vexed question of rapid and cheap transit of farm produce and passengers from the villages to the towns.

RAPID, SAFE, AND CHEAP TRANSIT.

With that part of its possible usefulness we do not wish to deal. Our object is to show that it meets the difficulty of rapid, safe, and cheap transit for shows, roundabouts, and other concerns of a portable character; that where the ordinary traction engine, as we know it, fails, the Renard train in every point succeeds.

WEIGHT.

First as to weight of engine. The engine complete weighs but three tons. It has enormous power; but the essential fact is that, unlike the steam engine or the road traction engine, it is not sheer pulling power.

DRIVING POWER.

The inventor calls the engine "The Factory." It makes the driving power, and that is applied to the driving wheels of every carriage unit of the train. These most obvious advantages meet the difficulties as to weight, dangers of crossing bridges, dangers of being bogged on soft roads, dangers of using the engine when entering fair grounds, or using soft land.

TESTED BY EXPERTS.

The Renard Road Train Co. have had the train thoroughly tested by the War Office and other Government departments, and with most satisfactory results.

FLEXIBLE JOINTS.

One or two points more. The cars behind the engine are linked so closely with it by flexible joints that it is impossible for the carriages to deviate from the course travelled by the engine, and are completely controlled by the driver. The brake power acts automatically on the separate driving wheels of each car in the train. The driver has absolute power over the train as a whole, because each linked unit is a live and not a dead force.

PERFECT STEERING.

The train is as easy to steer backwards as forwards, the end car being as much under the driver's control as the engine itself.

The Renard Road Train may be seen at the Daimler Motor Works Coventry, and the Renard Train Co. are arranging to give a special demonstration of its working powers at the ensuing Coventry Whitsun fair. Showmen wishing to be present at the demonstration had better communicate with the Guild Secretary, the offices of The Era. Further particulars of this wonderful invention may be had of Mr. F. H. Pedgrift, Hon. Treasurer Showmen's Guild, at The Era Office.

Maidenhead.

"To the Moor! To the Moor!" is the cry of the people who flock from near and far to witness the grand carnival which is being held on the Moor, Maidenhead, and a host of travellers are in attendance, amongst whom are:—G. Beach's grand steeplechasers and racing motors, also his ostrich farm from South Africa; J. Edward's Gordon Bennett motor track, Edward's Royal shooting saloon, Beach's cocoanut shies; throwing and sporting games by J. Rose, Rawlings, Rowe, Beach, Edwards, &c.; Beach's Royal park swings, Walter Payne's new show, entitled "Dreamland by Bioscope," where some very good pictures are being shown, the exhibition being packed nightly. Free performances are given by Mons. Almero, the Man Monkey on the perch, and Norwegian Spar, who performs at 6 and 8 o'clock. Leoni performs on the high telephone wire at 7 and 9.30.

Llanelly.

THE Llanelly May Fair was held this week, and attracted immense crowds. Messrs. H. Studt and Sons, as usual, brought two of their largest machines. The attractions included no less than four great wheels, owned by Messrs. Booth and the Norths. The only big show was that of the evergreen Mr. William Hagger, who, together with his sons and daughters, are never satisfied unless they are up to date; their whole show is again a brand new one.

Showmen and Railway Charges.

PROPOSED 25 per cent. increase in rates. If proposal is put into force the showmen will make at least £10,000 less profit per annum.

IT is estimated that the traffic receipts from passengers attracted to the various fairs throughout the United Kingdom by the showmen amount to no less than £100,000.

IT seems quite a topsy-turvy state of things that a body of commercial men like the showmen, who are the cause of £100,000 being spent in railway fares, should be asked to pay £10,000 in increased rates. Under these circumstances one would think that the railway companies would be prepared to decrease rather than increase their rates to showmen.

THE showmen are determined not to pay increased rates, and will turn to road traction as a way out of the difficulty if forced to do so.

Guild Subscriptions.

ATTACK ON SHOWMEN AT HARROGATE.

Even after twenty years of strenuous work on the part of the Showmen's Guild to educate ignorant fanatics with regard to the show business we have still from time to time to deal with serious and ill-informed attacks upon the show business. The latest example of this occurred within the past few days at the Yorkshire spa—Harrogate. It appears that a respectable body of show people organised and carried through a fair at the pretty village of Bilton, now a suburb of the prosperous watering-place. The principal shows at this fair were Mrs. H. Waddington's motor track, under T. Farrer's management; Corrigan's steam yachts; Gabin's juvenile horses; Ratcliffe's shooting saloons; Turner's bazaars; Johnson's varieties; and Jameson's stalls and throwing games, the musical attraction of the fair being the magnificent orchestrion attached to Mrs. Waddington's machine.

To this fair ground, but not on pleasure bent, there came a gentleman of Harrogate, who, in an exceedingly critical and uncharitable mood, rushed into print and aired his views in a letter to the Harrogate Advertiser.

This letter was forwarded by the showmen on the ground to the Rev. T. Horne. It reads as follows:—

HARROGATE SCANDALISED: BILTON SPRING FAIR.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HARROGATE ADVERTISER.

SIR,—Permit me through the medium of your columns to extend a cordial and pressing invitation to all lovers of quietness frequenting Harrogate for a complete change and rest to pay a visit to—King Edward's Drive, Skipton-road.

The intermingling noises (music some might call it) emanating from the various hooters and other instruments, whether the productions be selections from Wagner, Mendelssohn, Handel, Beethoven, Chopin, Bach, or "It's the same tune again!" are certainly idealistic, and would unquestionably make our eminent Kursaal conductor turn green with envy. Handel's "Largo" for organ and strings certainly cannot be placed in the same "field" for comparison!

For some considerable time past it has been the wish of Harrogate that if only our King would deign to honour us with his presence, instead of visiting Marienbad, Carlsbad, and other such foreign spas, the success of the town would be a foregone conclusion, and "Country Boy" might eventually have his dreamy prophetic vision of "A City Immortalised" turned into a stern reality.

What could be more appropriate than a circular tour, vid the Stray, Skipton Road, combining King Edward's Drive (the latter either in its present condition, or in November and December, when the surface of the road is at its best), Little Wonder, en route for Studley Royal by way of a diversion in the programme.

Personally, I am not aware as to whether any of the landlords of adjacent property have the letting or sub-letting of the land whereon this medley have pitched their tents. If so, can they wonder at always groaning both internal and external ejaculations relative to having too many houses empty? I do know, however, that one of them was approached through his medium, but the beautiful phraseology by way of an answer will certainly not stand publication, being of too clean a nature!

I believe I am voicing the sentiments of others in saying that no persons are particularly fond of paying rentals of, say, £25 to £35 per annum in order to have the pleasure of residing close to a nauseating fair-ground.

Surely something from a sanitation point of view can be done. What provision is there for these people? There is a fit place for everything, and certainly a site, calculated to give less offence, could have been selected.

Assuming a person is lying ill, in close proximity to the existing rowdyism, which I happen to know is the case, and the attendant physician emphatically states that the life of the patient is entirely dependent on careful nursing and extreme quietness, what is to be done? A removal might spell death instanter!

Adverting to the controversy that was prevalent some time ago relative to the stoppage of the day tripper, which was regarded in the light of lowering the dignity and aristocratic status of "Haughty Harrogate"—"comparisons are odious," particularly so in this case, and we can only shout "Desideratum" from this end of the town.

If any reader can throw light on the matter as to the best manner of having the policeman's "Move on" effectively carried out, he will be earning the indebtedness of many, and statu quo will become a prayer, hitherto uttered in vain, fulfilled.

Cannot our Councillors do something with a strong petition in their hands?

With apologies for occupying so much of your valuable space, believe me to be, dear Sir, a disgusted ratepayer and unavoidable listener to this infernal earsplitting pandemonium,

BERT SNAPE.

King Edward's Drive, Harrogate.

Mr. Horne's answer is as follows:—

BILTON'S SPRING FAIR.

AN ANSWER TO THE ATTACK ON THE SHOWMEN.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HARROGATE ADVERTISER.

SIR,—The attack upon the showmen by your correspondent, Mr. Bert Snape, has been forwarded to me by members of the Showmen's Guild, with a request that the attack upon them and their avocation in life might be answered.

As a life-long friend of travelling show people, and the honorary organising chaplain of their Guild, I am able to speak with knowledge as to the character and the business respectability of the numerous class of traders and entertainers who supply the amusements of the people at their popular fairs.

It is, of course, very easy to draw comparisons between the music of Wagner, Mendelssohn, Handel, Beethoven, Chopin, Bach, and the popular melodies that appeal to, and please, a fair-ground crowd.

But, Sir, every man to his taste, and whilst the classic compositions that satisfy and appeal to men of the cultured taste of Mr. Bert Snape, there are others (and in a liberty-loving country like ours we must never forget that there are others) who need music, even though it be ground out for them upon mechanical organs, that help them when seeking amusement in the open air.

The orchestrion that offended Mr. Snape's musical ear is an instrument made by one of the best organ firms in Paris, at a cost of £600, and although it is played by electricity, it is capable of producing popular music of a most acceptable kind. In support of this part of the showmen's defence, I may mention the significant fact that a canvass was made of the residents in the immediate neighbourhood of the fair, and, with one exception only, approval was expressed of the fair and its music.

The great majority of the amusement caterers at the fair are well-known and highly-respectable caterers of amusement; they are part and parcel of an important class in the community, and, in fact, the industry of the fair-ground is of growing importance, and the extremely useful work that these itinerant providers of amusement do has been recognised and approved by both Church and State.

As a clergyman of the Church of England, working under the sanction of the Bishops and Parochial Clergy, it is my work to minister among these people. Knowing them as I do, it is also my duty to defend them when unjustly attacked.

There is a paragraph in your correspondent's letter in which he raises the question of sanitation; that I particularly wish to deal with fully. Show people are, because of the popular nature of their business, and the open-air life that they lead, a particularly cleanly and healthy class of people, and it ought to be widely known that the ordinary provisions of the Public Health Acts, the Imperial and local provisions for sanitation, apply as fully to the showman's home on wheels as to the permanent homes of town or village residents. The sanitary inspector has just as much power over a caravan as over the dwelling-house of a town resident.

One other point I should like to deal with, an extremely grave and alarming point—the assumed danger of anyone lying ill. My answer to that is, that any friend of such a sufferer requesting the lessee of the ground, either to modify or even to stop entirely the music, would have met with immediate and ready compliance with his request. I state emphatically that this is the invariable practice of travelling showmen.

I want also to clear away one other of Mr. Bert Snape's misapprehensions. The showman is a lawful trader. He is subject to all the restrictions of the law that govern other traders, but also he is entitled to the full protection of the law in carrying on his legitimate business. The show business may be to Mr. Snape an extraordinary business, but the people who carry it on are just ordinary people—law abiding, liberty loving, and loyal sons of the Empire, and citizens of the Commonwealth. They are not gipsies, or aliens, or pariahs; they are British folk, and entitled to just as much exercise of individual liberty in a lawful calling as Mr. Bert Snape himself enjoys.

The show and fair-ground industry employs 70,000 people, and there is a capital of a million and a half invested in the business. It is a trade and calling in life that has its trade unions and trade defence organisations. It is recognised by innumerable Acts of Parliament, and commands the respect and approval of the great mass of the people of the United Kingdom.

Surely the people of Bilton may be permitted to enjoy the popular amusements of the fair without let or hindrance of the inhabitants of King Edward's Drive, Harrogate.

Why should the gentlemen who are able to enjoy the classic music of the Kursaal envy the popular melodies of the little fair-ground at Bilton Village.

I appeal to Mr. Bert Snape to exercise that kindly and tolerant charity that thinketh no evil of his neighbour, even though for the nonce his neighbour be a travelling showman.—I am, Sir, faithfully yours,

T. HORNE

(Honorary Chaplain, the Showmen's Guild).

5, Tavistock-street, Strand, W.C.

It is high time that these bitter and injurious attacks on the music of the fair-grounds should be vigorously met, and steps taken to let the general public know that the loud and trumpet-organ music that for a time marked the adoption of machine-driven instruments at our fairs is a thing of the past, and that the music now in use, played by the very best modern organs, is of a character to delight and attract, and not to either disturb or annoy musicians in particular or the public in general. In fact, the splendid organs discoursing the best music supplied by such firms as Marenghi et Cie, Gavioli, and Limonère, of Paris, and Chiappi and Sons, of London, form a great element in the up-to-date attractions of our popular fairs.

With regard to the other points in Mr. Snape's letter, we can only re-affirm what we have been saying for many years past, that the showmen's business in every detail is subject to the ordinary restrictions and safeguards of the law of the land. It neither needs special legislation, nor does it desire any special privileges other than those that the common law secures to the organised and recognised industries.

SHOWMEN AND RAILWAY RATES.

The proposed new rates for the carriage of show goods by special train has caused widespread consternation in the showman. We have not the exact figures before us, but we understand that on heavier loads the increase asked by the railways is quite fifty per cent. If our information is correct, we venture to say that no business in the world could possibly stand so tremendous and so unsettling a strain.

The show and roundabout business has a turnover with the railways of over £50,000 per annum.

Transit by special train is, under existing conditions, a necessity of the business. For the purposes of this traffic the show proprietors have sunk enormous capital in providing low-wheeled carriages on which their concerns may be packed when pulled down, and run expeditionsly on to the rail trucks at the station. This traffic has grown with the growth of the show business, under existing conditions, and now to propose so great a change, and so enormous an increase, is to paralyse one of our most important home industries.

Not only does the direct traffic by special train exceed £50,000 per annum, but the enormous passenger traffic that our fairs and popular holidays bring to the railways cannot be estimated at less than £100,000.

We maintain that the pleasure and holiday traffic is the product of the fairs, feasts, and wakes, and that the sequence of these popular holidays makes it possible for the railways to grapple with this enormous business, therefore, we hold that instead of increasing railway rates for the show industry, the true policy would be to cheapen transit, and to encourage the trade that creates and regulates the enormous volume of pleasure and holiday traffic. The trade societies of the organised showmen have vigorously protested against the new rates, and a very important deputation has been in conference with the traffic manager at the Railway Clearing House this week. Everything possible has been done to bring home to the railway authorities the unreasonable nature of their new demands. The deputation consisted of Messrs. P. Collins (Walsall), George Green (Glasgow and Preston), H. Hibbert (Stockport), Wm. Mitchell (Heywood), Arthur Twigdon (Derby), Ben Howden (Boston), and Mr. Terry (Walsall).

Without prejudice to the outcome of these negotiations, we may say that whatever compromise may ultimately be arranged, we have quite satisfied ourselves from our inside knowledge of the show and fair ground business, that the existing rates are in all conscience heavy enough, and that any material increase will injure the business and inevitably lead the showman to seriously consider other means of transit from fair to fair.

Circus Pony Killed.

Alfred Brown, of York-road, Battersea, the owner of a circus pony named "Tiny," claimed £35 damages against Spiers and Pond (Limited) yesterday, in the City of London Court, for running over her. One of the defendants' three-horse vans was going over Chelsea Bridge when it ran into the plaintiff's pony, knocking it down and killing it. The defendants said the pony was trotting along by itself, and slipped in front of their van, but the plaintiff and his witnesses denied that, and said the pony was trained for circus work, and would stand gun-fire at performances. Judge Lumley Smith believed the van ran into the pony, and he found for the plaintiff for £35 and costs. Another circus pony, which was with the unfortunate animal at the time, was brought to the court for the Judge's inspection.

A Wagner Film.

The most recent proof of the utility of the cinematograph is furnished by its introduction into grand opera this season at Covent Garden, and it is safe to assume that never before in the history of cinematography has the application of animated photographs been witnessed by such representative gatherings of the élite of society. The Graphic Cinematograph Company, Charing Cross-road, were commissioned by the Royal Opera Syndicate, Ltd., to carry out the production and exhibition of the pictures which represent "The Ride of the Walkyries," a number of riders in long flowing robes, holding spears and shields, passing through the clouds on bare-backed, bridleless steeds. The apparition which thus takes up a thread in the story of the opera has been the subject of much favourable comment and discussion, and the success with which Mr. W. Cecil Jeapes accomplished the work entrusted to him proves conclusively that he and his staff know "something" more about the art of cinematography than "turning the handle."

Gawthorpe Spring Feast.

For this fixture the following concerns were on the ground: Testo's cinematograph theatre, Marshall's motor-cars; and bazaar, emma sheets, pannum stalls and varieties by Riley, Newell, Gledstone and Walker.

On the application of Mr. Woodford, business-manager of the Alhambra, Mr. Denman, at Marlborough-street, granted a licence for a boy named Urbani to perform with his father at that place of entertainment. The magistrate also allowed licences for two little girls to play in the Empire ballet.

In Sir Roger de Coverley, the new ballet at the Empire, there is every opportunity for Mr. Wilhelm to paint his living, dancing pictures in all shades of lovely colour. The curtain rises on the sunny scene of Sir Roger's garden, and the first merry crowd of girls and boys appear in old-fashioned costumes of grey and green, followed by a troupe of little damsels dressed in long white frocks, with Kate Greenaway bonnets, and carrying boughs of almond blossom.

Mlle. Adeline Genée, in the character of Lady Dolly, wears a charming dress of faintly flowered silk, the full skirt being composed of three deep flounces, edged with pink, the bodice of lace, with a sky-blue satin coatee, and with gold heels to her little shoes. Sir Roger de Coverley (Mr. A. Harding) is in brown and purple, and Captain Fancourt (Miss D. Craske) in a handsome suit of deep red satin, gold and black. In the second scene Lady Dolly elopes with her lover—Captain Fancourt—wrapping a big smoke-grey cloak over her pretty flowered silk, while her faithful maid (Miss Elise Clerc) hides her own mauve and purple dress under Lady Dolly's pink chiffon cloak—the moth and the butterfly changing wings—and a good effect is obtained in the midst of colour by the dark clothes and big lanterns of a party of night watchmen.

When the curtain rises on the last scene—in Vauxhall Gardens—it is hard to describe the sparkling beauty, the wealth of detail, and the brilliant colouring of the crowded stage. There are merry maskers, busy pages, gorgeous ladies in hood and hoop, in bronze and silver and pink; gallants in flame-coloured velvet and golden brocade; dainty revellers in silver tissue; a troupe of harlequins; a bevy of fair guests carried in sedan chairs; Lady Dolly's lover in ruby velvet, with lace ruffles, a silver sash, and jewelled sword; and Lady Dolly herself in golden gauze. Later on, to hide her bewitching personality, in the guise of a gipsy Mlle. Genée wears a poppy-red, accordion-pleated chiffon cloak over a dress of striped black and yellow, changing her soft satin shoes before the final duo with Mr. P. Sundberg—whose gipsy costume of many colours is a delight to look upon—for a pair of vivid red leather bessians.

RE APPLICATIONS FOR ENGAGEMENTS

All applications by either Artists or their Agents must be made to the Head Office.

Lowest terms must be stated, and distinction made between salaries required for larger and smaller towns.

Vacant dates should be stated. If a list of existing bookings be sent, it will render selection easier.

Artists employing Agents should accredit one only at one time, as the friction arising when several Agents are employed at the same time, all expecting the one booking to go through each of them, often renders it expedient to avoid that booking altogether rather than give undeserved offence to several Agents.

New Acts seeking Engagements, or turns not rebooked (possibly because they have played a series of dates without introducing new business), will facilitate matters by having their acts seen by our District Managers. Their Districts and Postal Addresses are as follows:—

EDINBURGH, GLASGOW, NEWCASTLE, AND DISTRICT.
MR. S. GETHING,
Empire Theatre, Glasgow.

LEEDS, SHEFFIELD, HULL, BRADFORD, AND DISTRICT.
MR. T. GERALD MORTON,

MR. WILLIAM COLLINS,

N.B.—Mr. OSWALD STOLL or Mr. FRANK ALLEN can be seen by appointment on all matters arising out of the above, and for the discussion of entirely new Numbers.

All Artists or Agents who communicate with our District Representatives must have made definite applications, in accordance with above directions, to the Head Office, at the same time, or just previously.

CORSICAN'S DAUGHTER.

Code Word, CANARD.

A very dramatic story. The Corsican's wife is loved by another. A spy tells the Corsican, who shoots her and her lover, and flies. His young daughter brings him food, and is followed by the soldiers, who attempt to capture him. In a very powerful scene he kills himself. From beginning to end this story claims the attention, and is very exciting.

THE TWO SISTERS.

Code Word, CHIENDENT.

A pathetic study of the betrayal of one of two good sisters who work as dressmakers. One is forced to become a flower-girl. Rescued by the other, her husband makes love to her also. They both go and return to their old house, there to continue as dressmakers, loving and protecting each other tenderly. Full of real human interest.

230ft. The Subject £3 16s. 8d.

BYKER DOES THE IMPOSSIBLE.

Code Word, CANNIBALE.

This cyclist is really a marvel. He and his machine work as one. Up and down stairs, overcoming every obstacle, and always followed by a crowd of onlookers. Finally he gets mixed up with a small carriage, lets go his own machine, and rides on the wheel of the carriage. Wonderful film.

330ft. The Subject £5 10s.

COSTUMES OF ALL AGES.

The historic interest and charm with which these costumes are portrayed make it a very interesting subject. Roman, Marie Stuart, Louis XIV., the Lady Dandies, The Crinoline, &c., &c.

398ft. The Subject £6 12s. Colouring £3 12s.

POOR COAT.

Code Word, CHICOREE.

A coat, dropped carelessly by the way, goes through all kinds of experiences, so much so that no one would stoop to pic kit up, notwithstanding it was a new one to start with. Very amusing.

180ft. The Subject £3.

THE LITTLE STATUE HAWKER.

Code Word, CICATRICE.

Touching scenes of a little boy who is obliged to sell statues in the street. Hhis troubles. His joys, and his final happiness.

528ft. The Subject £8 16s.

A STRAW HAT FACTORY.

A CHILD'S HATE.

Code Word, CALOPIN.

A father goes away, leaving his wife and little girl alone. Enter a young man who whispers to mother. The little girl soon sees that all is not well between these two. She hears her father returning, and quickly she seizes a pistol and shoots the young man. As her father enters, she says, "He was going to rob you, daddy." Who can tell the workings of a child's mind? Tragic and interesting story.

379ft. The Subject £6 6s. 4d.

A SERVANT'S REVENGE.

Code Word, CICERONE.

A dentist's manservant is discharged for going to sleep in his master's consulting-room. To be revenged, he takes a plate belonging to a Veterinary Surgeon and places it in place of the one belonging to the dentist. Imagine the scenes which follow when the dentist finds his consulting-room turned into a menagerie. Awfully funny.

ENORMOUS SUCCESS.—The Grandest Naval Display Ever Photographed.

VISIT OF THE COLONIAL PREMIERS TO PORTSMOUTH

(By courtesy of the Lords of the Admiralty.)

Never in its history has the Admiralty provided a more brilliant programme than that of May 3rd, 1907.

By virtue of several important concessions accorded solely to us, we were fortunately able to secure records of the whole of the impressive Naval Demonstration given at Portsmouth before the Colonial Premiers and Members of both Houses of Parliament. The complete, unique, and historical scenes were secured exclusively by us in their entirety, and are now published in THREE THRILLING, AWE-INSPIRING, AND REALISTIC SERIES.

PREMIERS' RECEPTION ON, AND INSPECTION OF, H.M.S. "DREADNOUGHT."

This series opens with the arrival alongside the "Dreadnought" of the special train conveying the distinguished visitors.

Their reception, and inspection of the redoubtable "Dreadnought"—her guns, turrets, and general arrangements. The keenest interest will be felt in her tremendous concentration of gun fire, represented by the monster weapons revolving in their armoured fortresses, and in other marvels of this Naval triumph.

Excellent close portraits were secured of the Premiers, and the series concludes with an admirable portrait of Admiral Sir John Fisher, and a near view of the "Dreadnought" prepared for attack.

No. 2,130. Code, "Premiers." Length, 255ft. Price, £4 5s.

TORPEDO ATTACK ON H.M.S. "DREADNOUGHT."

Most perfect views of the Submarines, travelling at eight knots, are first afforded. Eight of these vessels are in cruising trim and four are trimmed for diving.

The Destroyers follow, and form a most realistic spectacle as, throwing up cascades from their bows, they cut through the waves at top speed, launching torpedoes as they pass. The path of these terrible weapons is clearly seen, from the moment they leave the tubes until they strike the "Dreadnought's" netting and are turned aside, fruitlessly beating the water, foaming, and writhing alongside.

The whole series forms a sight that, for grandeur and spectacular effect, will live in the memory for ever.

No. 2,131. Code, "Dreadnought." Length, 440ft. Price, £7 6s. 8d.

NAVAL ATTACK ON PORTSMOUTH.

The most realistic battle picture ever secured.

Attack on, and defence of, Whale Island, the Greatest Gunnery Establishment in the World, planned by Admiral Sir Percy Scott of the Gunnery School.

Over 2,000 troops were engaged, and gunboats, launches, submarine mines, shells, 4·7 guns, 12-pounders, maxims, armoured trains and motor maxims combine to make this display of force and skill one of the most unique and successful Naval spectacles ever provided by the Admiralty.

The spirit and dash of the men as they attack, capture and defend the trenches; the repulse of the attacking force and re-capture of position after position, the handling of the mighty guns, the landing and placing in position of the 4·7 by 400 men, and the advance of the armoured trains which turn the tide of battle, are nerve-thrilling, soul-stirring pictures, that will never be forgotten. No. 2,132. Code, "Defence." Length, 800ft. Price, £13 6s. 8d.

NEWTON GENERATOR

The illustration we now give is of a Newton Generator. This machine has been specially designed for Showmen and Variety Performers, and is, we are convinced, the Lightest Machine for a given output on the market. The main object of the design is to reduce the weight to a minimum, and we have, with a specially designed and patented magnetic system, brought the weight down to a maximum, and showmen will readily see the benefits to be derived from this type of machine, which brings the weight to be carried on the front of the engine to the lowest, consistent with cool running and good electrical results.

The Machines are 4 Pole with slotted core Armature steel magnets and carbon brushes.

In view of the great advantage of reduced weight, the slight extra expense is not worth considering.

The machine herein mentioned has been supplied to Messrs. W. C. and S. Hancock, of Plymouth, and the following is a copy of their recommendation:—

Plymouth,
April 30, 1907.

Dear Sirs,—The Dynamo you have lately supplied us with is giving excellent results, and is in every way satisfactory.

We are greatly pleased at the small weight of the machine, considering its capacity (400 amps, 65 volts, 900 r.p.m.).

Yours faithfully,
W. C. and S. HANCOCK.

'VANITY FAIR' ALBUM

FOR 1906

Containing the Two-and-Fifty Cartoons which have appeared during the year, with the accompanying Biographical Sketches by "JEHU JUNIOR."

Well bound in green cloth, gilt edges, Price TWO GUINEAS.

A FEW PRESS OPINIONS.

The successive volumes that have come out will one of these days command a high price. Probably, when the very existence of thousands of more ambitious books has been forgotten, this Album will be sought after as an invaluable record of a generation that has disappeared.—Truth.

These sketches are a recognised element of London Society. There are few drawing-rooms in which they are not found.—Standard.

The public has long been familiar with "Vanity Fair" and its weekly portraits of eminent men. . . . . All are so good the task of selecting the best is no easy matter.—Times.

"Vanity Fair" has become a national institution . . . possessing a lasting historical value.—Manchester Courier.

Such a volume is a treasure of which the pleasure is present and permanent, while its money's worth can only be realised years hence, when these Albums will be almost priceless. What would not be given to-day for such a gallery of the notabilities of Queen Anne, or George II. or III., or the Regency.—Morning Post.

We are bound to say that it (the Album) constitutes an almost invaluable compilation for any future historian who may desire to know just what manner of man filled the high places of England, whether in sport, in the Court, on the Bench, or in the leisurely life of a country gentleman.—Sketch.

GUILDHALL SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

The second of Señor Carlos Sobrino's six pianoforte recitals was given on Tuesday afternoon, the programme being devoted to Beethoven's three Sonatas—the first in C Major, Op. 53 (L'Aurore), dedicated to Count Waldstein; the Sonata, Quasi una Fantasia, Op. 27, No. 2, C sharp Minor, known as the "Moonlight"; and the Appassionata, Op. 57, in F Minor. Señor Sobrino played with ample executive skill and keen appreciation of the great beauty of these noble works, being particularly happy in his rendering of the "Moonlight" Sonata; the splendid third movement, Presto agitato, was played with great brilliancy and expression. The recital was largely attended, and the talented Professor warmly applauded. Señor Sobrino's next recital will be devoted to the works of Schumann, Schubert, Weber, and Mendelssohn.

The students' concert on Wednesday evening commenced with an organ solo, "Fugue from Sonata No. 8," by Rheinberger, neatly executed by Mr. A. C. Rackham. Sullivan's song, "The Lost Chord," is seldom sung now, although at one time so popular, it makes a great demand on the vocalist, and Miss Florence Foote, therefore, deserves praise for her by no means unsuccessful attempt, and Mr. A. C. Rackham for his careful playing of the organ obbligato. In her violin solo of Borowski's "Mazur," Miss Hilda Laver was much applauded; and Miss Winifred Evans may be warmly commended for her intelligent rendering of Beethoven's solo for pianoforte, "Andante con variazioni from Sonata Op. 26." An apology was made for the non-appearance of Miss Christine Chabot, the young lady having been unfortunately knocked down by a motor-car. Mr. H. L. E. Lopresti, who has a pleasing and well-trained voice, may be warmly praised for his really artistic singing of Guy d'Hardelot's graceful song, "Because," and Miss Edith Harnden for her neat and finished execution in her harp solo of Thomas's "Study in F." Miss Dorothy Beal sung "Roses by summer forsaken" (Newton) skilfully, and Miss Edith Hays greatly pleased the audience by her singing of Woodforde Finden's "Temple bells." Miss W. Norman will no doubt in time become an able violinist, but Max Bruch's "Romance" proved on this occasion a somewhat too difficult solo for the young student; while Miss Edith H. Lockyer gave a clever but slightly unequal performance of Raff's piano solo, "Bolero" (Op. 111). In Roeckel's "The Storm Fiend," Mr. Andrew S. Webb's good bass voice was heard to great advantage. The concert concluded with a recitation, "Retrospection," by Sir Alfred Lyall, cleverly given by Miss Annie Walden, one of Miss Kate Rorke's pupils. The duties of accompanist were most ably performed by Miss Jenny Hyman.

ROYAL OPERA, COVENT GARDEN.

In the performance of Die Walküre, on Thursday night, May 9, a new tenor, Herr Cornelius, appeared in the character of Siegmund. Herr Cornelius has a melodious voice, and in the great duet with Sieglinde in the first act sang with no little tenderness and expression. The only other change in the cast was the impersonation of Wotan by that fine artist Herr Van Rooy.

On Monday Nicolai's Merry Wives of Windsor was repeated, with the same cast as on the first performance; and on Tuesday the Second Cycle of the Ring ended with a fine performance of Götterdämmerung.

A house crowded in every part witnessed the performance on Wednesday evening of Puccini's charming opera, La Bohème. It was unfortunate that Mme. Melba was unable to appear, but Mme. Donalda, who impersonated the part of the unhappy Mimi, sang and acted to the entire satisfaction of the large audience. A warm reception was given to Signor Caruso, who made his first appearance this season in the character of Rodolfo. The great tenor, who was in fine voice, sang magnificently, receiving quite an ovation for his splendid singing of the lovely solo in the first act. Signor Scotti, as Marcello, also received a warm reception; and M. Gilibert and M. Marcoux as Schannard and Colline were excellent in their respective parts; while Mlle. Zeppilli made a most attractive Musetta. The parts of Benoit was cleverly performed by Signor Gianoli, and Signor Zucchi played Parpignol with great spirit. The opera went with great éclat, under the skilful conductorship of Signor Campanini.

"THE ERA" can be obtained at the principal bookstalls throughout the provinces.

Reginald Favell, as has also Samuel Johns in Mr. Franc Storey. Mr. F. Stuart Willson makes an excellent Joshua Pynne; Loke, Hickey, Paul, and Perkins (Wendover's servants) are capably played by Messrs. R. Seath Innis, Harris Fraser, Hugh Leslie Dobree, and Tod Mawden. Of the ladies, Miss Mara Maltby as Lucy Dulley plays with a grace and winsomeness that charms her audience, whilst as the maiden sisters, Ann Dulley and Florence Dulley, Misses Janet Hodgson and Grace Richardson are clever. For the latter part of the week Sir George of Almack's is announced.

THE EMPIRE.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. A. Mitchell; Assistant-Manager, Mr. P. C. Rowe.—An extraordinary entertainment of thought transmission is provided by the marvellous Howes; the Kellinos, in their Risley act "Venetia," give a clever display. A really taking turn is submitted by Daisy Gerome, who has good songs and is a clever dancer; Star and Leslie also do well, the club-swinging being exceptionally good. A novel turn is given by Genaro and Theol, who by their marvellous contortions justly deserve their title, "The Indiarubber Pair." Boswell's stage circus is as entertaining as ever. The dancing of Woodhouse and Wells is good and their patter amusing; Walter King is very successful; and the Bioscope Pictures are interesting, as usual.

TON-Y-PANDY.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessees, Messrs. Carlton and Duckworth; General-Manager, Mr. Sam Duckworth.—The current attraction is provided by Fred Karno's Vaudeville company. The Sisters Lavender sing nicely, and Messrs. Lincoln and Warren do some smart trick cycling; Geo. Mackintosh and Tina Royal are clever clog dancers. The hits of the programme, however, are the two sketches, The Mumming Birds and The Early Birds.

TORQUAY.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Licensee and Managing-Director, Mr. W. H. Mortimer; Secretary, Mr. Arthur Pearse.—Robin Hood is being presented here this week by Mr. Norman V. Norman and principal company, and on Monday was accorded a warm reception. Mr. Norman V. Norman is a great favourite here, and in the title-rôle he fully maintained his reputation. He was well supported by Miss Beatrice Wilson, who did excellently as Maid Marian. As Richard, Mr. Kenneth Bruce acted with characteristic dignity; Sir William Trusty was also well taken by Mr. Bremner Wills; Lord Guy was admirably represented by Mr. Norman Leslie; Mr. Francis Hope as Friar Tuck caused general hilarity; Mr. S. Wilkinson, jun., as the Sheriff, and Mr. Aubrey Mather as Little John both did well.

Sumki and Johnson are entertaining vocalists, and Martinett and Wallace, smart musical artists; L. B. Athol scores well with good songs, and Jimmy Shields is nightly encored for his songs and one-leg dancing. Jackio, the Chinese mimic, is original in all he does; and Lily Vane is a dashing comedienne. The Royal Bioscope pictures are all good.

PARR HALL.—Lessee, Mr. J. Lyon Whittel.—Miss Florence Baines and company are reappearing here this week in the musical comedy, Miss Lancashire, Limited. Unfortunately, Miss Baines was unable to appear in the title-rôle on Monday evening through indisposition, but a capable understudy was forthcoming in Miss Reaney, who scored a big success. The rest of the company maintain the high pitch of excellence which characterised their work on the last visit.

WEST BROMWICH.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee, Mr. Harding Thomas; Manager, Mr. Richard Nightingale.—Mr. Chas. H. Phelps and Mr. Harry Tilbury and company are here with The Blind Foundling. NEW HIPPODROME.—Resident-Manager, Mr. W. H. The topical vocalist Fred Herbert is exceedingly popular, and gains persistent encores. The charming performance of Bertha Winder, "the dancing marvel," wins abundant appreciation; Lily Stewart, clever in song and dance, pleases all. An amusing sketch, The Would-Be Actors, is well played by T. W. Rawson and company, including Miss Lily Bertram. A pleasing vocal and musical entertainment is submitted by Sidney Dolf; Letine, female impersonator, and Pictures more than usually interesting are also in the list.

Watson Mill, in the rôle of Shaun, acquits himself excellently; Mr. Richard Vane makes a telling impression in the character of Dr. Marcus Dread; creditable work is done by Mr. Norman B. Cannon as Fergus McNaughton; Mr. H. Carter Slaughter is amusing as Lord Eversleigh; Miss Rosalind Tate, in the character of Moira Kenion, deserves unstinted praise. WIDNES.—ALEXANDRA THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. James Kiddie.—This week another vaudeville bill is presented. The chief item is the appearance of Mr. J. Gar Kiddie and company in a new comedy sketch, entitled The House of Tinn. On Monday evening the house greatly enjoyed the humour of Mr. Gar Kiddie as Jeremiah Jinks, and Mr. J. W. Groves as Mrs. Arabella Tinn. Mr. Walter Clarke cleverly supported the comedians as Augustus Hobbs; and Mrs. Gar Kiddie (Miss Lizzie Payne) sang charmingly as Dolly Tinn. The dancing of the Misses Annie Cryer, Maggie Lohrenz, Sophie Danson, and Nellie Leigh was excellent. The new playlet ought to do well at the "halls." The Deroneys are responsible for a clever turn. Arthur Woodville's eccentric dancing was one of the features of the evening; Wyman gives a smart turn; the marvellous muscular development of Attilla and his huge "lifts" won much applause. The Bioscope filled up intervals very entertainingly.

WIGAN.—ROYAL COURT THEATRE.—Proprietors, the Wigan Entertainments Co.—On Monday and Tuesday Mr. Lingford Carson's latest and most successful play, A Modern Adventuress, was produced by that gentleman's company under the direction of Mr. Charles Draycott. The part of Pietro Donelli was portrayed with powerful effect by Mr. Charles Draycott, and Miss Muriel Thompson as Violet Meredith, the adventuress, was also very successful; Mr. Will White, as John Crompton, a Yorkshireman, and Mr. Sidney C. Cranston as Harry Delby, represented those characters with remarkable fidelity; Miss Nellie V. Warden, as Sally Hodges, and Miss Marie Robson, as Vivette Delby, played the parts with much humour and pathos respectively. On the other nights of the week were presented The Octoroon, Ticket of Leave Man, The Shaughraun, and The Heart of a Hero.

Shylock was portrayed by Mr. Wilkie in a masterly manner; Mr. G. Alexander Marsh was an excellent Bassanio; and Mr. John Paley did capitally as Gratiano. As Portia Miss Carrie Baillie quite captivated her audience. She had a charming supporter in Miss Doris Horrocks as Nerissa, and Miss Ine Cameron did well as Jessica.

Liddle displays alertness and humour as the street artist; Mr. E. Lourie is satisfactory as Daroc; Miss L. Ross is excellent as Luroche; and is well supported by Miss Hunt, Miss M. Elliott, Miss A. Campbell, and Miss R. Franklyn.

WORTHING.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Manager, Herr C. Adolf Seebold.—Mr. J. M. Glover's clever combination of juvenile artists from Drury Lane Theatre are here for the first part of the week presenting The Forte Thieves. The energy evolved by each individual of the company makes the pantomime go with a commendable swing, to the great delight of the audiences. On Thursday Mr. W. Penrhyn Forster's company, including Miss Nellie Sheffield, were announced in The Officers' Mess.

YORK.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessees, Messrs. Waddington; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. J. Dacre.—Acton and Nash's company is here this week with Between the Lights. As Captain Hinton, Mr. Bertram H. Ross is quite successful; no more sympathetic Violet than Miss Eileen Bamford could be wished for: she is extremely graceful and natural; the villaines of Stanley Cofton are fully accentuated by Mr. W. R. Winning, and Madge Armley has a delightful representative in Miss Fanny Williams. The comedy element is in the safe hands of Miss Mollie Doris, Mr. Frank Orchard, Mr. F. Daleno, and Mr. Fred Acton.

OPERA HOUSE AND EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. William Peacock; Acting-Manager, Mr. Sidney Brooke.—Bob Selvidge, Harold Wardroper, Teddy Gibbs, and Barney Dixon are a quartette of comedians of the drollest kind, and High Jinks has proved a most diverting item. Mr. Selvidge as Jesmond Deane gets through a wonderful amount of hard work; Jessie Templeton is a fascinating Mrs. Deane, and Lizzie Hay gives a clever character-sketch of Mary Ann. In addition to the above, the ordinary turns include Polo and Florence, Monmura, and Snowball and Miss Dolia.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Produced by the Répertoire Theatre Association, and under the stage direction of the author and Mr. A. Austin Leigh, this new costume play deals with the oppression of the Jews in Prussia, in the early days of the last century, the story being laid at Konigsberg, about the year 1808. It is undoubtedly well written, is political as well as social in tone, but is so complicated that it seems rather above the average theatre-goer. The interest chiefly centres in Toledano, a young lawyer of the Jewish persuasion, who is secretly in love with the Countess Habsfeldt, she, too, whilst endeavouring to keep her feelings within bounds, being also in love with Toledano. Her husband, having squandered his own fortune, would probably serve his wife's in the same way but for the fact that her companion and secretary Madeline Rosenthal, uses every means to prevent it. Toledano is also directing his attention towards averting the loss of the Countess's money, and it is whilst studying her interests that he finds himself in love with her. Matters become still more involved with the appearance of Fernande, an adventuress, who makes no secret of her hatred of the Countess. Act II. takes us to an apartment in the Habsfeldt mansion, the same evening. Here there is much plotting and counter-plotting. The Countess's jewels have disappeared, and she shrewdly suspects her husband of having appropriated them to pay his gambling debts, and for that reason cannot make any disturbance about the theft. It is in this act that the revolutionary "Song of the Torch" is sung by the populace outside the mansion, and subsequently Toledano, who has been entrusted with some important State papers, is betrayed by the Count as a conspirator and is arrested. Fernande, in the next act, gains admission to Mme. Favelle's house, induces the servant to exchange clothes with her, and is able to learn what is going on, and that through the influence of Steyn, a Minister of State, Toledano has been released. The Countess is sent to Castle Habsfeldt, where she is virtually a prisoner, to cure her of her infatuation for Toledano, and in the grounds here the Count and Toledano meet, by arrangement, to fight out a duel the Count has provoked. Scarcely, however, have they crossed swords than Fernande rushes from her concealment and stabs the Count in the back. The young lawyer has to clear himself of the accusation of causing the Count's death, which he successfully does, and the play closes, leaving to the imagination of the audience what does or should follow.

Mr. Wallis Clark played well as Count Habsfeldt, and Mr. J. Poole-Kirkwood was excellent as Herr Toledano. The latter was particularly good in his scenes with the Countess, a rôle capitally sustained by Miss Muriel Currey. Miss Inez Bensusan was effective as the adventuress, Fernande, who, like Toledano, is a Jewess of Spanish origin. Mr. A. Austin Leigh put in some good work as Franz Hartman, a student; and Mr. Robert Grey was seen to advantage as Capt. Von Rosnitz. Koppe, a member of the Tugenbund, was in good hands with Mr. Dane Scott; Miss Kate Turner was a charming Madeline Rosenthal; and Mrs. Culling played Mme. Favelle, Toledano's mother, admirably. Other characters successfully portrayed were those of Esther, a Jewish servant, by Miss Belle Travers; Dr. Lentz, a specialist, by Mr. H. G. Mason; Dr. Spielman, an alienist, by Mr. W. P. Wells; and Heinrich, a butler, by Mr. Richard Trieve. The play was well staged.

PRESENTATION.—Last Tuesday night, which had been set apart for the benefit of the energetic Yiddish manager, Mr. J. W. Rosenthal, at the Pavilion Theatre, was selected as a suitable opportunity to present the popular acting-manager, Mr. Fred Brown, with an illuminated address. The proceedings took place in the saloon, and Mr. Cecil Paget, on behalf of the subscribers, made the presentation in his usual pleasing manner, at the same time handing to Mrs. Brown a diamond brooch. Mr. Isaac Cohen, in an eloquent speech, eulogised the past thirty years' work of Mr. Brown at the Pavilion, and both recipients replied in brief but well-chosen words.

BERLIN, THURSDAY, May 9.—In the absence of the Kleines Theatre company, the company from the Bürger Theatre, Vienna—under the management of Herr Oscar Franz—have been giving a season, producing chiefly volks-plays. The undertaking has not proved so great a success as many anticipated; the acting was better than were the pieces selected. Heimkehr was received with cordiality. Herr Hawel is an Austrian Board-schoolmaster. The Viennese authorities think so highly of his dramatic ability that after awarding a prize to Heimkehr, they granted the author six months' leave of absence—with full salary—in order that he might have leisure to write another play. We trust it will prove better than the prize work, which is very lacking in originality, notwithstanding undeniable traces of talent in the drawing of the characters and in the dialogue. L'Arronge has written a volks-play, entitled Mein Leopold, which has served as a model for many authors during the last quarter of a century, and Heimkehr is built on the same lines. The sacrifice made by a family for one member—usually a youth of expensive tastes—is an old theme. In this case it is Altmann, a tradesman of small means, who has contrived to get his smart son Max into the army, and who has bitter cause to regret it. The young fellow is good-hearted enough, but temptations beset him on every side, and he finds it an impossibility to keep up appearances on his slender pay. His sister Lene sacrifices all her chances in life for the gay young lieutenant, and his brother Franz—an industrious fellow who works hard to increase his father's business—has to help, too, although he is secretly disgusted with the whole hollow pretence of the thing. Up to his eyes in debt, Max at length sees no way out of his difficulties. There is one, but that he scorns. Franz is engaged to a girl with a big dowry, whose father would like her to turn her affections to the shower brother and become "Frau Leutnant." We are in doubt as to whether Wetti would allow herself to be persuaded, but Max declines to put her to the test, and finally commits suicide, shooting himself at his mother's grave. It is a gloomy play, the humour that is one of the acknowledged requisites of a volks-piece being conspicuous by its absence. The interpretation was an all-round good one, the best renderings being those of Fräulein Martinelli and Herren Jules, Blum, and Emerich.

A FEW weeks before the close of this season the Thalia has produced a farce-burlesque, which, if one may judge by its enthusiastic reception, will run well into the next. The title is Wo die Liebe hinfällt; the authors are the popular collaborators, MM. Kren and Lippschütz; Herr Schönfeld has written the words to the up-to-date couplets—a great feature of the piece—and Herr Max Schmidt has furnished the bright incidental music. It will be unnecessary to detail the plot beyond saying that the central figure is an elderly, simple-minded "provinzler" named Vollman, who is an avowed enemy to the practice of duelling. He takes an active part in the opposition movement, whereby he makes many enemies. Later on he falls in love, and the members of his family who have reckoned on a legacy do their best to prevent the course of his affection from running smoothly, but all to no purpose. Good old Vollmann with the golden heart comes out of every difficulty with flying colours, and all ends satisfactorily. There are all kinds of incidental episodes which add to the fun, and one and all of the excellent cast deserve mention did space permit. Herr Thielscher—of Charley's Aunt fame—was splendid in the rôle of Vollmann, full of his own irresistible humour, yet imparting to the character touches of pathos that were very convincing. Artists, authors, and manager were all called in turn before the curtain at the end of each act and applauded till the house rang again.

ONE of the finest actors on the German stage, Herr Rudolf Rittner, of the Lessing Theatre, has taken a final farewell of the public—to the regret of all lovers of great and genuine art. Herr Rittner—who is still in the prime of life—is tired of the profession, and is going to live the simple life, carrying on his father's farm. He created the rôles of Fuhrmann Henschel, Florian Geyer, and others in Hauptmann's dramas, while in Ibsen—notably as Oswald in Ghosts—he had few rivals. Rittner's acting is so absolutely natural and convincing that while he is on the stage his hearers forget the theatre and all accessories and are face to face with life. He closed his career on Saturday night with Florian Geyer, after which the entire house—which was packed—"rose at" the beloved actor with a spontaneous burst of feeling. After several minutes of unbroken tumult the manager appeared to thank the audience on the part of Herr Rittner, who was too deeply moved to come forward. Then, slowly and sadly, the audience dispersed, the hope, however, being expressed by all that some day Herr Rittner will come back.

ANOTHER farewell was celebrated on Saturday evening, but in a more festive manner—in the form of a banquet in honour of Herr Sigismund Lautenburg, who is leaving us for Vienna. He was the founder of the Residenz Theatre, and is still its owner, Herr Alexander being lessee. Herr Lautenburg brought the pretty little house up to its present pitch of perfection by dint of hard work and clear perception. The Residenz is the home of French farcical comedy, and it is here that Madame Mongodin, Die Beiden Champignols, Der Selige Toupinel (the late lamented), and other screaming farces have enjoyed their well-earned triumphs. For a time Herr Lautenburg has rested; now he has become the manager of the Raimund Theatre at Vienna, one of the best theatres in the capital. At the banquet in the Mozart Hall 300 persons of distinction were present, including the Austrian Ambassador, the Mayor, Dr. Reicke, Herr Hase, Herr Barnay, and all the shining lights of the dramatic and literary worlds.

THE Figaro company will perform during the coming season in the Folies Caprice Theatre. This is a new house, small and bijou in character, and just the right sort of building for the "intime" nature of the Figaro productions.

HERR GREGOR has, it is stated, let his theatre—Die Komische Oper—to the American company now at the Waldorf Theatre. Their season will be in the beginning of June, and will last a fortnight.

Two stars of the Royal Opera have left us to go on tour. Fräulein Emmy Destinn has gone to Paris to sing the part of Salome, whence she goes to London, while Fräulein Hiedler is pledged for various Wagner rôles at the Landes Theatre, Prague. The Lessing company leaves us again this week for a season, and the Deutsches company is in Budapest. The Royal Theatres close at the end of June for the customary eight weeks' holiday.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

BERLIN, THURSDAY, MAY 16.—This latest Viennese novelty, performed by the guests within our walls—the company from Theater an der Wien—met with the most cordial reception of any work produced as yet. Victor Léon is responsible for the book, which is at times almost dramatic, while Ascher's music—though not very original—fits the libretto extremely well. There is plenty of fun, too, and if the jokes and "situations" are not exactly new, they serve their end in provoking genuine mirth. A few words will suffice for the description of the plot, the scene of which is laid in New York. Count Bogumil Karinsky—the hero—is a species of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde. He possesses a dual existence, being by turns a member of the Beggars' Club and the son-in-law of Tobias Stephenson, the wealthy and powerful Chief of Police. The Count is about to give up his life of adventure and depart for Europe to turn over a new leaf and settle down to respectability, when his secret becomes public property. This is chiefly brought about by the jealousy of Kitty, daughter of Mr. Slippel, the president of the Beggars' Club. She considers she has a right to Bogumil's affection, and her suspicions being roused that all is not as it should be, she contrives to gain an entrance into the Count's luxurious home. Jimmy Blackwell, a journalist, who loves Malona, the young Countess Bogumil, manages the rest, hoping to separate the pair and gain his own ends. Malona, however, who loves her husband, decides to stay with him and live down the scandal, or, rather, help to disprove it by her presence. The Count, of course, is a reformed character, and all ends happily. There is a good deal of superfluous padding; incidental incidents are scattered about that would have been better omitted, but the capital acting atoned for the faults of the work. The best renderings were those of Herr Streitmann and Herr Treumann. Herr Ziegler conducted, and the chorus and orchestra did their work efficiently, while scenery and costumes were very effective.

AT the Luisen Theatre a sensational piece from the English of Walter Melville was produced last week with very satisfactory results. The German title is Das Mädchen ohne Ehre; the adapter is V. Lutz. It is a story of a pair of swindlers, Captain Caversham and his former mistress, Marian Franklyn. The criminal couple are determined to get the fortune of a wealthy heiress into their hands. The guardian of Rosa, the intended victim, is Charles Sutton, a most worthy and esteemed member of society, but who has one dark spot in his past. This dread secret has been found out by Caversham, who uses it as a means for blackmail. Driven to desperation, the wretched man is about to give his consent to the villain's marriage with Rosa, when Nemesis in the form of Molly Vernon, an earlier victim of Caversham's, turns up just in the nick of time. This delightful young woman proves the good angel of the piece, and both virtue and vice are rewarded according to their several merits. The development of the plot was followed with breathless attention by a large and appreciative audience, the excellent acting of the principal rôles adding much to the success of the piece. As to the mounting, it was above all praise, being one of the best things this enterprising little theatre has yet done. The setting of the scenes, "Die alte Kirche in Essex" and "Winternacht auf der Strasse," was especially tasteful, each tableau calling forth a perfect storm of applause.

SPEAKING of English plays, Oscar Wilde's drama, Ein Idealer Gatte, has just passed its 200th performance at the Kleines Theatre. This has proved one of the most successful draws within my recollection.

The "Kammerspiele" (chamber plays) of the Deutsches Theatre not having had any very great success with Maeterlinck's Aglavaine und Selysette, have now included Gyges und sein Ring in the bill. This powerful tragedy of Friedrich Hebbel was first produced by the Royal Schauspielhaus, affording Herr Matkowsky an excellent opportunity for the display of his special talents. It was one of the famous actor's best rôles, according to some of the critics. The cast was altogether so good as the Schauspielhaus that the production at the Deutsches suffered considerably by comparison, notwithstanding all the pains bestowed upon it.

AT the Royal Opera the "Niebelungen Ring" is being given for the fourth time this season, and, despite the abnormal heat, is filling the house from floor to ceiling. A chronological cycle of Wagner's operas is drawing largely, for the performance of Lohengrin on Thursday last not a vacant seat being left. Herr Fritz Trostorff, from the Stadt Theatre at Breslau, sang the title-rôle with good results, and the remainder of the admirable cast included Fräulein Hiedler, Frau Goetze, Herren Berger, Griswold, and Bachmann. Herr Leo Blech conducted. Keinzl's melodious work, Der Evangelimann, was performed after a long interval on Friday, and was very cordially received.

THE popular little opera by Adam, Czar und Zimmermann, served as an agreeable contrast to the heavier works of the Opera House bill last week. Herr Bronsgeest, of Hamburg, sang the part of Peter, creating a favourable impression. His voice, though hardly equal to the demands of the large house, is musical and sympathetic.

THE Lessing company proper returned to Berlin last week from a tour in Hungary. They gave a few performances at the Lessing of Ibsen's Pillars of Society and Hauptmann's Versunkene Glocke, after which they abdicated again in favour of the Viennese artists from the Theatre an der Wien. The Lessing company, after this brief season, have gone to Vienna, and will not return here until the summer holidays are over.

THE season of the Deutsches Theatre Company at the Court Theatre, Budapest, is proving most successful. Herr Wedekind's morbid, unhealthy play, Fruhlingserwachen, provoked some opposition, but the applause overpowered it, and the remaining pieces of the German repertory have been received with acclamation.

AT the Royal Schauspielhaus Herr von Wildenbruch's latest play, Die Rabensteinerin, is still holding a place in the bill, though, I fear, not a permanent one. This week it is being given three times, Fräulein Wachner acting the name-part, and Herr Matkowsky taking the chief male rôle, the latter being a particularly fine impersonation.

ONE of Berlin's most famous operetta singers, Carl Schulz, has just passed away in the prime of life. He made his mark as tenor-buffo in the Central Theatre company, and held a warm place for many years in the hearts of the Berliners. Herr Schulz had been of late a victim to serious nervous disease, and his death can only be looked upon as a release. In New York, by the way, the late actor was also very popular.

LONDON & SUBURBAN THEATRES.

KING'S THEATRE, HAMMERSMITH.

On Monday, May 13, the Play, by E. W. Hornung and E. W. Presbury, entitled
"RAFFLES."

With such a fine actor as Mr. Leonard Boyne to represent Raffles, the cricketer cracksman, it is hardly necessary to say more than that complete success is attained. In the scene where Raffles faces death at the mouth of a loaded revolver in Crawshay, the burglar's, hands, his acting was admirable, and he was well rewarded by vociferous applause from all parts of the crowded theatre. Mr. Arthur Willoughby made a picturesque and dignified Earl of Amersteth, and Viscount Crowley was capitally impersonated by Mr. Edmund Breon. A hit was scored by Mr. E. W. Lewis as the American detective, Curtis Bedford, who so cleverly gets on the track of Raffles' misdeeds. Mr. Lewis Edgard feelingly and successfully represented Harry Manders, and Mr. Dalziel Heron effectively rendered the burglar, Crawshay. Goldby, Merton, and Barraclough were capably impersonated by Mr. Charles Kean, Mr. W. Henty, and Mr. Arthur Fitzgerald. Lady Melrose was charmingly enacted by Miss Alys Rees, and Lady Ethel found a bright and intelligent performer in Miss Jean Morrison. Miss Jane Saville's acting as Gwendoline Conran was a combination of grace and refinement, and Miss Jean Harkness as the French maid, Marie, won praise. Special commendation was richly deserved by Miss Elaine Inescourt for her spirited and able performance of Mrs. Vidal, a part requiring very careful handling. A one-act play by Mr. Eric Lewis, entitled A Lesson in Shakespeare, was also given, in which Mr. Dalziel Heron, Mr. Edmund Breon, and Miss Jane Saville acted merrily. Very artistic scenery and appointments were provided.

THE MARLBOROUGH.

On Monday, May 13, the Musical Comedy,
"THE BLUE MOON."

The second visit of The Blue Moon is proving wonderfully attractive. It is being presented on this occasion by the North London Operatic and Dramatic Society, with all the original scenery, costumes, and effects as so successfully played at the Lyric Theatre. The delightful music of this bright piece is done ample justice to by the company. Great care has been exercised in the selection of the artists, and all do justice to their respective characters. The chorus forms a special feature, and is vocally quite up to the average. Miss Katherine Craig, in the title-rôle, plays with appropriate fascination, and sings in fine voice and telling style. Mr. Douglas C. Ingram plays the part of Captain Jack Ormsby very cleverly, his acting being natural and pleasing, and he is to be congratulated on his vocal abilities. Mr. Charles G. Dickenson gives a clever assumption of Major Vivian Callabone, quite the best performance of all, and Mr. Will Stamp as Bobbie Scott acts throughout with dash and heartiness. Mr. Fritz E. Yates must be credited with a capital performance of the Prince Badahin Sanatsinghjhi of Kharaka, and Mr. Fred Buchanan (Abdul), Mr. Montague Oakes (Hefez), and Mr. Douglas Hale (Hon. Archie May) are deserving of praise for their respective portrayals. Mr. Murray Short works indefatigably as Private Charles Taylor, and is immensely funny, his comic rendering of the song, "Mother," being especially good. Mr. Short is admirably "played up" to by Miss Nellie Craig, who is smart, vivacious, and fascinating as Millicent Leroy. She is good as a singer, and also in the calisthenic art shows great ability. Mr. Percy Short creates much amusement as Moohaj, and Mr. Thomas Martin is suitably cast as Clive Mansfield. The Lady Brabasham of Miss Netta Neville is praiseworthy, and Miss Alice M. Grimsdick deserves favourable mention for her assumption of Evelyn Ormsby. Miss Violet Williams (Oma) and Miss Anna Macdowall (Ramah) render valuable aid, and the remainder of the long cast is adequate. Mr. Arthur Roby, the Society's musical director, must be congratulated upon the excellence of the choral work, the singing being spirited and well-balanced.

THE CAMDEN.

"SPORTING LIFE."

A drama which is full of sporting interest, with racehorses and a boxing match at the National Sporting Club, cannot but fail to interest all lovers of exciting melodrama, and Sporting Life, which is being played at the Camden this week, has all these attractions to offer, and is drawing good audiences. The company is under the direction of Mr. R. A. Beaton; the play is well staged, and there is a stud of fine racehorses which create quite a sensation; while the scene at the boxing match is well managed and most exciting. The sporting peer, Lord Woodstock, is admirably played by Henry Doughty; he portrays the real sportsman, who can meet defeat with a stout heart, to the life. Miss Constance Elgin gives a very vivid picture of the adventuress, Olive de Carteret, and scores a great success in the character, which she depicts in a bold style. Mr. Raymond Dudley is likewise good as the villain of the play, Malet de Carteret, who plots and schemes throughout the story, but eventually meets with his deserts. Miss Ida Phillips is a charming Norah Cavanagh; while Miss Nellie Lucas is very sweet as Kitty, her sister. Mr. H. H. Barrington appears as Miles Cavanagh, and he gives a fine delineation of the large-hearted old Irish trainer; Mr. Ashton Winslow is good as Jordan, the head stable lad; and Mr. Edward Chester does well as Joe Lee, the young soldier who becomes a pugilist. Much humour is supplied by Mr. Bert Morley as Dan Doxey, the police officer, who generally seems to be making trouble for himself; and Miss Veronica Brady is very bright and entertaining as Doxey's fiancée, Clara; and these two appear in several scenes which are most amusing. Mr. George Claremont is seen to advantage as George Gale; and Geoffrey Pilgrim is quite safe in the hands of Mr. J. P. Dryden. Philip Cavanagh is played in an earnest manner by Mr. Edwin Fergusson, who is also responsible for the excellent stage-management of the play, which includes many big scenes that require careful handling. Mr. H. C. Cooper is particularly good as Isidore Andread, a money-lender, who is not so grasping as most of that class; Mr. H. J. Barrett is amusing as the old Colonel Molyneux; and there are many other minor characters which are capably filled. During the intervals Mr. G. F. Ford's orchestra add greatly to the evening's enjoyment with their melodious selections.

THE TERRISS.

"NOT GUILTY."

South London audiences have been attracted to the Rotherhithe house this week to witness the above sensational drama. Miss Marion Denvil has an arduous task as the sorely-tried Nelly Chaddox, from which she emerges triumphantly. The heroine's struggle in the snowstorm in the last act with the villain is most realistically portrayed. Mr. Ashley Page has a part which fits him like a glove as the manly young miner, Harry Grafton; and Mr. J. C. Aubrey gives a capital impersonation of the grim and cruel Nick Chaddox. Mr. Johnny Chippendal and Miss Mattie Everett supply some agreeable comic relief as Timothy Sprouts and Nancy Lee, and their love-making causes infinite amusement. Mr. Weldon Atherstone is a calm and gentlemanly Oswald Brandon; and Mr. Edwin Wilde is pathetic and dignified as old farmer Grafton. Mr. Gerald Jordan is well placed as the lawyer, Ernest Saville; and Mr. John Sargent makes good use of his scanty opportunities as James Smiley. Good bits of character-acting are also supplied by Miss East Robertson, Mr. Tom Taylor, and Miss Maggie Lindsay. The scenery and effects are quite adequate, and the trial scene, where the hero is condemned to death for murder, is excellently stage-managed, and rouses the audience to a great pitch of excitement.

THE CORONET.

On Tuesday, May 14,
"CARMEN."

The Moody-Manners Opera Company have now nearly completed their second week's stay at the Coronet, much to the regret of opera-lovers, who have crowded the theatre and evinced their enthusiasm in no uncertain manner during the last fortnight. On Monday Faust was given, and this melodious and dramatic opera was splendidly interpreted by Mesdames De Vere-Sapio (Marguerite) and Mildred Bryan, and Messrs. Wilson Pembroke (a fine Faust), William Dever, and Charles Manners (a powerful, impressive Mephistopheles). The rest of the week's programme comprised Lohengrin on Wednesday (Mr. Wilson Pembroke in the title-rôle), Cavalleria Rusticana and Pagliacci on Thursday, Tannhäuser on Friday, and Il Trovatore to-night will complete a delightful fortnight's season. Mme. Zelie de Lussan is seen quite at her best as the beautiful wayward, capricious, and cruel gipsy girl employed in the cigarette factory, Carmen by name, and her fascinating coquetry, the witchery of her glance, and her contemptuous indifference, unscrupulous abandonment, and haunting fear are graphically and picturesquely set forth. Her rendering of "Near to the walls of Sevilla," with its haunting refrain, is exquisitely rendered. Mr. Joseph O'Mara as Don José acts with a fire and fervour eminently suited to the part; all the throbbing emotion of the highly-strung nature of this young soldier, driven to despair and madness by unrequited love and mental anguish, are set forth with glowing intensity. His singing is magnificent. Mr. Lewis James as Escamillo makes a fine virile character of the triumphant Toreador, and one can readily understand how his tinselled grandeur would appeal to such a shallow nature as Carmen's. His rendering of the world-famous "Toreador" song provokes an undeniable encore, and throughout he acts with judgment and ability. Miss Kate Anderson displays her wonted charm and experience in the pathetic part of Michaela, and her singing of "For tell I must" and "Here is the place" brings down the house. Mr. Bailey is a first-rate Il Remendado; and Mr. Moppett very good as Il Dancairo. Miss Burns as Frasquita and Miss Alvord as Mercedes are well in the picture, and sing "Shuffle and cut" delightfully. Mr. Carter and Mr. Halpin enact the parts of the Dragoons quite satisfactorily. The chorus and dancers and the augmented orchestra, conducted by Signor Romualdo Sapio, deserve high praise, and the scenery is appropriately picturesque.

THE SHAKESPEARE.

On Monday, May 13, the Play, in Five Acts, by C. M. S. McLellan, entitled
"LEAH KLESCHNA."

A rare dramatic treat is provided this week at the above theatre, where a powerful company, under the direction of Messrs. H. Armitage and Arthur Leigh, is presenting Leah Kleschna. Great care has evidently been taken to obtain thoroughly suitable artists to fit the various characters, and their interpretation of the piece is in every way so successful that the audience are roused to the greatest enthusiasm, prolonged applause awaiting the fall of the curtain. Miss Haidee Wright is a great success in the title-rôle. Thoroughly grasping the character, Miss Wright, by her excellent impersonation, quickly wins sympathy, and her acting, good throughout, reaches a high plane of excellence in the scene where she finally breaks away from her father and his nefarious enterprises. Mr. William Clayton brings out the main characteristics of Kleschna with convincing force, faithfully portraying, with consummate skill, the varying emotions of the part. Another good performance is that of Mr. William F. Grant in the rôle of Paul Sylvaine. An actor of marked ability, Mr. Grant holds the attention of the audience throughout, and fully deserves the applause accorded him. Mr. Hamilton Deane's impersonation of the dissipated Raoul Berton is thoroughly satisfactory, and he is to be congratulated for a sterling performance. The part of Schram is excellently enacted by Mr. Campbell Goldsmid; and Mr. Roland Daniel makes the most of the part of the excitable journalist, Valentine Favre. Miss Violet Thorold is a charming Sophie Champonniere; and Miss Ethel Russell as Mme. Berton, and Miss Helene Belgrave as Claire Berton, are satisfactory in their respective rôles. Mr. Bernard Hishin is business-manager for Messrs. Armitage and Leigh.

GRAND, FULHAM.

On Monday, May 13, the Drama, in Four Acts, by Mark Melford, entitled
"FLYING FROM JUSTICE."

The piece this week at Fulham is a melodrama of the robust type, relying more on human interest than any particular stage sensationalism. Mr. Wilson Blake is a whole-hearted and vigorous hero as John Lacarsey, and does not spare himself in the least. But the best acting in the piece is undoubtedly the performance of Mr. Fred Morgan as Haldane Gully, a criminal of the polished type. He impersonates the character with a fine restraint, diversified with sudden flashes of passion. Mr. Harry Brandreth is good as the broken-down Major Parkes; and Mr. Paige Laurence makes the most of the short part of Charles Bearing. Mr. Teddy Coleman is amusing as Pearly Tanner; and Mr. C. C. Thornhill is quietly effective as Woodruff. Miss Dorothy Clifton plays well as Mildred Parkes, if at times a trifle overweighted with the part. Miss Florence Nelson puts plenty of power into her representation of Mrs. Bearing; and Miss Mary Ralz is excellent as Winnie Bradley, the adventuress and former lover of Gully, being equally at home in the humorous and the tragic episodes. The whole company play with considerable vigour, and do their best to make the piece go.

THE LYRIC, HAMMERSMITH.

"MAN AND WIFE."

Mr. Ward has got together an excellent company and the performance of Mr. Walter Howard's popular drama is in every way a success. Mr. John F. Traynor as Paul Revere makes a good impression, and plays throughout with excellent restraint, retaining the sympathetic interest of the audience until the end. As Paul's wife, Marcelle, Miss Kate Hallam is particularly good; Mr. Wilson Coleman acquits himself well in the heavy part of Capt. D'Esparre; and Messrs. Edward Van Biene and Ambrose Horton as Col. Latour and Sergeant Jacques respectively are both good. Mr. Edward Leslie is a satisfactory Father Coupe; Miss Violet Temple as the blind mother of Paul invests the part with all the necessary pathos; Miss Ethel F. Greene creates an excellent impression as Jean, a cripple boy; plenty of fun is introduced by Miss Pollie Denville as Rosette, who rejoices in two lovers—twins—named Bimbo and Bambo, humorously played by Mr. Sydney Bryant and Mr. Val Gully. Other parts are well filled by Mr. Angus Phillips, Mr. Harcourt Ralph, and Mr. R. Stone. The drama is elaborately staged and is drawing excellent houses.

BOROUGH THEATRE, STRATFORD.

On Monday, May 13, the Musical Play
"THE GIRL BEHIND THE COUNTER."

The visit of Mr. Mouillot's company in The Girl Behind the Counter is proving a very welcome event at the Stratford Borough Theatre this week, and large audiences are being attracted. Miss Nora Brocklebank makes a very fascinating Winnie Willoughby, and her delightful vocalism wins vociferous applause; Mr. Arthur Cartwright looks and acts the part of Charles Chetwyn most suitably, and he sings in manly and pleasing style; Mr. Ellis Holland as the brusque General Willoughby plays with a keen sense of humour, and his "Sir Walter Raleigh" song is highly popular; Mr. Howard Cridland contributes a most amusing and exceedingly clever portraiture of aristocratic amiable inanity as Viscount Gushington; and M. Jules Charnettes plays M. Duval very appropriately. Mr. A. M. Moore as a waiter at the Exhibition has a difficult task in following in Mr. George Barrett's footsteps, but he manages to extract plenty of mirth from the part; as Joseph, the "silent" waiter, Mr. William Amery cuts a very droll figure; Miss Florence Lee is a very prepossessing Millie Mostyn, and her demure rendering of "The Vicar's Eldest Daughter" gives much point to the song; Mr. Frederick Park is always amusing and energetic as the office boy, Adolphus Dudds, most of his work being in conjunction with Miss Rose Helene, who plays Susie very brightly, and the "Kate Greenaway" duet by these two easily remains a favourite item. Miss Doris Langdon is a chic and vivacious Ninette, and Lady Willoughby is admirably delineated by Miss Winifred Knightly. Mr. Geoffrey Allsop is excellent as the commissionaire, Rudolph, and is, besides, responsible for the production and stage management of the piece, the very efficient chorus and augmented orchestra being under the able direction of Mr. George M. Saker.

CRYSTAL PALACE THEATRE.

On Monday, May 13, Pinero's Play,
"HIS HOUSE IN ORDER."

"The best play of the year" has proved to be the best play of Mr. J. Bannister Howard's present season, which is now drawing to a close, and Mr. George Alexander's company gave an admirable rendering of Mr. Pinero's great work. Mr. Frank Fenton never allowed the interest to flag in the all-pervading part of Hilary Jesson, and excelled especially in the long speeches. Mr. Cyril Harcourt as Filmer Jesson, M.P., afforded an excellent contrast to his brother's more tolerant attitude to human weakness; the pompous rectitude of Sir Daniel Ridgely was excellently delineated by Mr. George Fitzgerald; and he was ably supported by Mrs. Kemmis as Lady Ridgely and Mr. George Silver as the priggish Pryce Ridgely. Major Maurewarde was cleverly acted by Mr. Lloyd Lowndes, whose dramatic skill was sufficient to remove the unpleasant flavour of deceit attaching to the betrayer of a friend's honour. Miss Henrietta Leverett was good as Geraldine Ridgely, playing the part with mordant precision; and little Miss Moyna Hill made a distinct success in her rendering of the child Derek, her boyish appearance and demeanour being most convincing. As Nina, Miss Auriol Lee divided the honours of the evening with Mr. Frank Fenton, her impersonation of the much-tried wife being excellent. She received a demonstration of approval at the end of the second act which temporarily interrupted the action of the piece. Miss Lilli Kehr as Mlle. Thomé, the governess of Derek, was very much at home in the part, her accent and appearance being all that could be desired; Dr. Dilnott, the provincial Mayor, was a clever little sketch in the hands of Mr. A. E. Benedict; Mr. Reginald Besant was a gentlemanly secretary and factotum; and Mr. Cyril Cattley was earnest as Forshaw, a newspaper representative in search of "copy." The company, it may be added, carries all its own scenery, and many pieces of valuable and appropriate furniture are included in its equipment.

THE CROWN, PECKHAM.

"THE WORST WOMAN IN LONDON."

Good audiences have been flocking to the Crown during the present week to witness the favourite drama, The Worst Woman in London. Mr. Tom H. Taylor's company gives a rendering of the unconventional and exciting play, which is in every respect thoroughly enjoyable. Miss Olga Audre is fortunately at hand to play the leading rôle of the fascinating adventuress, Frances Vere, the part with which her name has so long been associated. Needless to say that Miss Audre's impersonation, thrilling in its realism, fascinating in its softer moments, and ripened by time, is one that it would be difficult to beat. Mr. George Gaisford makes a spirited young hero as Jack Felton, and Mr. Paul Barry-Lewers is seen to much advantage as the unscrupulous Vincent Lyle; Mr. F. Vernon Travers is a handsome and aristocratic James Milford; and Bob Goldfinch, in the capable hands of Mr. Willie, is a most amusing creation. Miss Polly Marsh causes roars of laughter as the irrepressible Matilda Parker, who is determined to win a husband. Miss Elizabeth Watkins is pathetic as Ruth Milford; Mr. Leonard Booker successfully supplies a grim character-sketch as the ruined gambler, Philip Armstrong. The remaining characters in a long cast are all adequately acted. The scenery and effects are excellent, especially worthy of mention being the escape of Ruth Milford across the telephone wire in the last act. Mr. F. Vernon Travers is the general-manager for the company.

THE ELEPHANT AND CASTLE.

"HER LOVE AGAINST THE WORLD."

Messrs. W. H. Hallatt and Walter Howard's principal company is here this week in the current Lyceum success, Her Love Against the World. The company has been well chosen, all of the numerous characters receiving able treatment. Mr. Walter Howard is a perfectly convincing hero in the character of Eric Earl of Strathmere, and he is capitally supported by Miss Rossie St. John, a talented actress, as Neilo, his brother. The character of the brutal Ulric, Prince of Ravensburg, is successfully portrayed by Mr. Mayor Cooke, who makes all his points tell. Mr. W. H. Hallatt gives a capital study of the generous-hearted Prince Othmar, and Messrs. Alec Alexander and Richard Webb make the most of the characters of Prince Maurice of Saxonia and General Gessler. Sergeant Kasper finds an able representative in Mr. Arthur J. Moss, and Mr. Curtis Groves is a jovial Surgeon-Captain Helgar. The rather unthankful part of Shulah Countess of Rassellyn is undertaken by Miss Blanche Steele, who makes the most of the few opportunities afforded her; and Miss Ellen Snow is a charming and sympathetic Iris, Princess of Idalia, her emotional scenes being natural and realistic. The comic relief is supplied by Messrs. H. B. Lewis and W. Passmore in the characters of Heinrick and Fritz Pimpernickle. Mention must be made of the excellent way in which the drama is staged, the first scene in the third act, viz., Headquarters of Prince Maurice, being a striking representation.

THEATRE ROYAL, STRATFORD.

"THE LITTLE BREAD WINNER."

A capital attraction is provided this week for the numerous patrons of Mrs. Ellis-Fredericks' popular melodrama theatre by the engagement of Mr. J. A. Campbell's company in The Little Bread Winner, and on Monday night the large audience present followed the interesting story with rapt attention. Mr. Eugene Santley plays in dignified and convincing style as Lord William Dorington, and Mr. Matthew Boulton acts with all the necessary virility and fervour as his adopted son, Richard. Mr. Alfred Maurice submits an intense an incisive portraiture of Joseph Prior, who is made a cringing schemer of the Uriah Heep type, and the frequent execrations hurled at him from the gallery are eloquent testimony to his ability. Mr. Stanley Leedham makes a jovial and amusing Charles Prior, and Mr. Wallace Carey is an impressive Doctor Chadwick. Miss Emil Leslie plays with much charm and expression as Margaret Daventry, and enlists the sympathies of the audience throughout; Miss Nellie Thorne-Hallam portrays Kate Cherry very skilfully; and Ruth Cherry is smartly enacted by Miss Kitty Melville. Bridget O'Flanagan has a natural representative in Miss Jenny Bostock; and Miss Nellie King makes an alert Bobby Trott. Little Emmie Thomas as Meg, the Little Bread-Winner, is a very clever and versatile young maiden, and shows considerable promise.

DALSTON THEATRE.

"THE LITTLE VAGRANT."

Members of Mr. Harry Roxbury's company are greatly interesting Dalston audiences this week with representations of the domestic drama, by Fred Moule and E. W. Avery, entitled A Little Vagrant. Two of the most prominent characters in the cast are Jim Harris, proprietor of The Fly Club, and Poll, who is described as "a daughter of sorrow." The latter part is sustained by Miss Vashti Wynne in a way which causes the audience to become greatly interested in the various phases of her career, and that she enlists sympathy is proved by the hearty applause accorded. The Jim Harris of Mr. Cecil A. Collins is an embodiment full of individuality, and also has some acceptable touches of quaint humour. Mr. J. W. Gallager as Slideaway Bates, one of Jim's gang, has his amusing points; and Snatcher, another of the gang, is played by Mr. Douglas Campbell. Thomas Whitworth finds a suitable representative in Mr. Richard Bosco, who acts with much care; and Mr. Brian Henry, Miss Bella Moody, and Miss Caroline Fenton represent some of Mr. Whitworth's servants, who play rather prominent parts in the story. Arthur, the little vagrant, is represented by Miss Alice Bowes; and the vagrant's half-brother, Eric Arden, is portrayed in interesting style by Mr. Stanley Radcliffe, who is also stage-manager. Mr. Ernest Ralston, as Signor Pascall, a musician; and Mr. J. L. McWilliam as a policeman complete the cast.

KENNINGTON THEATRE.

"LIGHTS OUT."

Kennington is especially favoured this week with a visit from one of the best of companies in the thrilling drama, Lights Out. The difficult part of Klara Volkhardt was entrusted to Miss Frances Davie, who displayed admirable tact and ability in dealing with it. Mr. Arthur Stone as Captain Von B. Bannewitz was particularly good, and bore himself in fine soldierly style, as also did Sergeant Volkhardt, the regimental veteran, a part happily entrusted to Mr. Wilton Reed. Mr. Charles Esdale embodies Lieutenant Von Lauffen with skill; and Mr. Kenneth Brampton in the character of Lauffen's friend and confidant, Lieutenant Von Howen, was equally good. Mr. George Hanbury was extremely funny as Major Paschke, of the 18th Alsatian Artillery; Capt. Febdenburg, of the 10th Palatinate Cuirassiers, as presented by Mr. Lambert Plummer, was particularly fine, especially in the Court Martial scene; Corporal Helbig, by Mr. Richard Fielding, was powerfully enacted; and Messrs. Francis J. Bithell and Mr. F. Higton evoked considerable mirth by their quaintness; while Mr. Frederick Clifton as Private Michael was irresistibly droll. The rôles of Lieut. Hagemeister, of the 186th Infantry, the Doctor, and the Orderly, were ably enacted by Messrs. W. Victor, Alex Housemans, and J. Lister; while Messrs. Strickland and Hemming as members of the Court Martial are also worthy of mention.

GRAND THEATRE, ISLINGTON.

"SCALES OF JUSTICE."

Good business continues to be the rule here in spite of outdoor attractions, and Monday found a capital audience assembled to witness the performance of the above drama. The plot is similar to Proof so far as the main incident is concerned, and much skill has been shown in weaving an interesting story round it. An experienced company has been engaged for the production, which embraces many old favourites, and warm praise must be accorded their joint efforts. Mr. George Mitchell as Captain Duncan acted with dignity and effect, and gave a very good performance. Mr. Jack Denton as Tom Duncan was buoyant and manly, and made a very good impression; Mr. Ernest E. Norris as Harry Maxwell again submitted a character-study of great value. Mr. Norris has done some very good work here, and his latest effort in quite as excellent. Mr. Will Corrie as the Bos'un played a comedy part with all his old success, and found a valuable ally in Miss Kate Carter. Mr. G. H. Asquin as Tony gave another of his humorous performances, which appeared to be quite to the taste of the audience. Mr. Douglas Bruce as Antonio Cordova gave a portrayal of that highly unpleasant individual that is entitled to warm commendation, his make-up being good. Mr. Harold Wayne as Mendoza was good; and Mr. H. N. Grimson as Hartwright gave a neat character-study of the warder. Miss Grace Lester as Inez gave a powerful reading of great value to the production. Little Elsie Jezzard as Jennie was natural, and is to be praised for a promising performance. Miss Ethel Bracewell in the dual rôle of the wife and the daughter gave a sympathetic touch to her portrayal, and is altogether to be congratulated on artistic labours of value to the production. The scenery and mounting leave nothing to be desired. Mr. Gallagher is very courteous in the discharge of his duties in the front of the house; and Mr. Gliddon's orchestra still remains a feature of the evening.

THE PAVILION.

On Monday, May 13, the Drama, by S. Feinman, entitled
"THE LIFE IN NEW YORK."

Although one of the leading incidents familiarised in East Lynne is found in Mr. S. Feinman's play, The Life in New York, yet the author has constructed an effective and interesting story, in which the dramatic fibre is strong and fresh in tone, and on account of its domestic simplicity, appeals thoroughly to a popular audience. The clever Jewish Operatic and Dramatic Company, whose present engagement at the Pavilion is rapidly drawing to a close, give a highly finished rendering of the drama, which is well staged and mounted. Mme. J. Kayzer is an accomplished actress who is able as Klara Feien to display all the varying phases of her art, while her poignant and emotional scenes, particularly those with her children, are depicted with intensity and strength. Mr. M. Gusofsky proved himself fully capable of sustaining the part of Dr. Feien, which was well conceived and portrayed with vigour; while the Gustaff of Mr. N. Hamburger was elaborated to good purpose. Mme. Josephson puts plenty of life and vivacity into her acting as Jane; and Lizzah is earnestly delineated by Miss Lubritski. Mr. J. Scherman scores a hit, and his performance of the sport, Schpitzman, is decidedly droll, and causes much laughter; while his song and eccentric dancing win for him an enthusiastic recall. The character of the teacher, Goothertz, by Mr. S. Feinman had been carefully studied both in make-up and acting, and his exposition is full of by-play which, to a large extent, is very successful. Miss R. Bryh is all that can be desired as Sophia; and Mme. Goldstein represents a patient. During the week Woman Against Woman, The Jewish Priest, Shulamith, and The Wild Man have been played.

COUNTY THEATRE, KINGSTON.

On Monday, May 13, the Comedy, by H. V. Esmond,
"WHEN WE WERE TWENTY-ONE."

This delightful and refreshing production, permeated as it is with a wholesome sentiment, has attracted good audiences to the cosy little riverside playhouse, notwithstanding the lengthening days and the allurement of the river. The play is presented by a most capable company. Mr. Riddell Robinson gives a fine picture of the sympathetic Richard Carewe; and Miss Dorothy Cacey, who, as Kara Glenesk, shows that she possesses histrionic gifts of a high order. A pretty and graceful impersonation of Phyllis comes from Miss Mildred Hodson; and Miss Susie Oak makes a successful appearance as Babette. Good work is also put in by Mr. Gerald Henson as The Imp; and by the Misses Ainslie and Preddy, and Messrs. Edgar Coyne, Frank Powell, L. Rutledge, Loris Lorell, F. Moorgate, and A. E. Coleby, in the various parts allotted to them. The comedy, which occupies the boards for the week, is admirably mounted in every particular.

PRINCE'S, POPLAR.

On Monday, May 13, the American Comedy-Drama, entitled
"HEARTS ADRIFT."

Hearts Adrift is a drama in which the dialogue is good, the situations thrilling and exciting, while it is judiciously sandwiched with scenes of broad comedy and picturesque sentiment. Since its production at Birmingham in February, 1905, it has met with striking success, and on Monday was received at Poplar by a large house with unqualified approval. Mr. Frank Bertram has got together a strong company, who give an excellent interpretation of the piece, while the mounting and scenery are in every way satisfactory. Mr. Henry Bedford is capitally cast as Captain Teddy, and furnishes a vivid picture of a man with a past, being fresh and breezy in the opening, and displaying impressive realism in the condemned cell. Mr. Cecil Klein is admirably suited as Robert Darney, a part that he portrays in an easy and at the same time effective manner; and Mr. William Taversham as the inventor, Pidgeon, presents a neat and clever study of a difficult part. Mr. Fred Terriss, who enacts the villain, Edmund Gerue, well earns the execrations of his audience; Mr. R. Gwyn-Richardson appears successfully as John Lane; while every praise is due to Miss Irene Ross for her depiction of the little crippled Tim. Miss Nellie Clyde wins golden opinions, and brings an attractive personality to bear on her impersonation of Rosie, playing with charming persuasiveness and sympathy; and Miss Marion Walker supplies a striking and consistent sketch of Mother Hagslow. The abhorrent qualities of the designing Julia Lane are brought out with great skill by Miss Gertrude Harrison; and Mr. Brian Daly is a witty and amusing Simeon Green. Miss Beatrix A. Bell is seen to advantage as the energetic and forcible Bowery girl, Energy Mugs; and Mr. William Gomer is a capable Sam Redway. The remaining characters are well handled by Messrs. Harry Glover, Henry Loney, John Ward, William Smith, and Miss Kitty Kirwan.

THE STANDARD.

On Monday, May 13, the Play, by Herbert Keith and J. T. Tanner,
"THE BROKEN MELODY."

The return visit of Mr. Auguste Van Biene to the Standard has met with distinct approval, and the performance of the well-known play, The Broken Melody, is this week proving a decided draw. In spite of the number of years this piece has been before the public, it appears to retain its great popularity, and on Monday the reception accorded to it was indeed gratifying. Every praise is due to Mr. Van Biene for his excellent portrayal of Paul Borinski. His acting shows the result of careful study, and his style and manner of speech are particularly pleasing. During the evening he plays his 'cello in a masterly fashion. A character of considerable interest is General Ivanoff, to whom due prominence is given by Mr. Henry Ludlow. A capital embodiment of Mr. Dickson is supplied by Mr. Henry Bute; and Mr. Dudley Stuart does all that is possible as Beaujour. Mr. Herbert Colley is an amusing Mortimer; and Mr. Archie Selwyn is well placed as the Hon. Richard Spinnaker; Mr. W. Thomson is particularly good as Dr. Magrath; and Miss Rosemary Rees, who is well known here, undertakes in an able manner the rôle of the Duchesse de Verviers. Miss Kate Robberds is well placed as Mrs. Dickson; and Miss R. Pulleyne plays satisfactorily as the Hon. Mrs. Spinnaker. A charming portrayal of Mabel Borinski is supplied by Miss Sylvia Morris, who enacts the part with much feeling. The Broken Melody is preceded each evening by the comedietta entitled An Awkward Dilemma, which is ably represented by Mr. Archie Selwyn as Mr. Flipper and Mr. Herbert Colley as Mr. Nobbler.

BRIXTON THEATRE.

"SAPHO."

Sapho is paying a visit to Brixton this week, and large crowds have been flocking to see, as the bills say, "Parisian life as it really is." Mr. Ernest R. Abbott and a very capable company give a clever rendering of the stage version of Daudet's famous novel. Miss Ada Abbott is seen in the title-rôle, and does well in this difficult and exacting part, giving a forcible delineation of the character; Mr. Ernest R. Abbott as Jean Gaussin, the young provincial, who falls in her toils, plays with much spirit, and in scenes of love, jealousy, and hatred is equally successful; Uncle Césaire is capitally impersonated by Mr. Douglas C. Phelps, his performance of Jean's gay old uncle being an outstanding feature of the performance; Mr. Weedon Ross scores a success as old Legrand, and raises much laughter; Mr. Charles Tring as Flamant, Mr. John Lester as Caoudal, and Mr. W. H. Garbois as Henri Dechelette all do good work. The turbulent child Joseph is played with much spirit by Miss Hetty Jones; Miss Louise Gilmore as Aunt Divonne, in a somewhat strange costume, is successful; Hettema and Mme. Hettema are capitally portrayed by Mr. W. H. Davis-Brown and Miss Marjorie Tennant; Miss Dorris Dent acquits herself with much credit as Lucy. Mr. Philip Layton is acting-manager and Mr. W. H. Davis-Brown stage-manager for Mr. Ernest R. Abbott.

BROADWAY THEATRE, S.E.

On Monday, May 13, the Comic Opera, entitled
"LES CLOCHES DE CORNEVILLE."

Mr. E. St. Alban's company is appearing here in the evergreen comic opera Les Cloches de Corneville, and the pretty story and delightful music are as attractive as ever. Mr. St. Alban plays the part of the miser Gaspard cleverly, and with an evident understanding of the character. Mr. William Everard looks well, sings well, and acts well as the Marquis, and keeps the interest in the story alive throughout. Mr. Charles Ross is very good indeed as Grenicheux; Mr. Fred Dark is an amusing Bailie; and Mr. Richard Martin is excellent as Gobo. Miss Marion Ayling is an attractive and sweet-voiced Germaine; Miss Nellie May is a bright and pleasing Christophe; and Miss Madge Roberts sings delightfully as Serpolette, and invests the character with irresistible charm. Miss E. Lawton as Gertrude, Miss E. Humphries as Jeannie, Miss F. Mears as Hanette, Miss F. Wellbourne as Susane, Miss W. Kirby as Catherine, and Miss M. Yorke as Marie, all look very pretty and sing tunefully. The large and well-trained chorus is judiciously chosen, the orchestra is under the skilful direction of Chevalier Legrand, the dresses are handsome and costly, and the entire production is looked after by Mr. E. St. Alban.

MR. EDITOR,—SIR,— In your notice of the performance of Lady Selina of K at the County Theatre, Kingston, you state that Mr. Claude B. Yearsley was the sole composer of the music. I beg to inform you that I am part-composer of the song "Love, oh Love," and the duet "Surely setting here together," am also the composer of "The captain of the schooner," "Come o'er the sea," and the trio, "The love-lorn professor."—Yours faithfully, HENRY WARREN, Hicks'-Theatre, Shaftesbury-avenue, W., May 13, 1907.

THE ACTORS' ASSOCIATION.

The usual weekly meeting of the Council of the Actors' Association was held on Tuesday, when there were present Mr. Kenyon Musgrave (in the chair), Mr. Henry W. Mote (hon. solicitor), Mr. Henry Warburton (standing counsel), Mesdames Clare, Greet, and Georgina Hamilton, and Messrs. C. F. Collings, H. Athol Forde, Fredk. Morland, and Chas. Cruikshanks (sec.). The hon. solicitors reported they had written letters on behalf of two members and had interviewed and advised two others.

Reference was made to a letter received from a member re a suggested clause in a certain contract, whereby the actor agrees to the manager deducting 10s. in the course of a tour from the actor's salary to meet the cost of insurance by the manager against claims, if any, under the Employers' Liability Act. This was, in the opinion of the hon. solicitors, not equitable, and they expressed their willingness to write their opinion on the subject if an agreement containing such a clause were sent to them.

With reference to the proposed alterations of the Articles of Association, the hon. solicitors expressed the opinion that "if the resolution is confirmed as to reducing the number of the Council to twenty-five, the present Council would remain in office until the next annual meeting, when the twenty-five members would be elected, the nomination being given in accordance with the proposed fresh article."

The report of the Finance and General Purposes Committee was given by Mr. Acton Bond, who attended the Council meeting for that purpose and then retired. The various rules, together with the report, were accepted and adopted upon the proposition of Mr. Athol Forde, seconded by Mr. Fredk. Morland.

The Chairman read a letter from Miss Italia Conti, dated May 14, 1907, together with a letter from Miss Conti which appeared in The Era. The secretary was directed to acknowledge the receipt of the letter, and to state that the Council would give it their fullest consideration.

The secretary reported that there were twenty-nine vacancies on the Council, the president, nine of the vice-presidents, and nineteen of the ordinary members of the Council having resigned. The resignations were as follows:—Sir Squire Bancroft (president), Messrs. George Alexander, F. R. Benson, Arthur Bourchier, John Hare, H. B. Irving, Cyril Maude, Edward Terry, H. Beerbohm Tree, and Sir Charles Wyndham (vice-presidents), Mr. C. Aubrey Smith (chairman of the Council), Mr. A. E. Drinkwater (deputy-chairman of the Council), Mr. Acton Bond (chairman of the Finance and General Purposes Committee), Mesdames Carlotta Addison, Kate Bishop, Fanny Brough, Maud Milton, and Kate Phillips, Messrs. Cecil Barth, J. Cooke Beresford, Clarence Blakiston, Burton Cooke, C. Hayden Coffin, Thalberg Corbett, William Devereux, Alfred Kendrick, Algernon Syms, Brandon Thomas, and Fredk. Volpe. Mr. Henry Warburton also resigned his position as hon. standing counsel to the Actors' Association.

Mr. Rich. Waldon, of the Princess Theatre, Glasgow, having resigned, his resignation was accepted.

It was proposed by Mr. Fredk. Morland, seconded by Mr. H. Athol Forde, and agreed, that the resignations of the president and the vice-presidents be accepted with extreme regret, and that they be cordially thanked for their kindness in the past. The same gentlemen moved that the resignations of the ordinary members of the Council be accepted, and they be thanked for their valuable services. They also proposed that the resignation of Mr. Henry Warburton be accepted with the deepest regret, and that he be accorded a hearty vote of thanks for his services in the past. Both resolutions were agreed to. Mr. Henry Warburton acknowledged the vote.

The secretary was directed to issue a "Whip" for Tuesday week to consider the "filling of vacancies."

Dr. Reginald Hayes, of 93, Cornwall-gardens, Queen's Gate, S.W., and Dr. D'Arcy Hamilton, of 239, Fawcett-road, Southsea, were elected hon. medical officers to the A.A.

The secretary gave a report of the proceedings of the ninth bi-monthly meeting, and stated that it was attended by three ladies and one gentleman, making, with himself, an assemblage of five.

Upon the proposition of Mr. Fredk. Morland, seconded by Mr. H. Athol Forde, it was agreed that the Agency should not provide artists for "walking on."

It was agreed that the offices should be closed on Whit-Monday next, but that a Council meeting should be held on Tuesday next.

The secretary, having reported that seven out of the twelve members of the Finance and General Purposes Committee had resigned, was instructed to issue a "Whip" for 5.30 next Tuesday to elect their successors.

The Suggestion Book was considered and an entry made. It was agreed that a question raised by Miss Rose Mathews in the Suggestion Book be referred to the Social Committee, who should be asked to try and arrange that none of their meetings should take place in the same week as the bi-monthly meeting. It was decided that the question be also referred to the Finance and General Purposes Committee and to the Commissioners' Committee for suggestions as to the method of increasing interest in the bi-monthly meetings.

The secretary suggested, and it was agreed, that the minutes of the Council and of the Finance and General Purposes Committees as drawn by him be submitted the following day after the meeting to someone appointed by the Council, who should strike out those portions which he considered could not be published.

The meeting lasted from 2.30 to 5.30 p.m.

The following resolution, passed at the last meeting of the Council, was omitted from the report of last week's proceedings in The Era: "That it be a by-law of Council proceedings, that no communication concerning any proceedings of the Council shall be made to the Press except by the secretary or by direct instruction of the Council."

Lucie Milner was nominated for election to the A.A., and six former members were reinstated.

The Finance and General Purposes Committee held a meeting on Monday last, when there were present Messrs. Acton Bond (chairman), J. Cooke Beresford, Lewis Casson, William Devereux, H. Athol Forde, and Chas. Cruikshanks (sec.).

Miss Rose Mathews attended, and there was a lengthy discussion as to the proposed library rules and also as to the general working of the scheme, and the names of Miss Rose Mathews, Miss Winifred Mayo, and Miss Sybil Ruskin, and Messrs. Laurence Irving, Lewis Casson, and Robert Castleton were submitted as members to be appointed as a Library Committee to be formed, and it was recommended that the title of the "Social and Library" Committee be altered to the "Social" Committee. It was also agreed that, instead of Rule 2—"The librarians should be invited to attend the Finance and General Purposes Committee to give information upon disbursements and all other matters concerning the library on being discussed"—as settled at the last meeting of this committee, the following be submitted to the Council for approval:—"The librarians shall attend the Finance and General Purposes Committee to give particulars as to proposed disbursements."

The consideration of the matinée performance was postponed.

The meeting of this committee lasted from 11.30 to 1.40.

A.A. REFORM PARTY.

Mr. Kenyon Musgrave presided at a meeting of the Reform Party of the Actors' Association at 3, Bedford-street, Strand, last Sunday, amongst those present were Misses Edith Wynne Matthison, Rose Mathews, Rosamund Mayne Young, Barbara Fenn, Clare Greet, Georgina Hamilton, Lilian Tweed, Joan Pereira, Marion J. Bird, Florence Harcourt, Vere Gerald, Nellie Clyde, Agnes Thomas, Evelyn Raymond, Winifred Mayo, Beatrice Chester, and Sydney Keith; Messrs. Lewis Casson, Alfred Harding, Arthur Applin, Charles F. Collings, Frederick Morland, Frederick Jacques, F. Topham, Stanley Roberts, Clive Currie, Athol Forde, W. Hubert, and C. C. Gibbon.

Mr. Frederick Morland proposed that a committee of twelve should be formed, consisting of six members of the Council and six non-members. He suggested also the election of two secretaries, one to be a councillor and the other a non-councillor.

It was suggested that one secretary would meet all requirements, and the Chairman submitted the following resolution, which was carried unanimously:—

That the members of the Reform Party be enrolled; that the committee should consist of twelve, six to be members of the Council and six to be non-members of the Council; that the committee be elected annually; and that one secretary be elected.

Mr. Lewis Casson proposed that the committee should draw up a programme, recommending that it should embrace (1) the exclusion of managers, (2) the minimum wage, (3) the financial reform of the Association, and (4) the publication of Council proceedings. He said the Association had depended too long upon the charity of the managers, and that if it could not be made self-supporting it was time it came to an end. Publicity should be given to all Council proceedings.

Mr. Charles F. Collings seconded Mr. Casson's motion.

A resolution that the Association should consider the possibility of establishing provincial centres, or organise and promote provincial meetings, was carried unanimously.

The following six non-Council members of the Committee were then elected:—Miss Rose Mathews, Miss Rosamund Mayne Young, Mr. F. Topham, Mr. Arthur Applin, Mr. Alfred Harding, and Mr. Roy Horniman.

Mr. Arthur Applin moved: "That this meeting protests with indignation against the recent bye-law passed by the Council with regard to communications to the Press." This was carried with one dissentient vote.

THE FUTURE OF THE A.A.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—May I venture in your columns to appeal to those 800 odd members of the A.A. who did not take the trouble to record their vote, or to express any opinion at the important meeting of May 6 last?

If the Actors' Association is allowed to collapse because of the apathy of its members, it will be a lasting disgrace to our profession. I am sorry the old Councillors who have worked so well for us in the past should have seen fit to resign at this crisis in our affairs, just because their views are the views of a minority.

Cannot we sink our personal feeling, and try and find some scheme which will meet the views of the old and new party in the A.A., and which would leave our Association still the representative body of our profession, and yet assure the actor a Council in which his point of view is considered, and his interests are protected? This can be done by two forms of membership and two councils—the General Council and the Actors' Council. I feel sure our actor-managers would meet us in every way possible. We must stand shoulder to shoulder, and work for the common good if we are to pull through. What a tremendous piece of irony it will be for actors to raise a memorial to Sir Henry Irving, and at the same time to let collapse the Association that he loved, and to whom he sent his last public message of goodwill.

Yours faithfully,
ITALIA CONTI.

A.A. SOCIAL.

Mr. George Bernard Shaw addressed a large gathering of members of the Actors' Association on the subject of "Economics for Actors" on Friday last week. Mr. Cecil Raleigh presided.

Mr. Shaw pointed out that actors had to consider not only the value of their talents, but the value of their parts. A man might be engaged for a part who was a perfectly presentable actor, but was not a special attraction, and his name in the cast would not make any difference in the number of people going to the theatre. They might pay that man a certain salary, and he would probably not be worth more to the management. On the other hand, there was the actor that the people went to see. If he brought another twenty pounds to the house it was worth the manager's while to give him an additional £19; but if that actor demanded £20, the manager would be perfectly justified in saying, "Well, if you want £20 there will be no advantage to me in engaging you." There was one unfortunate thing in their profession. In every other profession a man had a "rent" for some excellence that he enjoyed. In their profession a man might get a rent for his defects. Those who were acquainted with the music-hall profession knew that it was possible to get an exceptional salary because a man possessed something of the nature of a physical deformity. And sometimes an actor or an actress would do something on the stage that nobody else would do. It was desirable that the theatrical profession should be a very strongly organised one. There were no barriers at the doors of the profession as there were at the doors of other professions. No man could get into the Church unless he persuaded the bishop of his personal fitness; in the medical profession examinations were necessary, and a similar state of things ruled one's admission to the bar. In their profession, however, no examination was necessary, and some got into it because they were not qualified for any profession in the world. In France there was a society of authors and composers, and no one could have a play performed without the consent of that society. That made the French author a very much respected person. There was another side to the question. Most people would not do work unless they were paid for it. The theatrical profession was an exception to that. The only remedy lay in organising in such a way as to checkmate the unpaid actors, or amateurs. If the latter had real talent they would be paid. Fortunately, it was not possible to get a play performed in London unless there was some little talent on the part of some of the cast. If the members of a company playing in one of his (Mr. Shaw's) plays told him that there was a single member of the cast playing for nothing he would immediately withdraw his play. Authors should insist in their agreements with managers that no unpaid actors should be engaged to perform their plays. But actors and actresses should immediately organise their own profession. If an actor was a member of a union he could go to a manager and say, "Well, I am perfectly helpless. The rules of my profession will not permit me to do this." In saying that the actor would be speaking in an impersonal manner. There should be a definite agreement not only as to a minimum wage, but also as to hours of employment."

Mr. Cecil Raleigh, in proposing a vote of thanks to Mr. Shaw, urged the meeting to combine for their own protection. They should not be afraid of the term "trade union."

DEATH OF MR. HENRY DUNDAS.

We regret to record the death of Mr. Henry Dundas, manager of the Leicester Opera House, which occurred suddenly on Monday morning at his apartments, 1, Pelham-street, Leicester. Mr. Dundas, who was apparently in good health and the best of spirits, dined only a few hours before his death with Mr. Edmund Tearle, after which he took a short stroll before going home to supper. Seemingly, something which he took at this meal disagreed with him, for early on Monday morning he complained of feeling unwell, and was afterwards found dead in his bedroom.

Mr. Dundas, who had been manager of the Leicester Opera House ever since Messrs. Milton Bode and Edward Compton became proprietors of it, was well-known in the theatrical world, both as manager and actor. He commenced his career in the theatrical calling in 1878, in a small company, touring Devonshire and Cornwall, under the management of Mr. James Davis. He next entered on a stock season at Yarmouth, and then joined the late James Elphinstone at Douglas, Isle of Man. A season followed at the Queen's, Dublin, where he had the pleasure of meeting as brother actors J. B. Mulholland and Edward Sass. After this came a tour with Osmond Tearle, till that gentleman went to America and made his great success; a stock season at West Hartlepool, and two tours with Mr. John Dewhurst, playing juvenile business. He was then engaged by the late Wm. Sidney for the productions at the Court, Liverpool, under the Bainbridge management, after which he had several tours with Mr. John Coleman, playing juvenile lead in his répertoire. Mr. Dundas had several seasons with the late Andrew Melville at Swansea, Bristol, Cardiff, Newport, and Birmingham. He was engaged by Miss Sarah Thorne for lead at Margate, and managed some of that lady's pantomime tours, and he was then engaged by Mr. John Douglass to play lead and to stage-manage in the Standard drama Glad Tidings. About eighteen years ago he commenced his managerial career with some members of the profession, who subsequently became famous, including Miss Janet Achurch. They played a répertoire, and, fortunately, The New Magdalen formed one of the attractions. It was so successful that Mr. Dundas continued playing it for two years, himself enacting the rôle of Julian Gray, with which his name became identified in the provinces. Confusion being in the market, Mr. Dundas took the famous Vaudeville farcical comedy on tour, and was very successful as Mortimer Mumpleford. Later, he purchased Miss Fannie Leslie's production of Jack in the Box, and ran the play for over two years, playing Toroni, the Italian organ-grinder, a part which suited his robust style very well. Subsequently, Mr. Dundas took over the lease of the Reading theatre. During his management there Sir Augustus Harris sent Human Nature to the biscuit city, it being the end of the tour. The Drury Lane manager intended to let the play, but Mr. Dundas induced Harris to allow him to continue touring it. Mr. Dundas successfully toured the play for over nine years, himself taking the part of Captain Temple. In consequence of the success of this piece Mr. Dundas became closely associated with Sir Augustus Harris in connection with the touring of the Drury Lane dramas, A Life of Pleasure, The Derby Winner, Cheer, Boys, Cheer; also the Lane pantomime at the Court, Liverpool, and Theatre Royal, Birmingham. Thirteen years ago the Reading theatre was destroyed by fire, and as Mr. Dundas was unable to rebuild in consequence of the site being condemned, he purchased the playhouse at Leamington Spa, from which, for a time, he directed his speculations, and which was taken over by Messrs. Bode and Compton. In 1889 he produced a version of East Lynne, in which he appeared as Archibald Carlyle, with Miss Maud Elmore as Lady Isabel, many hundreds of times in London, suburban, and provincial theatres.

An inquest was held on Tuesday evening at Trinity Schools, Leicester, before the Borough Coroner (Mr. E. G. B. Fowler), Mr. Milton Bode, among others, being present. Dr. Dodd, who was called in to attend the deceased early on Monday morning, stated that an examination of the body showed that death was due to failure of the heart from a reflex of the pain in the stomach, the heart being weak and degenerated. The deceased had informed him that he had eaten a large amount of cucumber, and the doctor was of opinion that that was the cause of the pain. The jury returned a verdict of "Death from natural causes."

The funeral took place on Wednesday at Milverton Cemetery, Leamington, whither the body was conveyed from Leicester. The service was conducted by the Rev. H. B. Streatfield, vicar of St. Mark's, Milverton, and the chief mourners were Mrs. Dundas (widow) and the Misses Jessie and Elsie Dundas. Others present included Mr. and Mrs. Neame (Kent), sister and brother-in-law; Mr. C. E. Scutt (Hastings), formerly a manager at the Leamington Theatre; Mr. Harry Hunter (representing Messrs. Milton Bode and Edward Compton); and several members of the local theatre staff and friends of deceased. The coffin was of polished elm, with brass fittings, and bore the following inscription:—

Arthur Harrison Dundas,
Died May 13, 1907.
Aged 48 years.

Many beautiful wreaths were sent. Some of these were:—"In ever-loving memory, from your sorrowing wife," "In loving memory, from Jessie" (sister), "In memory of my dearest father, from Elsie," "In loving memory of dear father at peace" (Jessie, daughter); and from Mr. Milton Bode, Mr. Edward Compton, Mr. St. John Denton, the management and staff of the Theatre Royal, Leamington, the stage staff of the Royal Opera House, Mr. W. Brown, the staff and friends at Royal Opera House, and Mr. C. E. Scutt. The funeral arrangements were in the hands of Messrs. R. Morley and Sons, Leicester.

THE ACTORS' UNION.

LONDON.

Mr. Hamilton Deane presided over the weekly meeting of the Actors' Union, held on Tuesday afternoon at the Bedford Head Hotel. There were present Mr. Cecil Raleigh, Mr. Robson Paige, Mr. Rawson Buckley, Mr. Ruddle Brown, Mr. Arthur Bawtree, Miss Gladys Ffolliott, Miss Nellie Howitt, Mrs. Robson Paige, Mr. Harry Paulton, jun., Miss Joan Pereira, Miss Violet Sims, Miss Italia Conti, Mr. Edgar Wolseley, Miss Marion J. Bird, Miss Beatrice Lloyd, Mr. G. A. Kirby, Mr. Dudley Stuart, Mr. John Coghlan, Mr. Campbell Goldsmid, Mr. W. Tripp Edgar, Mr. Fred Bentley, Mr. Roy Barraclough, Mr. Alfred Bennett, Miss Mary Bessle, Miss Edith Chalmers, Mr. Geo. H. Child, Mr. Arthur Chisholm, Mr. Fred Clive, Mr. Richard Cowell, Miss Beatrice Chester, Miss Elsie Carew, Miss May Conrade, Miss Hylda Denison, Miss Mabel Durrant, Miss Lena Delphini, Mr. T. Arthur Ellis, Mr. Percy Everard, Miss Adelaide Gracey, Mr. Wm. Guilbert, Miss Louise Gourlay, Miss Vere Gerald, Mr. S. Hamilton, Mr. Grahame Herington, Miss Jennie Hardy, Mr. Albert Hayzell, Mr. Frederic Jacques, Mr. J. Carl Lyle, Mr. Hugh Mewburn, Mr. Edward Mervyn, Miss Bella Moody, Mr. H. P. Owen, Mr. Fred Prior, Mr. Gifforde Reynolds, Mr. Alfred Richards, Mr. Stanley Roberts, Mr. Dan F. Roe, Mr. Stanley Radcliffe, Mr. J. W. Ryder, Miss Ethel Russell, Miss Dot Scilby, Mr. W. E. Shine, Mr. Archie Selwyn, Mr. Robin Shields, Miss G. Trewman, Miss Violet Thorold, and Mr. Robert M. Taylor.

Mr. Deane, in opening the proceedings, said that the general working rules of the Union had been drawn up by a body of men who had considered the matter in every particular, and for a provisional arrangement he thought that the objects and the rules were very adequate. It was advisable as a body that they should not split or divide over small clauses that some of them did not agree with. If they agreed as to the general objects of the Union, they should stick to it. The two things they needed most at the moment were big names and half-crowns. If they secured the big people, many of the smaller people would soon come in. They should also put aside the question of individual good in favour of the general welfare. It was desirable that they should be in a position to deal with the small manager who paid salaries that would not be offered to an ironworker. They must demand a salary which was commensurate with an all-the-year-round working. The manager who paid decent salaries was their best friend, and he would recognise that they were his best friends when the Union was in proper working order. The Actors' Union would bring about a general improvement of affairs in the profession, and would eliminate the paying and unpaid amateur and the "rotten manager." It was a strong point that they had no managers in the Union, and now that they were on the road to success they should stick tightly together, hold on, and bring other people into the Union.

Miss Gladys Ffolliott said that the more people who joined the Union, the sooner would be the consummation of their wishes. She would point out that everybody who became a member would be assisted by old-age pension and provident funds. If any member died, his nearest relatives would benefit by the sixpenny levy on every member of the Union. They had all got to get old, and it was very nice to think that they would be able to draw upon a provident fund which they themselves had assisted to accumulate. On another point, if the managers were compelled by the Union to pay a decent wage, the "slum" manager would disappear, and the better managers would benefit by the action of the Union. She could assure them that the provisional committee was determined that the thing should now go through.

Mr. Robson Paige made eulogistic references to what Mr. Deane had done for the Union in bringing in new members in the provinces. Mr. Deane would be holding another meeting at Liverpool next week, and it is hoped that everybody who could would attend. He trusted they would stick together, as the committee had done throughout.

Mr. Campbell Goldsmid remarked that one advantage to be gained by joining the Union would be the raising of their own self-respect. There were young women who all the year round cleaned doorsteps, and at Christmastime appeared in pantomime, who called themselves actresses whenever they got into disgrace. The Union would put a stop to that kind of thing by deciding who was and who was not an actress.

Mr. Oswald Marshall here asked for a couple of volunteers to act as scrutineers of the voting papers, and to meet the solicitor of the Union on Tuesday next. Messrs. Fredk. Prior and Fredk. Jacques offered their services.

Mr. Ruddle Brown stated that he desired to explain what he had on several previous occasions complained about as to the conduct of a certain class of manager. The manager he had referred to was the person who started on a capital of £20 or £30, and who took the first opportunity of pouncing down upon and underselling another manager. The Union would be the means of eliminating this class of individual.

Mr. Cecil Raleigh, after paying a high compliment to Mr. Hamilton Deane for his work in connection with the Actors' Union, said that it was desirable they should make up their minds to what precisely that Union was to be. He understood that an actor was one who earned his living in a licensed theatre. If during the time he was "resting" he chose to be a dentist that was his affair. Suppose that Mr. John le Hay gave a ventriloquial entertainment in a music hall, the Actors' Union could not interfere between him and his manager should any dispute arise. He considered that the Variety Artists' Federation was a wonderful organisation. As to the Actors' Association, the actor-managers were going out at one end and sketch-managers were coming in at the other. It was to be hoped that there would be some combination between the Association and the Union. He would now explain to them his provident scheme. It was this: Wherever a non-copyright play was performed, the manager should pay a fee to a fund which would keep actors in their old age. Putting the matter at the very low rate of 1 per cent., and assuming the receipts were £100 a week, that would mean a contribution to the fund of £1. When they were strong enough, they should insist that every theatre that was open in the United Kingdom should pay £1 a week as a contribution to the Actors' Provident Fund. At a low estimate there would be 250 theatres in the United Kingdom, who would each send £1 a week to the fund. That in the aggregate would mean £10,000 a year to give away in pensions to their deserving poor.

Miss Italia Conti said the Actors' Association gave the actors every opportunity of protecting their interests, if only they would avail themselves of it. The Association could and should be governed by the majority of its members, but in the past it had been governed by the minority. If it had not done in the past everything that the actor could have wished done it was the members' fault, for they had been apathetic. The A.A. had lasted for sixteen years. When the Actors' Union had lasted for that period it would be at liberty to throw stones. The effect of the Actors' Union had been to stir up an interest in the Association among its members. For the two bodies to exist apart meant that they both would be weak. The Reform Party meant work, and if their reforms were carried they—the Reform Party—and the Union would be working to an extent to the same end. Why could they not come together? She asked the meeting to remember that the Association and the Union were both working for the benefit of their calling.

Mr. Arthur Bawtree thought that much good would result if some members of the Reform Party of the Association would meet some members of the Committee of the Actors' Union and discuss how some agreement or combination of interests could be arrived at.

Votes of thanks to Mr. Deane for presiding and to Mr. Raleigh concluded the proceedings. Several new members joined after the meeting.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—I should like it clearly understood that the small managers I referred to in my remarks at the Actors' Union meeting at Liverpool were gentlemen who start a company with £10 or £20 and a back-cloth or two and a few broken flats, and drag unfortunate artists about the country (this week, T. R., Slusham-on-Mud; next, "T. R., Off-the-Map"), on the chance of getting decent dates by under-selling better managers. His maximum salary is possibly £2.

I should like to see an Actors' Union composed of actors and actresses, and no actor-managers; a Touring Managers' Association, composed of touring managers only; and a Local Managers' Association composed of local managers, then we could all pull together for the good of the public. Let us have the survival of the fittest, and not the survival of the cheapest.—Yours faithfully,
W. RUDDLE BROWN.

A PLAYHOUSE MATINÉE.

A matinée performance in aid of the endowment of a cot at the Great Ormond-street Hospital for Children was given at the Playhouse on Thursday. Every seat in the house was sold, the programme consisting of many attractive and well-varied items. It opened with Mr. Keble Howard's delightful little play, "Compromising Martha," in which Miss Florence Hayden gave her very natural and humorous portrayal of the old village dame, who is much too artful for the curate and his pretty sweetheart, characters that were very brightly played by Mr. E. W. Tarver and Miss Dagmar Wiehe, Miss Lydia Rachel again successfully appearing as the friendly neighbour. Then, as Miss Phyllis Dare had not arrived, her sister, Miss Zena Dare, appeared in her place, and sang with charming effect Miss Carrie Moore's song from The Blue Moon. However, before the final fall of the curtain Miss Phyllis Dare, who had travelled all the way from Exeter to attend the matinée, made her appearance, and gave a delightful rendering of "To-morrow," from The Belle of Mayfair. Miss Vera Le Fleming, who is only six years of age, is well described as "the wonder child." She sang "The gay tom-tit," followed by a pretty dance, and she also gave a remarkably clever imitation of Miss Camille Clifford in "Why do they call me a Gibson Girl?" Little Miss Vera met with a big reception. François Coppée's one-act play, Le Passant, first produced in 1869, was excellently acted by Miss Rita Jolivet as Sylvia and Miss Aimée Lowther as Zanetto. Miss Kitty Cheatham, who is new to London audiences, did well in a selection of children and negro songs; and then came Mr. Harry Lauder, in his well-known impersonation of "The saftest o' the family"; the audience thoroughly enjoyed the Scotch comedian's humour, and he was recalled again and again. A notable feature of the afternoon's programme was the Screen Scene from The School for Scandal, Mr. Cyril Maude repeating his clever portrayal of Sir Peter and Miss Winifred Emery delighting the house by her artistic embodiment of Lady Teazle. Mr. Ben Webster as Joseph and Mr. Fred Terry as Charles were also excellent, both having caught the true spirit of the fine old comedy. Miss Margaret Cooper, who was received with much applause, contributed a couple of her well-rendered ditties, and the performance concluded with Mr. E. F. Benson's rather weird play, The Friend in the Garden, which was produced at the Savoy Theatre on March 6, 1906. Mr. Dennis Eadie acted with earnestness and sincerity the part of Jack, and Mr. Athol Stuart was good as Lord Accrington. The friend, "Death," was impressively played by Miss Gertrude Kingston, and Miss Irene Rooke was a vivacious Lady Accrington.

"WHEN KNIGHTS WERE BOLDER."

Lady Lavinia Mostyn .....Miss Agnes Fraser
Sir Roland Stone .....Mr. Harry Scott
Reuben Pryer .....Mr. M. R. Morand

In this bright, amusing musical fantasy the writers have combined the humour of the modern, twentieth century policeman with the charm and picturesqueness of a hundred years ago. Into the haunted chamber of an old manor house comes at midnight a modern policeman, in search of a gang of coiners. In the room are two large, ancient oil-paintings, one of a Lady Lavinia and the other of Sir Roland Stone. Midnight chimes, and the lady walks out of her picture and converses freely with the policeman. She tells him of her love for Sir Roland—she relates the incident of their unsuccessful attempt to elope, she describes her knight as being cast in a noble "mould," and as a man of "metal," and Reuben Pryer, the policeman, feels sure he is on the track of the coiners. Sir Roland now steps out of the other picture, and, finding the policeman dancing a minuet with Lady Lavinia, challenges him to a duel with a pair of huge pistols. The policeman, terribly frightened, makes all kinds of excuses to avoid the encounter, and to his appeal for help there is no response from his companions outside, and he is reluctantly compelled to proceed with the duel. The fatal shots are about to be fired, when one o'clock strikes—the hour the lovers are compelled to return to their frames and canvas. Reuben Pryer now realises to his horror that he has been talking to a couple of ghosts, and his companions rush in to find him half-fainting from fright at his unusual experience. The music is both pretty and appropriate. The introduction cleverly suggests the weird surroundings, the policeman has a very amusing song, "Little Boy Blue," and the duet between Lady Lavinia and Reuben is delightfully pretty, quaint, and novel. Miss Agnes Fraser, very graceful and charming, was an ideal Lady Lavinia, singing and acting in a truly delightful manner. Too much praise cannot be given to Mr. M. R. Morand for his genuinely funny and clever work as Reuben Pryer; while Mr. Harry Scott was a very appropriate and effective Sir Roland Stone.

GOLFING ON TOUR.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—Might I suggest, through the medium of your columns, that actors on tour, who are members of recognised golf clubs, should be allowed to play at a reduced green fee at all clubs? A fee of say 2s. 6d. a day for a single round becomes very expensive when one is on tour for fourteen or twenty weeks. It should be remembered that actors usually play from eleven to two, when the courses are not crowded, and I feel sure that if the matter were taken up by some leading manager, secretaries of all golf clubs would willingly co-operate, and a real benefit would accrue to the golfer on tour.—Yours faithfully,
WYN WRAYER.

Grand Theatre, Swansea, May 14, 1907.

"The Era" can be obtained at the principal bookstalls throughout the provinces.

THEATRICAL GOSSIP.

MISS ELLEN TERRY returned from New York on Monday, and was met on her arrival at Tilbury by a crowd of admirers, who greeted her with affectionate congratulations upon her recent marriage. From all parts of the dock officials, clerks, and labourers gathered to catch a glimpse of the actress, and a lady handed a beautiful bouquet through the window of the railway compartment just before the train started. Miss Terry will not be seen again on the stage until the autumn, when she will tour the provinces. She is now engaged in writing her autobiography, which may be expected to appear about a month hence. Mr. Carew, it is understood, will come to England in about three weeks, and will spend the summer vacation with his wife in the country until she goes on tour.

MISS TERRY is delighted with the results of her tour, and expresses her satisfaction at the success attained by her daughter, Miss Ailsa Craig, who has had the unique distinction, for a woman, of being the stage-manager all through the tour. The popular actress is of opinion that a new life for women is thus opened up. Miss Terry is credited with a witty observation at a reception in New York, when she referred to the innumerable women who asked her to help them to get on the stage. "The fact is," she said, "every woman under thirty believes she is an actress, and every actress believes she is under thirty."

MR. GEORGE ALEXANDER has been able to secure for his brief autumn tour, the services of Miss Irene Vanbrugh, who will play her original part in Mr. Pinero's piece, His House in Order. Later on Miss Vanbrugh will appear at the St. James's in the leading part of The Thief as Mr. Cosmo Gordon Lennox's version of Henry Bernstein's drama, Le Voleur, is named. The part, it may be of interest to add, was originally sustained in Paris by Madame Simone le Bargy.

THE net proceeds of the matinée at Drury Lane Theatre, given recently in aid of the Lord Mayor's Cripples' Fund, reached the generous total of £687 5s. 5d. Miss Annie Hughes has also given a donation of five guineas to the Fund, which has benefited to no inconsiderable extent by the efforts of members of the profession.

THE Actors' Benevolent Fund continues to derive considerable benefit through the demand of the public for the autographs of our actors and actresses. The secretary is daily receiving postal orders from Sir Charles Wyndham, Mr. Beerbohm Tree, Mr. George Alexander, and Miss Mary Moore, which have been sent to the Fund, in acknowledgment of their autographs. Mr. C. H. Workman has forwarded £2 5s., Mr. Frederick Wright 4s. 6d., and Mr. Rutland Barrington 3s. 6d. Mr. Arthur Lawrence has forwarded 20s. from the fines imposed at the Royal Court Theatre, Liverpool, during the run of the pantomime. A further sum of £1 17s., collected for the Fund in the box at the Camden Theatre, has been sent by Mr. Wilfred Stanford.

MR. BEERBOHM TREE will reduce the size of the proscenium of His Majesty's when A Woman of No Importance is revived on Wednesday. The alteration, by which the opening is decreased 6ft. in width and 7ft. in height, is effected at the expense of the gallery, which, as on a former occasion, will be entirely shut off, but the line of sight in the other parts of the house is in no way affected, a clear view of the stage being secured to all.

MR. SEYMOUR HICKS and Miss Ellaline Terriss return to the Aldwych in September, when they will be seen in a new piece from the pen of Mr. Hicks himself, the music being supplied by Mr. Frank Tours. The action takes place entirely in Scotland. Mr. Hicks plays the part of a young Scottish soldier. Miss Ellaline Terriss will have the rôle of a high-spirited American girl, and Miss Zena Dare, Miss Rosina Filippi, Miss Sydney Fairbrother, and Miss Barbara Deane will also be in the cast.

MR. CYRIL MAUDE is preparing an attractive programme for the annual fête in connection with the Actors' Orphanage Fund, of which he is president. The fête will be held on Friday, July 5, in the gardens of the Royal Military Hospital, Chelsea, and several distinct novelties are promised. The new and original play which invariably forms a feature of the entertainment is to be written in collaboration by Alfred Sutro and Robert Marshall.

THE ERA Challenge Shield is now on view at The Era offices. The shield, which will be again competed for at the approaching theatrical sports at Stamford Bridge, was presented by the proprietors of The Era, Ltd., to the National Association of Theatrical Employees as a trophy in perpetuity for the "tug-of-war" competition at their Annual Sports. It will be remembered that the redoubtable team from the Empire, Dublin, were the winners last year. The team was composed of D. Griffin, M. White, R. McKeon, C. Griffin, E. Buckley, and J. White (coach). May the best team win this year.

THE Managers' Club was quick to seize the opportunity of congratulating their Majesties of Spain on the birth of an heir, and on receipt of the joyful news, despatched the following telegram:—"May your Majesty be pleased to accept the congratulations of the Managers' Club, Savoy Mansions, London." To this felicitous message came the answer: "Theatrical Managers' Club, Savoy Mansions, London. Thanks from his Majesty. Andino."

MR. E. S. WILLARD will be the guest of the Olympian Dramatic Club of Oxford University at the annual dinner on Monday next, and will respond to the toast of the drama. Few members of the profession equal Mr. Willard in fluency of speech, and his address should prove of engrossing interest to all students of the drama.

THE last performance of The Judgment of Pharaoh at the Scala Theatre took place on Friday evening, Dr. Distin-Maddick not feeling disposed to continue the run in view of the great expense of the production.

"IOLANTHE" will be revived at the Savoy on Tuesday, June 11. The cast will consist of Messrs. C. H. Workman, Frank Wilson, Harold Wilde, Overton Moyle, and H. A. Lytton; and Misses Louie Rene, Jessie Rose, Violette Londa, Beatrice Meredith, Violet Frampton, and Clara Dow.

MR. LEWIS WALLER and Miss Lily Hanbury are among a number of well-known artists who have promised their services for a concert in aid of the poor parish of St. George-in-the-East, to be held at the residence of Mrs. Henry Simmons, Russell-square, W.C., on Thursday afternoon, May 30.

MR. CHARLES FROHMAN inaugurated his system of free rides to the theatre on Wednesday, when a number of Balham playgoers were conveyed by motor-bus to the Hicks Theatre, to witness the performance of Brewster's Millions. The passengers had booked seats in advance for the theatre, and this qualification entitled the holders to be taken free of charge to the theatre and home again. On Thursday night the suburb of Wood Green was similarly favoured, and last evening the theatre 'bus was to tour in the neighbourhood of Lewisham.

THE usual London weekly meeting of the Actors' Union will be held at the Bedford Head Hotel, Maiden-lane, at 2.30, on Tuesday. A meeting, arranged by Mr. J. Telly Dillsen, will be held at Birmingham during next week; and another will take place at the Court, Liverpool, on Friday next, at 1.30, with Mr. Hamilton Deane in the chair.

MESSRS ERNEST STEVENS and R. C. Buchanan have availed themselves of the option acquired by them some time ago to purchase from Howard and Wyndham, Ltd., six provincial theatres for the sum of £160,000, and the following houses now accordingly come under their control:—The King's, the Royal, and the Royalty, Glasgow; the Lyceum and the Theatre Royal, Edinburgh; the Tyne, Newcastle-on-Tyne. Mr. Stevens, who is the managing-director of the Marlborough Theatre, Holloway, is also interested in several Scottish theatres, and the Shakespeare, Liverpool; while Mr. Buchanan already controls theatres at Glasgow, Edinburgh, and Sunderland.

THE Theatrical Rowing Clubs hold their annual regatta at Putney on Sunday, June 9. The president of the regatta is Mr. Cyril Maude, and many eminent actors figure among the list of patrons. The numerous events are invariably well contested, and given propitious weather, an interesting day's sport should be assured.

MRS. HENRY DUNDAS, widow of the late much-lamented Henry Dundas, was the daughter of the late Miss Sarah Thorne, and played under the stage-name of Bessie Macknight. Her father was editor of the Belfast Northern Whig, and a personal friend of the late Lord Dufferin, and his "Life of Burke" and "Ulster As It Is" brought him into direct contact with all the great statesmen of the day. Mr. and Mrs. Dundas's eldest daughter has taken the stage name of Miss Jessica Thorne, and has just concluded a tour with Mr. and Mrs. Kendal, playing successfully as Sophia Blossom in The Elder Miss Blossom. She is re-engaged for the autumn; and her younger sister, Miss Elsie Dundas, will shortly make her début under the banner of Mr. William Greet.

MRS. DUNDAS desires to tender heartfelt thanks on behalf of herself and daughters for the kind sympathy shown them in the painfully sudden death of her husband, Mr. Henry Dundas, manager of the Opera House, Leicester. She is particularly grateful for the kindly sympathy shown by Mr. Milton Bode, and his unwearying attention in the time of her anxiety and distress. Mr. Dundas was quietly interred in the beautiful cemetry at Milverton, Leamington, on Wednesday afternoon. Last week's Era contained an announcement of a proposed benefit to Mr. Henry Dundas, of the Opera House, Leicester, but within a few hours of its appearance the inexorable hand of Death caused its abandonment. A sad, but striking coincidence is the fact that a benefit arranged for the late Miss Sarah Thorne, his mother-in-law, was cancelled for the same reason.

MR. CLAUDE KING writes under date April 11, from the Theatre Royal, Calcutta:—"One very gratifying feature in connection with a most bewilderingly-interesting tour is the fact that we have so far beaten all records for a theatrical company travelling east at Bombay, Rangoon, Hong Kong, Shanghai, and Tientsin. The audiences here are practically 'West End,' for in spite of the great distance there are a vast number who go home every year or two years, so that many of the plays we are doing are familiar to a lot of them. Raffles is our most successful piece, with His House in Order a very good second, and we change the bill every night, which makes pretty hard work of it."

MR. AUSTIN MELFORD will make his fifth appearance in a separate part at Drury Lane this evening, when he takes up the rôle of an Indian warrior in The Last of His Race. In his previous assumptions at the National Theatre Mr. Melford has achieved some of the most striking successes of his career.

MR. ROBERT GANTHONY has succeeded in amusing French audiences in their own language in Paris this month. Similar success attended his efforts in New York and Montreal, where the popular entertainer's talents were widely appreciated.

THE stage-pictures in The Girls of Gottenberg at the Gaiety Theatre are a feast for the eye. The set for the second act is a delightful reproduction of the market-place of an old-fashioned German town, and Messrs. Joseph and Phil Harker have certainly excelled themselves in this scene, which, besides being most picturesque and artistic, bears the stamp of absolute reality. The same may be said of the Gardens of the Red Hen Inn, near Gottenberg, with its finely-painted landscape of river and hill. Mr. Alfred Terraine, too, has furnished an agreeable picture of the gateway of the Rottenberg Barracks. The designs for the dresses have been freely idealised from German national costumes, the result being exquisitely pretty, without any garish excess of colour. There is, however, no want of brilliancy in the stage pictures, the uniforms of the college girls, with their wealth of gold lace against a deep rich green, striking a very effective note.

MR. CECIL BROOKING, who has played Stenson in The Morals of Marcus since his return from South Africa, is under contract for the autumn season with Mr. Charles Frohman. Mr. Brooking, however, is a firm believer in the adage, "the actor should act as often as he can," and is eager for work in the interim.

BEFORE the present season of the Jewish Operatic and Dramatic Company terminates at the Pavilion Theatre, Mile End, the management are according a well-deserved benefit on May 23 to Mr. and Mme. Charles Natansohn in recognition of the strenuous and artistic work these well-known Yiddish histrions have put in during their engagement. For this occasion Mr. and Mme. Natansohn will present an entirely new play by Zolotarevsky entitled The Oath in the Temple.

MR. MAYOR-COOKE, who has just concluded his 230th performance of Ulric of Ravensberg in Her Love Against the World, has been re-engaged by Messrs. Hallatt and Howard for the same part on their autumn tour.

MISS JULIE TEMPLE, who is so well known for her clever interpretation of Bridget, the Irish cook, in The Fatal Wedding, concludes on May 26 at Dover her fourth engagement, when the tour ends. Miss Temple has been successfully identified with the late Rosina Brandram parts.

MR. LESLIE HEATHERINGTON, of Mr. Chas. Macdona's Gay Parisienne company, contested 800 up at billiards with Mr. W. J. Randall, of Luton, at the Grafton Hotel, Bedford, on Saturday. After an interesting game and an exciting finish Mr. Randall was declared the winner by 26. The highest breaks were a 56 by Mr. Randall and a 50 by his opponent. Billiards was followed by a snooker pool match, the best of five sets being Mr. Leslie Heatherington, who won by three to two.

MR. WILLIAM MACLAREN and Miss Lily C. Bandmann will produce "in front" of Claudian, at the Prince's Theatre, Bristol, on Friday, a one-act play by Miss Dorothea Wilson Barrett (daughter of the late Wilson Barrett), entitled Heber Sayell, appearing themselves in the leading parts.

MR. MARTIN HARVEY terminated his spring tour last week at Portsmouth, and has been spending the major part of this week in the reading-room of the British Museum searching out matter appertaining to his new play, Great Possessions, the period of which is A.D. 31. The piece will be produced on an elaborate scale during Mr. Harvey's forthcoming season at the Adelphi.

THE production at the Haymarket of Mr. Michael Morton's adaptation, entitled My Wife, of MM. Gavault and Charnay's three-act comedy, Mlle. Josette, Ma Femme, has been fixed for Tuesday, the 28th inst. The cast will comprise Messrs. Aubrey Smith, A. E. Matthews, E. W. Tarver, Fred Lewis, H. de Lange, Athol Stewart, P. Clark, Holman Clark, P. Curwin, Philip Knox, Marsh Allen, and J. R. Glass, and Misses Marie Löhr, Millie Legarde, Marcelle Chevalier, J. Chatwyn, and Adelaide Burt. An interesting curtain-raiser will be provided in Martha Plays the Fairy, a sequel to Compromising Martha, the comedietta by Keble Howard, which has already enjoyed a prolonged run at the Haymarket.

MISS GLADYS ARCHBUTT, at Clerkenwell County Court on Monday, sued the Grand Theatre, Islington (1905) (Limited), for £34 5s. 4d., as damages for alleged breach of contract. A letter from Messrs. Walter and Fred Melville, the present lessees and managers of the Grand Theatre, stated: "The enclosed summons has been left on these premises, and does not concern us. We are unaware of the whereabouts of the late Grand Theatre, Islington (Limited). The managing-director of the company may be found at the Lyric Theatre, Hammersmith." Plaintiff, replying to her counsel, said she entered into a contract with Mr. James, on behalf of the defendant company, as principal girl at Terry's at a salary of £8 per week for six weeks from December 26, 1906. She had been paid £16 14s. 8d., but defendants declined to fulfil the remainder of the contract. Judgment was given for the amount claimed, with costs.

THE Broadway Theatre, New Cross, is the latest to come under the two-houses-a-night system, and on Monday a month's experiment will be started with The Red Coat, which will be presented twice every evening. The following week will be devoted to Saved from the Sea, and other strong dramatic attractions are announced. Half the usual prices to all parts of the house will prevail.

MR. FRED BULMER has secured the sole rights for Great Britain and Ireland of that well-known drama From Scotland Yard, by the late Frank Bateman and John Douglas. Mr. Bulmer sends out the play with a strong company next autumn, introducing several new features, and bringing the piece up to date in every respect. The drama will be elaborately mounted, and a new plant of printing will be struck off, &c. From Scotland Yard had a most successful run when toured by the late Mr. Bateman, and equal prosperity may be anticipated for Mr. Bulmer's venture with the original "Yard" drama.

MR. WILLIAM LOCKHART, for so many years associated with The Sign of the Cross, A Message from Mars, and Sunday, has been engaged by Mr. James Welch for his No. 1 tour of When Knights Were Bold.

MR. PETER DAVEY, the energetic manager of the County Theatre, Kingston, has made arrangements by which Mr. Arthur Williams and Mr. Fred Emney, supported by a company including Mr. Lytton Grey, Miss Emily Spiller, Miss Emily Taylor, Miss Sylvia Morris, Mr. Franklyn Graham, Mr. Charlie Clarke, and Mr. Wilson Blake will appear next week at Kingston in Milky White, Funnibone's Fix, and other one-act pieces. The famous artists mentioned thus make their first appearance on the Kingston boards in a programme eminently suited to the theatrical requirements of the season and the locality. The opening piece each evening will be a charming little one-act drama, with music, A Burmese Idol, written and composed by Mr. Leslie Stiles, in which Mr. Lytton Grey will play the part of a shipwrecked British tar.

MR. GORDON BAILEY and Miss Lucy Wilson have acquired from Miss Ina Leon Cassilis a romantic highwayman play, which they will produce on June 3 at the Royal County Theatre, Kingston-on-Thames. Miss Wilson and Mr. Bailey will create the leading parts.

THE Grand Theatre, Swansea, which is leased and managed by Messrs. Brooks and Woodbridge, will, we understand, at the end of the year pass into the sole managership of Mr. E. Oswald Brooks, Mr. J. J. W. Woodbridge having sold his share in the theatre to Mr. Brooks as from Dec. 18 next. Mr. Brooks is arranging a further ten years' lease of the building.

AT the New Theatre, Cambridge, on the 10th inst., two new plays entitled An Old Master and Sister Monica, by Betty Brandon, were produced for copyright purposes.

MR. J. BANNISTER HOWARD'S second successful spring season at the Crystal Palace Theatre will terminate at the end of next week, during which, by arrangement with Mr. Arthur Collins, the children from Drury Lane will perform the pantomime, The Forte Thieves. On Thursday Mrs. Patrick Campbell and company will give a special flying matinée of Magda. During the summer months the directors of the Crystal Palace have again arranged with Mr. Howard to provide the Café Chantant, which will this year be held in the North Tower Gardens, twice daily, commencing on May 27.

"THE BELLE OF MAYFAIR" continues her triumphal progress throughout the States, and one of the foremost organs of Cleveland, Ohio, the Plain Dealer, eulogises it thus: "For real music-lovers its melodies and choruses are a delight from beginning to end. It is worthy of Leslie Stuart, and the libretto is full of fine workmanship. The whole work is one, long, good-natured medley of music and humour and song, with continual variety, and good features enough to supply half-a-dozen ordinary operas. This is the sort of piece that fills the boxes and crowds the pit to the doors. The whole show leaves a pleasant taste in the mouth, and in the mind the memory of tripping melodies and cheerful choruses. There is no disagreeable 'hangover.' The Belle of Mayfair is a riot of song."

AT the Royal Artillery Theatre, Woolwich, on Whit Monday, Mrs. Ann Hughes presents the new comic opera The Young Lieutenant, by Herbert Dawson, A. F. Allen Tower, and Robert A. Smith. The story relates to the time of Nelson, and one of the chief scenic effects is a complete representation of one of Nelson's line of battleships. The opera is excellently cast, and the voices for the large chorus have been carefully selected. The play goes on tour at once.

IN the Court of Chancery on Thursday, on behalf of the Greet Theatrical Company, an injunction was granted, until trial or further order, to restrain the proprietor of a portable travelling theatre, named Mr. Landon, from performing The Sign of the Cross. The defendant did not appear, and counsel stated that he had written from Durham saying he was very sorry, but as they were hard up they wanted something to start with. His lordship said he thought as it was intended to perform the piece on two nights only, a perpetual injunction was out of the question.

THE question of the copyright in the play East Lynne came up in the Edinburgh Court of Session on Thursday, when an action was brought by Mr. John Pitt Hardacre against the Metropole Theatre, Glasgow, Ltd. Mr. Hardacre complained that the defenders had produced the play without his permission, and asked for £250 damages and an injunction. He stated that in 1866 John Coleman Chute wrote a dramatic version of Mrs. Henry Wood's novel, for which he invented the character of a comic policeman named Bullock, and assigned the rights of the play to the plaintiff. In May last, however, it was stated, a version of East Lynne was produced at the Metropole, Glasgow, also with a comic policeman.

ASKED what evidence he had that the part of Bullock as claimed by him now was that played in 1866, the witness said that at a trial in London on the same question all the antediluvian actors in creation were raked up, and the thing was proved there. For the defence, Mr. Arthur Jefferson, the managing director of the Metropole, said there were innumerable versions of the play, in which a comic policeman always occupied a prominent part. Mr. Robert C. Buchanan said he knew many versions, and had played in half a dozen. Stage policemen all spoke of cooks, and asserted that their life was not a happy one. The case was adjourned.

ON May 16, 1867, there came to London a youth of 15 with his 'cello under his arms and the princely fortune of £3. His resources were soon exhausted, and after wandering about London trying to get engagements he was at length obliged to play in the streets, where he was discovered by the late Sir Michael Costa, who installed him as one of the 'celloists at Covent Garden. From that time Auguste Van Biene has never looked back, and last Thursday, the occasion of his birthday, he completed exactly forty years, domicile in England. Mr. Van Biene is now known all over the world as the actor-musician, and has played "The Broken Melody" for nearly 5000 nights. We offer the celebrated performer our hearty felicitations.

MEMBERS of the profession playing in or near Newcastle, we are informed, can have an excellent round on Town Moor links, about five minutes' electric tram ride from all the theatres. The course consists of eighteen holes, and nine holes links for ladies, and is free to all.

THE production by the Pioneers of two new plays is fixed for Sunday, May 26, at the Imperial. The programme will open with A Man's Foes, a play in one act, by Miss Diana Cholmondeley, with Mr. Edmund Gurney, Miss Clare Greet, Miss Nora Lancaster, and Mr. Athol Stewart in the cast. The second novelty will be Clothes and the Woman, a light comedy in three acts, by George Paston, the cast of which will comprise Misses Wynne Matthison, Darragh, Muriel Ashwynne, Emmerson, Florence Haydon, Kate Harwood, and Irene Edwards; and Messrs. Trevor Lowe, Reginald Eyre, Charles Maude, Wilfred Draycott, and Donald Calthorp.

FINDING the combined duties of general-manager and secretary of such an onerous nature, Mr. J. H. Cozens has resigned his position as general-manager of the Crystal Palace, and has been appointed business-manager and secretary. The post of general-manager has been given to Mr. George O. Starr, who has had an extensive experience in organising and successfully carrying out great shows and exhibitions all over the world. It is understood that a working arrangement has been arrived at by which through trams will be run from Croydon to the Crystal Palace and Penge. The long-needed improvement in the service of trains between Beckenham and the Crystal Palace on the South-Eastern and Chatham Railway has been made, and there are also rumours of a new motor-bus service and an extension of tubes, which augurs well for the future success of the historic building at Sydenham.

MR. FREDERICK HARRISON has concluded arrangements to produce in due course, in conjunction with Mr. Louis Calvert, Mr. David Belasco's play, Sweet Kitty Bellairs, adapted from Captain and Mrs. Egerton Castle's popular novel. A version of the novel by the authors themselves, it may be remembered, was produced at the charity matinée at the Playhouse on April 30, under the title of Grey Domino. Among Mr. Harrison's other possessions, recently acquired, is that of an adaptation by Jerome K. Jerome, of Jules Lemaitre's piece, La Massière, the plot of which deals with the rivalry of a father and son for the affection of a young girl—a subject that is treated with so much delicacy that the most sensitive scruples are untouched.

MISS NINA CARLTON has been engaged by Mr. J. A. E. Malone to play Mai Yai in See-See in the autumn.—Miss Grace Lester is re-engaged by Mr. Frederick Melville to create the part of Mary Dawson in his new play, at the Terriss Theatre, on Monday next.

MR. BLAKE ADAMS finishes on June 3 his fourth tour as Captain James Barley in Beauty and the Barge—two under Mr. Cyril Maude's management, and two under Mr. Arthur Hardy. Mr. Adams has already played the part 530 times.

MR. CHARLES STEUART'S company, in The Little Stranger, is to be the Whitsuntide attraction at the Camden Theatre. The farce will be preceded by Citizen Marat, a one-act play by Alice Clayton Greene, originally produced at the Grand, Fulham, in the April of 1904. A strong company has been engaged for the curtain-raiser, the principal characters being played by Miss Frances Dillon, Mr. George E. Bellamy, Mr. H. Asheton Tonge, and Mr. Edwin H. Wynne.

THE Queen's Theatre, Liverpool, will be re-opened on August Bank Holiday, when it is proposed to present first-class drama at popular prices. Mr. Fred Granville, a former proprietor of the place, and now lessee of the Royal, Hyde, and the Grand, West Hartlepool, will be at the head of affairs.

THE British Empire Shakespeare Society will give during this month three dramatic readings of Macbeth, under the direction of Mr. Acton Bond, in connection with the educational section of the society. The first will be given at Wycombe House School, Brondesbury, on the 23rd inst., the second at Graham-street High School, S.W., on the 27th, and the third at Holy Trinity Schools, Kentish Town, on the 30th.

AT the New Theatre Royal, Loughborough, on the 1st inst., a farewell benefit was given Mr. Lindsey Edwards, the acting-manager, who is leaving Loughborough for Long Eaton, where he opens his new theatre in September.

IN the Court of Bankruptcy on Monday the first meeting of creditors was held before the official receiver, in the case of Mr. S. T. T. James, theatrical manager. The debtor stated that his insolvency was due to depreciation in the value of leasehold and freehold property in which he had invested at the East End and suburbs, where houses had dropped in value to the extent of 50 per cent. He estimated that he had derived an income of about £400 per annum from the management of theatres, and in touring pantomimes. The statement of affairs showed liabilities £4778, and no available assets. The matter was left in the official receiver's hands.

THE close of the Shakespeare Festival at Stratford-on-Avon was marked by extraordinary scenes of enthusiasm on Saturday. The final performance in the Memorial Theatre was The Merry Wives of Windsor. Hundreds of persons were unable to obtain admission, and at the end over 50 bouquets, baskets of flowers, &c., were presented to the performers, who had assembled on the stage, Mrs. Benson being quite overwhelmed with her floral load. Mr. Flower, chairman of the Shakespeare Memorial Association, thanked Mr. and Mrs. Benson and company and the distinguished London artists who had given their services at this year's commemoration.

MR. BENSON, who was enthusiastically greeted, said it was impossible suitably to acknowledge the great compliment—the greatest compliment that could possibly be paid to any actor—which had been given him, apd to thank them for endorsing Mr. Flower's all too-flattering remarks. He was tempted, in the words of Coriolanus, to say, "I will go wash; and when my face is fair, you shall perceive whether I blush or no." As Mr. Flower said, the Festival is celebrated. The initial chapters of volume three were noteworthy for the artists who had kindly given their services, the critics, and the men of the pen who had come from over the seas in order to encourage the development of that fair flower which was planted many years ago. One other point seemed to make the Festival noteworthy. All the world was Shakespeare's stage, all time was his canvas, all voices were his orchestra; and he was glad to see in the scheme of decoration that a place was found for the flags of all nations. He hardly wished to say farewell. The last flowers had been given, the last kind words spoken, and he would not say farewell, but catch up the kindly note of the gallery, and say "Encore."

HERR RAIMUND PECHOTSCH, the musical director of the Lyceum Theatre, has composed a march to which he has given the title of "Marjorie," after Mr. Ernest Carpenter's little daughter, and which he has dedicated to that gentleman. It is a very pleasing number, and is played between Acts 3 and 4 of Her Love Against the World.

THE "Fanny Coleman" matinée, which was to have taken place at the St. James's on the 30th inst., has been postponed until Thursday, June 13. To the attractive list we have already given of those who have kindly undertaken to contribute to the entertainment are to be added Miss Eva Moore, Miss Margaret Cooper, Miss Ada Reeve, Miss Helen Mar, Mr. H. V. Esmond, and Mr. Harry Fragson.

"AN ENGLISH GIRL; OR, A TALE OF INDIA," by Mr. E Crapton Bryant, with music by Miss Mabel Goyder (Mrs. Herdman Porter), was produced by amateurs at the King's Theatre, Sutton-in-Ashfield, on Wednesday, May 8.

THE management of the Royal Prince Regent Theatre, the celebrated home of Wagnerian opera in Germany, is concerned in a case for libel now proceeding at Munich. The editor of the Bavarian Courier is accused of libelling Baron von Speidel, the director of the Royal Theatre, Herr Felix Mottl, the famous conductor of the Munich symphony orchestra, Herr Heine, the stage-manager, and Fräulein Wimmer, the leading lady. The editor's defence was that he could not assume responsibility for the construction which people put upon his statements. Frau Cosima Wagner, Dr. Richard Strauss, Herr Ernst von Possart, Baron von Ompteda, and Count von Moy, the Lord Chamberlain of the Bavarian Court, figure among the witnesses.

MESSRS. FOSTER AND NAPIER commence a lengthy tour with The King of Thieves on Whit Monday, by special arrangement with Messrs. Haddon and Loader.

MR. LEONARD AARDALE has again been engaged for entire heavies for the stock season at the Metropole, Devonport, this making his third engagement.

MISS GEORGIE DE LARA has been re-engaged for the autumn by Mr. Walter Melville to sustain her original part, Peggy Munro, in The Soldier's Wedding, which she is playing in the coming week at the Grand Theatre, Fulham.

OWING to the success of Mr. Allan Wilkie's present tour (now in its fortieth consecutive week), and the numerous applications for dates, it is Mr. Wilkie's intention to send out a No. 2 company in the autumn, to visit the smaller towns. The company will have the use of the whole of the new and magnificent plant of pictorial printing, specially cut by Messrs. D. Allen and Sons, which has created such a sensation in every town Mr. Wilkie has visited. Each play will be produced under the personal supervision of Mr. Wilkie, and will be a replica of the No. 1 company in every detail.

AT Clerkenwell County Court on Monday Miss Mara Collings sued Messrs. H. Theodore and Charles Fancourt for £50, as damages. Counsel for plaintiff said at the end of last year his client was engaged to play a part in The Shulamite at a salary of £2 10s.; but was put off from time to time until in the end his client felt bound to put the matter in her solicitor's hands. Plaintiff said that when the offer was made by Mr. Fancourt to play "Tant Anna" she accepted because she was told there would be a long tour. In awarding plaintiff £12 10s. and costs, Judge Edge said the contract was in the correspondence, in which plaintiff says, "I will take your terms, £2 10s. Let me know when you want me to rehearse, and where." He did not, however, think that she could set up that her engagement was for the entire tour. It was stated that Mr. Fancourt had not been served, and judgment was entered against Mr. Theodore.

MR. SYDNEY BARRACLOUGH, the young actor and singer, who some time ago was threatened with consumption, underwent the open-air treatment for the malady with excellent results; but assistance is required to make the cure complete, and a benefit matinée is accordingly being organised to take place at a theatre yet to be named on Monday, June 24. The promoters of the matinée are already assured of influential support, many leading managers and artists having promised to assist.

MISS MAY YOHE, who, a few years ago, was a favourite actress on this side of the Atlantic, has entered the marriage state for the third time. On April 24 in New York she became the wife of Mr. J. Newton Brown, who is engaged in commercial pursuits. Miss Yohe, a lady of acknowledged personal attractions, and possessing a contralto voice of unusual compass, made her first appearance in the States as a lady of the chorus. Having worked her way into the front ranks of the profession, she appeared at the Avenue Theatre (now The Playhouse) some twelve years ago. Her greatest success, however, was in Little Christopher Columbus, in which she sang a catchy coon-song. In the late 'eighties she was married to Lord Francis Hope, but the union was dissolved. Then she became the wife of Captain Bradlee Strong, a son of a former Mayor of New York, but the couple soon separated. Miss Yohe's present husband is said to have been a childish playmate of hers.

MISS BETTY CASTLE was called upon suddenly last Monday evening to take up Miss Cecil Cromwell's part in The Judgment of Pharaoh at the Scala Theatre, owing to the latter lady being called away by serious family bereavement. Miss Castle's part of Rachel was played by Miss Warre.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

Wyndham's Wit.

An actor, says a writer in the Daily Mirror, was worrying Sir Charles Wyndham the other day for an engagement; but Sir Charles was still more worried by the loss of his keys, which he was unable to find, in the absence of his valet, and was pacing the room with the well-tamed temper of one of the "lions" at the Scala. "Come to me again in a fortnight, when I shall know my plans. Besides, I shall have found my keys by then," added the famous actor-manager. To a journalist who brought him the proof of an article prophesying his knighthood six months before it happened, Sir Charles looked at the bold headline in surprise, and then said, in an aggrieved tone: "Can't you make it a lord?"

Tree Anecdotes.

MRS. GEORGE CRAN, in "Herbert Beerbohm Tree," in Mr. John Lane's "Stars of the Stage" series, edited by Mr. J. T. Grein, has several anecdotes in connection with the eminent actor's career. On one occasion Mr. Tree was "blaguing" away to a dramatic critic, when the pressman snapped: "You cannot deceive me; you are arguing in circles)" With absolute readiness Mr. Tree snapped back: "I am above you. Like the eagle, I always circle before I swoop!" Once, while he was producing Hamlet in Manchester, on tour, he tried to introduce a little colour into his costume, to find himself involved in a discussion with the artist who designed the costumes, and who pointed out that the red silk lining Mr. Tree wanted was not mourning, adding: "Hamlet himself refers to his inky cloak." "I know," said the tiresome petitioner, "but perhaps he meant red ink."

"Julius Cæsar."

DURING the run of Julius Cæsar at His Majesty's Mr. Tree, with his artistic appreciation of detail, a touch of the genius which has been defined as "an infinite capacity for taking pains" (other peoples'), insisted on the real body of the murdered Cæsar being present on the stage during Antony's long speech. Although the body was buried in the robes almost all the time, he would not have a dummy. Mr. Charles Fulton, who took the part of Julius Cæsar, protested garrulously at this somewhat inhuman treatment, saying "I often have colds in the winter, and the stage is very draughty; what will people say if the corpse sneezes" Mr. Tree was undisturbed: "They will only call you Julius Cæsar!" And Mr. Fulton was obliged to parry his colds, and add his item to the realist beauty of the play. It is the same passion for realism which made Mr. Tree insist on having hairs on the shins of his flesh-coloured tights in Antony—a trick of stage-costume which was entirely unknown till he invented it, and which was provocative of many bets among the audience as to the bareness or otherwise of the actor's legs.

Miss Terry and Her Train.

ELLEN TERRY'S creativeness in "business," says Mr. Christopher St. John in "Stars of the Stage," is the envy of her profession; but it is always so natural and true, perhaps because her imagination always works harmoniously with her sincerity, that the general public hardly perceive her elaboration of a hundred little details, although they do understand and appreciate the effect. In Sans-Gêne, as in other plays, she grew more fertile in "business" as she grew more familiar with the part. When the duchess-washerwoman, wearing a long-tailed riding-habit, a good makeshift for a court train, took a lesson in dancing, innumerable were the touches which Ellen Terry added to her assumption of ungainliness. One night, long after the original production in London, she was playing the part in a great manufacturing city in the North. When she came to the dancing lesson, she made a great deal, as usual, of the "business" of throwing back the train awkwardly over her arm when it got in her way. Once, as it flopped back, it twisted itself into the suggestive form of a clout just out of the wash-tub. Ellen Terry is always as swift in thought as in doing. Directly she found the fat coil of stuff across her arm, she began to wring it out! The response of the audience was electrifying. Everyone who had ever seen a wash-tub recognised the sincerity of the action. Naturally, that bit of "business" was repeated every time the part was played.

Barking a Refrain.

MR. WALTER PASSMORE, says the Mail, is in trouble at the Shaftesbury Theatre because he cannot find a dog sufficiently intelligent to bark the refrain of his popular song, "The Fiddler and His Dog," in the second act of Lady Tatters. Mechanical devices have been tried for imitating the bark of a dog, but they were found worse than useless, and none of the dog-dealers have procured an animal that will bark when it is wanted and stop when it is told. It is not necessary, Mr. Passmore explains, that the dog shall ever be seen by the audience. It's business is to bark in the chorus, "a ghostly sort of bark," and the management at the Shaftesbury Theatre—if it cannot get a dog from "the trade"—wants to beg, borrow, or hire one from a private individual.

MR. PASSMORE has had men calling to see him who have had their dogs shaved because the dog in the lyric was shaved. Some of these applicants wanted to act with their dogs. One lady writes to say that her dog "if shown a bone will not cease barking until you hide the bone. Has a contralto bark." Another says: "If you promise Chippy a good home and pay me six shillings a week you can have him for the season." "Our dog is a great pet," runs one letter, "but if I can come with him to the theatre every night I will lend him to you." There was an application from a man to be allowed to give his imitation of a terrier's bark. He writes: "I can bark with a chorus, either mournful or otherwise."

Theatres and Tourists.

A LADY writing to the Daily Mail to urge that the whereabouts of theatres and music halls in London should be made clearer to strangers visiting London, says:—"In a City omnibus last summer I had for my fellow-travellers some Americans who wanted to go to a particular theatre, but had no idea where to find it. I could not assist them, as I did not myself know the exact position. They searched their newspaper, and I thought, 'You won't find it there, my good people.' In shrill, but pleasant, tones one of the ladies asked of the conductor, whose answer was, "I don't know, ma'am; somewhere in the West End, I know.' There was a good deal of discussion, and at last a lady passenger timidly vouchsafed the information, but by this time they had decided to go to another theatre, the address of which they remembered from a former visit."

Dead-head Statistics.

LET us say, writes Mr. M. V. Leveaux in the Express, that twenty theatres send out each one hundred tickets a day to combat their failures, and this is not an excessive estimate when one remembers that it is based on seats given away in boxes which hold four people, stalls, circles, pit, and gallery. Let us take it that on the average the value of each ticket is 5s. Then the tickets given away for one night in London would number two thousand at a face value of £500 per night; or, based on a week of six performances, twelve thousand free tickets would be given away in this city at a nominal value of £3000. This in a year of forty-five weeks would mean 540,000 free tickets of the nominal value of £135,000, or £6750 per annum per theatre.

The Girls of Gottenberg is one of the prettiest and pleasantest musical plays that have ever been done at the Gaiety. The book is based on a really comic "notion"; the lyrics are smartly and neatly written; and the piece is cast with admirable judgment and liberality. The Koepenick incident has been artfully utilised, and woven with skill into the thread of story necessary for an entertainment of this sort. An excuse is found for the imposition practised on the inhabitants of Gottenberg in the desire of the Blue Hussars, who are quartered at the dull and girl-less town of Rottenberg, to be transferred to a more lively locality. This favour is, however, conferred on their rivals, the Red Dragoons, and the Blues are correspondingly disappointed and annoyed. They are joined by Otto, Prince of Saxe-Hildesheim, a "carpet-soldier," who is greatly dependent upon his valet, Max Moddelkopf, a hairdresser. Otto makes Max dress up as an Envoy from the Kaiser and hand to the Colonel of the Blues an order to proceed to the more desirable town, the market-place of which is the second scene of the first act. On one side is the entrance to the girls' college, to which Elsa, the daughter of General the Margrave of Saxe-Nierstein, comes as a pupil. She meets Mitzi in the market-place; and as the innkeeper's daughter would like to be a lady, while Elsa wants to gain time to meet Albrecht, a captain of Dragoons, the two girls exchange costumes and identities. The Blue Hussars enter the town, and Max, in one of his master's gorgeous uniforms, gives himself all the airs of a representative of Royalty, exacting loans, making love to the Burgomaster's buxom daughter, and putting people under arrest in the most high-handed and arrogant style. In the end the lovers pair off suitably, and the merry tale comes to a congenial conclusion.

The authors have given Mr. Edmund Payne a part quite in his line in that of Max Moddelkopf. He is irresistibly droll and comical, and his appearance in the extravagantly sumptuous uniform of the Envoy in the second scene is only equalled in absurdity by that which he makes in the second in a Tyrolese dress, as a "simple nobleman on his wedding tour." Mr. Payne's song, "The Special Envoy," is rendered by him in a style which brings down the house; and the burlesqued self-importance of the Envoy, his fatuously conceited methods of love-making, his "leery" familiarity, and his general self-satisfaction and impudence, make up an intensely amusing and diverting creation. Mr. Payne has seldom been seen to greater advantage than in this part. Mr. George Grossmith, jun., has rather a subordinate rôle in that of Otto, Prince of Saxe-Hildesheim, but gets a great deal out of it by his imperturbable coolness, his absolute ease and confidence, and especially by his dancing. He makes one of the palpable hits of the evening with "Otto of Roses," a song with a catchy air and an effective refrain, written by himself, and composed by Mr. Ivan Caryll. Miss Gertie Millar is sprightliness and cleverness personified as Mitzi, and shows no traces of her late lamentable accident. Her acting is the essence of crisp vivacity and dainty elegance. Her song descriptive of a barmaid's duties and difficulties does not err on the score of over-subtlety; but the air by Mr. Lionel Monckton is light and lively, and the words come trippingly off Miss Millar's tongue, the result being enthusiastic applause. Mr. Robert Nainby has scope for his talent for eccentric and grotesque impersonation in the rôle of the Sergeant of Hussars, Brittlbottl, whose brusque audacities are developed by Mr. Nainby with his accustomed acerbity and acuteness. Mr. A. J. Evelyn puts plenty of military bluffness and gruffness into his rendering of Colonel Finkhausen; and Mr. J. Robert Hale as Albrecht gives a neat little character-sketch of a self-satisfied and foppish Captain of Dragoons. Mr. George Miller, well made up, acts ably as the Burgomaster and Mr. Arthur Hatherton does excellent work as the short-sighted innkeeper; Mr. Charles Brown, with a remarkable make-up and a quaintly inane and reposeful manner, contributes a strikingly comic representation of the town clerk, Adolf. The young officers of the Blue Hussars have alert and able representatives in Messrs. A. J. Evelyn, T. C. Maxwell, Harold Thorley, Somers Bellamy, and George Grundy, to Mr. Maxwell being allotted a capital song, "Fritz," which he renders with great skill and spirit. Miss May de Sousa's attractive appearance and winning ways charm all from the commencement, and she endorses her claim to the suffrages of the audience by her delightful rendering of one of the best numbers in the score, "Kleine Madel," which was undeniably encored. Miss Violet Hall's fine figure and handsome features well fit her to represent the Burgomaster's daughter, Clementine, and she plays up to Mr. Payne throughout with a tact and pleasantness that are very valuable, giving full point to the allusions in her song about "Tina Strauss." Miss Olive May is duly smart and pert as the maid Lucille; and Miss Jean Alwyn, by her distinct delivery and humorous feeling, gets every ounce of effect out of the satire in the song about the Rhine Gold, which is made the excuse for some sharp hits at German girls and their habits. Miss Kitty Mason's dance is simply delightful; Miss Kitty Hanson takes full advantage of her opportunity in the first act as the "only girl in Rottenberg"; and the minor rôles all have capital and careful exponents.

Very bright, clever, and agreeable were the lyrics and music; and Mr. Ivan Caryll and Mr. Lionel Monckton, the composers, and Mr. Adrian Ross and Mr. Basil Hood, the librettists, must be warmly congratulated on the success of their efforts. The swing and spirit of some of the airs are irresistible, and the audience showed its appreciation on Wednesday by repeated attempts to obtain encores. The Girls of Gottenberg is deservedly a great success; and the uproarious applause which greeted Mr. George Edwardes's appearance at the conclusion of the performance prophesied a long and prosperous run for this amusing, entertaining, and artistic piece.

An audience, consisting largely of ladies who are supporters of the Suffragette movement, thoroughly enjoyed the many good things contained in Miss Alison Garland's play, which was produced for one night only. The authoress, as well as the members of the company, were called at the conclusion, and, in response to loud cries of "speech," Miss Garland was brought forward by Miss Mouillot, the producer of the play, and made a few remarks. She said that she preferred to call the piece a sketch rather than a play, and as an excuse for imperfections she pleaded that she was almost entirely unacquainted with the ways and means of the theatre. She hoped, however, to do better at her next attempt. She had had very little idea of the difficulties presented by a one-night production. In conclusion, she expressed her warm thanks to Miss Mouillot, who had produced the piece in the short period of ten days, and to the other members of the company for their excellent performance.

The weak points in the new play, which deals lightly with one of the burning questions of the day, are those evidently due to a lack of experience in play-writing, and there is no reason why Miss Garland should not be encouraged by the measure of success which attended her first essay as a playwright to try again.

Spinsterville is a quiet country town, and when a Woman's Suffrage Society is formed the Rev. Augustus Butler, the vicar, is a good deal disturbed at the prospect of the Suffragette being an active force in the neighbourhood. He never did like "a woman with views." The Hon. Mrs. Rigby is the president of the new Society, Miss Olive Gwynne, a young lady who is an orphan with £500 a year, is the secretary, while the post of treasurer is filled by Miss Iris Colman, a lady with a very sharp tongue. Guy, the son of Mrs. Rigby, thinks it would be a capital piece of fun if his college chum, Cyril Fergusson, were to dress up in the plain, unadorned garb of a new woman, and thus secure an entrance to the committee meetings of the Society. It does not require much persuasion to induce Cyril to carry out the idea, and upon promising a donation of £20 towards the funds of the Society, "Miss Cynthia Fergusson" is elected a member of the committee. But the joke has unforeseen results. Cyril is much impressed by the evident sincerity and self-sacrifice shown by the Suffragette ladies, and, moreover, he falls in love with Olive Gwynne. All unconscious of his real sex, she kisses the so-called Cynthia, and, when in due course Cyril makes a full confession, Olive is very angry indeed, and refuses to forgive him. It is resolved at a committee meeting to support Mr. Soothem, the Liberal candidate for Spinsterville, he having promised to promote their objects if he is returned to Parliament. Through the exertions of the ladies he wins the seat, but he votes against the Suffrage Bill when it is brought forward in the House, and, on being called to account, alleges that the measure only went half-way. However, when he puts up again for Spinsterville, he has no assistance from the ladies, and is defeated by a large majority. Cyril Fergusson becomes an enthusiastic supporter of the right of women to the Parliamentary franchise, and contests a borough on these lines, but is defeated by five votes only. This would not have happened, he believes, had Olive attended his meetings and addressed the electors. However, she eventually forgives him, and promises to become his wife. The women of Spinsterville organise a strike; they attend neither church, chapel, nor mothers' meetings and make things so awkward for the vicar and the other ministers in the town that they are compelled to capitulate. The dialogue is pointed, as, for instance, someone remarks, "The New Woman is more to dreaded than the New Theology"; and a Suffragette exclaims, "There is only one man for whom I have any respect, and that is Guy Fawkes."

Mr. Harry Ashford very neatly and naturally depicted the Vicar of Spinsterville; and Mr. Arthur C. Chapman as the new curate, the Rev. Arnold Luke, also did exceedingly well. Mr. R. Calvert Haws won deserved success by his capital portrait of Guy Rigby, his tackling of the deceptive M.P. in the last act being a good piece of acting. Mr. Wilson Gunning as Cyril Fergusson represented the "new woman" with admirable discretion, and without the slightest trace of vulgarity. Mr. Charles Bedells was appropriately suave as Mr. Soothem, whose agent, Mr. Corder, had a smart and business-like exponent in Mr. Charles Seymour. Mr. Adrian Silas was amusing in the part of the office-boy, Jim Gubbins, who follows the example of Cyril Fergusson, and dons woman's clothes. Miss Edyth Olive played in charming style the part of Olive Gwynne; Miss Harriet Trench was quite life-like as the sharp-tongued Iris Colman; Miss Eily Malyon scored one of the hits of the evening as Mrs. Smith, a Lancashire lady with a delightful brogue; Miss Mouillot rendered valuable assistance as the Hon. Mrs. Rigby; other members of the committee being ably represented by Miss Kate White and Miss Dora Gregory. Miss Isabel Grey was a matronly Mrs. Butler, the Vicar's wife; and Mr. J. Saunders was good as an agricultural labourer, who is one of the voters brought to the poll by the energetic lady canvassers.

DINNER TO MR. TREE.

Mr. H. Beerbohm Tree was the honoured guest of the Playgoers' Club on Sunday evening at the Hotel Cecil, when a dinner was given for the purpose of congratulating him on the success of his visit to Germany. MR. HALL CAINE, the president of the Club, presided over a large gathering of ladies and gentlemen, among whom were Herr Hans Andresen, Mrs. Bennett, Mr. René Bull, Mrs. Caine, Mr. Louis E. Calvert, Mr. W. Clarkson, Mr. W. Cobbett, Miss Constance Collier, Miss Margaret Cooper, Sir E. Cornwall, M.P., Lady Cornwall, Miss Alice Crawford, Mr. H. Dana, Mr. Bernard Davis, Mr. G. S. Edwards, Mr. H. Passmore Edwards, Mr. P. M. Faraday, Mr. J. T. Grein, Mr. W. Grossmith, Mrs. Grossmith, Mr. Lyn Harding, Mr. H. Hart, Herr von Bethmann-Holweg (representing the German Ambassador), Mr. G. P. Huntley, Mrs. Huntley, Mr. C. E. B. Kibblewhite, Mr. H. Leigh, Mr. J. L'Estrange, Mr. H. Lowenfeld, Mrs. Lowenfeld, Col. Mapleson, Mr. Tito Mattei, Mr. J. Matsui, Mlle. S. Morival, Mr. Geo. Mozart, Mr. J. Murdock, Mr. Henry Neville, Mr. H. S. Nye, Mr. W. Payne, Mr. Courtice Pounds, Mr. Malcolm Scott, Miss Viola Tree, Mr. Auguste Van Biene, Miss F. Venning, Mr. James Welch, Mrs. Welch, Mr. Fredk. Whelen, Mrs. Whelen, Mr. Bransby Williams, and Mrs. Williams.

The CHAIRMAN, in proposing the toast of the King, stated that his Majesty had once remarked to him that in his (the King's) opinion Mr. Tree's Falstaff was one of the finest things he had ever seen.

The CHAIRMAN, in proposing the toast of Mr Tree, asked the company to drink to the health of the great artist who had so often delighted them with so many beautiful productions, who had created for them so many characters that had become as real as their closest friends, whose laughter had made them laugh, whose tears had overflowed their eyes, and whose recent success in a foreign country had been almost as much their own success as if they had won it for themselves.

MR. TREE, who was received with loud and continued applause when he rose to reply to the toast, said, in the course of an eloquent and interesting speech: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen,—After listening to the words which have been spoken by you, my dear Hall Caine, and the generous manner in which you, my kind friends, have received those words, I feel that I should like to let the beginnning, the middle, and the end of my speech be only thanks, thanks, and again thanks. We had many experiences, pleasant and exciting, during our stay in the German capital, and one of the pleasantest was the arrival, in the midst of a night of storm and stress, of a message from the Playgoers' Club inviting us to the feast of which we are partaking to-night. We went not to teach the Germans what they should do, but to present to the German public what interests the English public at His Majesty's Theatre.

A high official of the German Court is visiting London, and on the occasion of his coming to the theatre last week I had a long conversation with him. He expressed the greatest admiration for the performance of a comparatively small part by Mr. Lyn Harding—that of a Russian cavalry general in The Red Lamp. He said, "What deep study and acute observation Mr. Lyn Harding must have brought to his remarkable study of that cavalry officer. I know the type well, and the actor gives a performance which reflects all the traits and tricks of that type." I told him that I believed Mr. Lyn Harding had never set eyes on a Russian cavalry officer, and that the merit of his performance was based on a far deeper thing than mere knowledge—it was based upon instinct, which is inherited knowledge. I will tell you the counterpart of the story. A young Irish cavalry officer became a member of my company, and he essayed the part of an Irish cavalry lieutenant. This was his début. It took place in Dublin. An influential Irish critic remarked that "It was a pity that the young gentleman who played the part of an Irish cavalry lieutenant could not pay a visit to the barracks to see something of the habits and manners of an Irish cavalry officer." Thus we see, again, what a small thing mere knowledge is. The drama is a powerful engine for good or ill. This fact has been recognised by the greatest rulers of the earth, including Elizabeth of England, Frederick the Great of Prussia, and Napoleon of France. The Emperor of the Sahara, too, once extended an invitation to me to visit the desert with Shakespeare. The desert is now being prepared.

In the theatre world some things are more happily ordered to-day than they were when I first started out on my career as a manager. One of the most marked changes is in first-night audiences. They are now much more kind than they were some few years ago. Perhaps they understand our difficulties better than they used; and to understand is to forgive, as the French say. The long run is a feature which continues. Personally, I must admit that long runs, though commercially useful, are not in the best interests of the art of the theatre. Most actors are much happier, and, indeed, more competent, when they frequently change their work. In my experience I find that it is not pace, but boredom that kills. When runs are long, art is apt to be short. A great change has come over our stage in the way of elocution during the last thirty years. The days of the barn-stormer are numbered. Shouting was then the first duty of the actor, and sometimes his last accomplishment. I remember a cabman dropping me at my destination, and with the familiarity which a double fare is apt to engender, saying in a husky voice, "Ah! Mr. Tree, you little dreamed that you were being driven by a brother 'pro.' I have done a bit of shouting myself in my time." I have often heard it whispered that I am the victim of a syndicate, who may not call his soul his own. You will perhaps pardon my assuring you that this does not happen to be. I enjoy governing and managing my theatre free from the intervention of even the wisest outsiders. There are two great things in life—the one the enjoyment of power, the other the power of enjoyment. As to the future of the stage, I confess to you that my view is optimistic. In the religious and intellectual development of our time the stage will, I believe, hold an ever increasing place. Its field is widening hourly. You remember when Disraeli came from Berlin after the famous Congress—I remember seeing him myself at Charing Cross Station with Lord Salisbury—he said, "I bring back peace with honour." I hope that in our modest way, if we have not brought back peace, our art has at least not aggravated the tension between the two great and friendly nations. If only our visit to Berlin has in some small measure helped towards this end, and if it has only carried us half an inch towards that happy consummation of the universal entente, our efforts will not have been in vain.

MR. H. PASSMORE EDWARDS proposed the toast of "The Club," and Mr. J. T. Grein that of "The Visitors," responses being made to the latter by Miss Constance Collier, Mr. Charles Bond, and Herr Hans Andresen.

During the course of the dinner a delightful programme of music was performed by the string band of the Royal Horse Guards (Blue) under the conductorship of Mr. Manuel Bilton. To the concert which followed pleasing contributions were made by Mlle. Morival, Miss Margaret Cooper, Miss Aileen Hodgson, Miss Florence Venning, Signor Tito Mattei, Mr. Thorpe Bates, Mr. Harrison Latimer, Mr. George Mozart, Mr. Henry Neville, Mr. Malcolm Scott, Mr. Richard Temple, and Mr. Bransby Williams, Mr. W. Mansell Stevens acting as accompanist.

The repertory of Mr. E. H. Sothern and Miss Julia Marlowe is comprehensive and various; and, in the course of their visit to the Waldorf Theatre, they have given their admirers samples of widely differing styles of dramatic art. When Knighthood was in Flower belongs to the order of picturesque "historical" dramas. Its date is 1513, when Henry VIII. was planning a marriage between his sister, Mary Tudor, and Louis, the moribund King of France. The first act opens at a river landing in Windsor Park, with a view of the Castle and the Thames in the background, and, as foreground figures, a bevy of pretty ladies of the Court, who have assembled to welcome the coming of Mary, a wilful girl of impulsive temperament, who has very little of the princess in her manner and behaviour. In confidential chat with her friend, Lady Jane Bolingbroke, Mary reveals her fancy for Charles Brandon, a soldier of fortune in the King's Guards, who is about to seek his fortune in New Spain. Brandon has fallen deeply in love with the Princess; but, feeling the danger of yielding to such a passion, he has determined to fly from her perilous vicinity to foreign climes. But the imperious Mary will not let him off so easily. She exacts his presence, and orders him to instruct her in a new dance just imported from Paris; and, what with scolding him and begging his pardon, what with meaning glances and provocative hints, she leads the unhappy adventurer on to a profession of love, which she very heartily reciprocates. The Duke of Buckingham, who is "watching the case" for his own crafty purposes, has in leash a notorious duellist, Sir Adam Judson, who has already slain Brandon's younger brother on the "field of honour," and is perfectly ready, for a consideration, to pick a quarrel with Brandon himself. Mary has been to a fortune-teller in London and has obtained from him her horoscope, written on green parchment. She also has in her possession a perfectly respectful, but rather compromising, letter from Brandon; and she leaves both these documents on a seat near the river landing, Judson securing the parchment and Buckingham the epistle. To save the honour of the Princess Brandon insists that the documents shall be given up to him. Judson refuses, and swords are drawn. Finding that the duellist wears a coat of mail under his clothes, Brandon grapples with him, and wounds him fatally in the throat with a dagger; and for this, at the instance of Buckingham, he is arrested and sent to the Bridewell prison, the Duke deceiving Mary into the belief that he is on the lover's side.

The scene of the second act is laid in Mary's apartments in Bridewell House, London. The Princess believes that Brandon has been pardoned and has left for New Spain, whereas he is condemned to death by means of Buckingham's intrigues. However, he escapes from prison, and comes to meet the Princess, who insists on accompanying him in his flight to the New World. They get away through a window while the guards are hammering at an outer door, and ride hard to Bristol, where they halt at an inn close to the quay before embarking on the vessel which is to bear them to "foreign parts." The captain of the ship insists on inspecting his second passenger, and Mary's sex is discovered, the result being a scuffle in which Brandon bears himself bravely. The combat is put a stop to by the entrance of Henry VIII. and his soldiers; Brandon is again placed under arrest, and Mary is packed off to Paris, where we find her in the last act, the bride—but "only in name"—of the dying Louis, and persecuted by the attentions of the Dauphin, whose licentious overtures she is resisting when Brandon enters by a secret panel, disarms the royal libertine, and hurries Mary away with him, the end being the happy union of the lovers, Brandon being created Earl of Suffolk.

Miss Julia Marlowe put a liberal amount of energy and activity into her performance of Mary Tudor, depicting very vividly the violent temper and generous impulsiveness of the headstrong girl, and doing full justice to the Princess's fiery nature and nervous irritability. In the few scenes of tender sentiment which the author has allowed to Mary Tudor Miss Sothern played with artistic earnestness and refined emotionality. By the influence of her vivid personality and unsparing energy she "kept things moving" spiritedly while she was on the stage—which was "nearly all the time." Mr. Sothern gave a very fine reading of the rôle of Charles Brandon, the elevation and reserve of the shrewd soldier melting to passionate love under the advances of the Princess being shown with keen skill and sound judgment. Mr. Sothern must also be praised for his share in one of the best sword fights we have ever seen on the stage, and for the warmth and earnestness of his love-making and the vigour of his acting generally. Little attempt was made to "visualise" Henry VIII. and Wolsey; and, indeed, the nature of the play did not permit of this; but a very graphic embodiment of the Duke of Buckingham was supplied by Mr. Vibart, who made a fine figure as the crafty intriguer—tall, subtle, and well restrained. Mr. Crawley gave a highly finished portrait of the Envoy of France; and Mr. Lewis was very firm, steady, and serious as Sir Edwin Caskoden, Miss Lamison making a charmingly sweet and simple Lady Jane Bolingbroke. Mr. Eric as Judson supplied a strongly-marked sketch of a saturnine duellist; and there was some very quaint character-acting in Mr. Howson's First Adventurer, Mr. Taylor's mediæval Captain being a bold, burly, and deep-mouthed creation. Miss Kruger did well in the small part of Queen Katherine; and Mr. Reicher was admirably clear and distinct as the Jester, and quite graphic as the Dauphin; Mr. Aspland being efficient as the host of the Bristol inn. The remaining characters were all ably interpreted; and the piece was very liberally and tastefully mounted, the scenery and dresses being extremely picturesque. When Knighthood was in Flower gave great satisfaction to the audience at the Waldorf on Monday.

(COPYRIGHT.)

In these columns it is proposed to give a strictly alphabetical arrangement of the titles of plays produced during the last fifty years. It will be the most complete list ever published, and should prove invaluable to authors desiring to discover whether a certain title has ever been used, and when. To members of the dramatic profession it will be useful in determining the dates of plays in which they have achieved successes. Our readers are politely requested to advise us of any omission or inaccuracy which they may notice.

This list as soon as complete will be published in cheap book form.

MR. ARTHUR SHIRLEY.

Mr. Arthur Shirley has tasted of the "sweets" and the "bitters" of dramatic authorship. He has written a play that has run for 6,000 nights and another that has run for one night. What a host of recollections of the Adelphi, Surrey, Princess's, and Pavilion Theatres his name brings to the mind! And what recollections, too, of other popular dramatic authors—George R. Sims, Tom Gallon, Ben Landeck, Fred Leslie, Sutton Vane, and George Conquest—with whom in collaboration he wrote a number of successful melodramas, including, Two Little Vagabonds, Tommy Atkins, The Boom of Big Ben, Woman and Wine, The Absent-Minded Beggar, The Better Life, Mrs. Othello, Straight from the Heart, Saved from the Sea, Tatterley, and A Grip of Iron. These plays, of course, do not by any means indicate the extent of his labours, for, in addition, he is the author of fifty dramas, farces, and comedies.

Mr. Shirley, who is a native of London, and was born in the year 1853, commenced his business career in the British Museum. He was prepared for the stage by M. Edmond Got, in Paris, and first appeared as an actor in 1872, with the Comédie-Française company at the old Opera Comique Theatre in the Strand, playing a utility part in Mercadet. Naturally enough, it was as an actor that he learned all about the intricacies of stage technique, and the knowledge thereby acquired has been of immense service to him in writing plays.

Mr. Shirley is very hopeful as to the future of drama in this country. "Things dramatic, like other phases of life, run in cycles. Each class has its period of success, and its period of somnolence, and he is wise who recognises the signs of the times, and holds himself prepared for the changes that are bound to come. At the present moment there are indications that the taste of the public is once more veering round to drama. I do not mean the melodrama of the sanguinary murders, but drama of a less lurid type. A modern audience will not accept those hair-raising situations—such as the marvellous rescue of the heroine by the hero just as the steam hammer is about to fall upon her prostrate body—over which their fathers shrieked themselves hoarse with excitement. I admit that I have written that sort of stuff myself, but then it was wanted, and when you have to write to order you must not allow your critical judgment to exercise too much influence over you. What is now required to give drama a fillip is the production of a really first-class serious play, something that everybody will go to see, and after that there will be plenty of opportunities for other plays of a similar kind.

"It is rather unfortunate that at the present moment we have no theatre in the West End of London devoted to drama, but perhaps when the time is ripe some enterprising individual will secure a long lease of one of our famous playhouses—or will it be an entirely new theatre, not yet built?—and give a helping hand to the romantic play, for which I believe the average playgoer still cherishes some affection, in spite of the fact that musical comedies have during the past few years possessed an extraordinary attraction for him."

Mr. Shirley has just completed a new drama (with Mr. Eric Hudson), to which they have given the title, The Gayest of the Gay, and which is to be produced by Mr. W. W. Kelly at Liverpool at Easter, with Miss Edith Cole in the principal feminine part—a particularly strong character, we understand, and one well suited to Miss Cole's style and individuality.

DEATH OF CAPTAIN RODGERS.

We regret to announce the death, on the 9th inst., of Captain James Rodgers, who in 1890 succeeded his father, Mr. James Rodgers, in the management of the Prince of Wales's Theatre, Birmingham. Captain Rodgers was originally intended for the sea, and had occupied a prominent position in the merchant service. Although he exercised absolute control over the theatre, he never took any practical part on the stage itself. Under his régime the Prince of Wales's continued to prosper; but in 1898 he decided to retire from active management, and leased the house to a company under the title of Rodgers and Co., in connection with which Mr. J. F. Graham became the manager. Captain Rodgers was, however, proprietor of the theatre up to the time of his death. On his retirement from management he removed to Broadway, in Worcestershire, where he continued to live until a few months ago, when he removed to Rednal.

Captain Rodgers was singularly tactful in his management of his employees. On one occasion a strike was threatened in connection with the stage hands, who objected to wearing the stage armour which was provided, more particularly the helmets, the complaint being that they "cut their ears off." At a rehearsal a gaunt figure was seen moving across the stage wearing one of the helmets. It was Captain Rodgers, who had adopted this means of satisfying himself and the stage hands that no serious hardship was being inflicted upon them.

He was on very friendly terms with the late Sir Henry Irving, and was personally intimate with the theatrical stars who visited the theatre. Captain Rodgers took an active part in the promotion and carrying out of the Theatrical Charity Sports. These owed their inception to the Broadstreet house, and were first held in connection with the Aston Villa Football Club. Later the Captain realised that there was room in Birmingham for two rather than one such meeting, and he invoked the aid of the Small Heath Football Club, and for years these efforts on behalf of charity were maintained, with the result that thousands of pounds were raised for the local medical charities.

Captain Rodgers used to tell a story of the late Mr J. L. Toole, between whom and the Captain a close personal friendship existed. On one of his visits to the theatre Mr. Toole was far from well, and Captain Rodgers invited him to take a drive with him before appearing on the stage in the evening. It was a glorious afternoon, and they went a pleasant drive through the leafy suburbs of the west end of Birmingham. "Well, Johnny, what did you think of the drive?" asked the Captain. Toole expressed himself delighted, and praised the scenery, then remarking drily, "But you haven't billed it much!"

Captain Rodgers was at one time a prominent Freemason, and among his outdoor pursuits cycling found much favour.

The deceased manager had not enjoyed robust health for some time past, but his death, which took place in his sleep, was sudden and unexpected. He leaves a widow and four children.

THE musical-director of the Lyceum has written a very pretty march, and has dedicated it to Marjorie, the eleven-year-old daughter of Mr. Ernest Carpenter. Miss Carpenter is a clever little pianist and recitress.

PRESENTATION.—A silver-mounted bâton has been presented to Mr. Alexander Humphreys by Miss Marion Denvil and Mr. Ashley Page, in recognition of the admirable music which he composed for the recent production of Romeo and Juliet at the Terriss Theatre.

IN our issue of Saturday last, in our notice of The Merry Wives of Windsor, we mentioned Miss Burns as appearing as Sweet Anne Page. Miss Hélène J. Garland played the part on the evening in question.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

A large audience was present when Mr. Wm. A. Armour's company appeared for the first time on Monday evening in a new domestic play, which had a good reception. The play opens at the library at Coombe Hall, where Lieut.-Colonel Sir Stanton Faringdon sends for his grandson Philip, as he intends to make a will in his favour, on condition that he marries Vera, another grandchild. Philip refuses to conform to his grandfather's wishes, as he is already secretly married to Ruth, Sir Stanton's ward. Leslie Verney, another grandson of the baronet, plots with Vera to obtain possession of the estates and money. Despite Leslie's promise to make Vera his wife, he makes love to Ruth, but she repels his advances, and he is attempting to kiss her when Philip appears, and knocks the villain down. Verney is accused by Sir Stanton Faringdon of having stolen two hundred pounds out of the allowance to Philip. Angry words ensue, and finally Verney shoots the old man dead. Philip is accused of the murder of his grandfather, and conceals himself at the Haunted Mill, where Holy Joe, a poacher, promises to keep his enemies off the scent. Verney, however, tracks Philip to his hiding-place, and shoots him while he is trying to escape. The hero is sentenced to penal servitude for life; but the two cousins, Leslie and Vera, determine to put him out of the way by paying a warder at the gaol to allow him to escape, and shoot him in doing so. Philip escapes without being shot, and the warder is killed by Verney, and his clothes changed for a convict suit. The body is thrown into the river, and discovered later, when it is supposed to be that of Philip.

The last act opens at a shop in the East End, kept by Joe. Ruth and Little Phil, her son, live with him, the former getting her living as a nurse, and Philip, who has been abroad, now returns a wealthy man, and is invited by the villain Leslie to his house to play cards; but Vera refuses to allow them to play, and Verney brutally knocks her down. The woman thereupon tells Faringdon of Verney's guilt, and dies; while Verney is marched off to pay the penalty for his crimes.

Mr. Armour has a strong company, Miss Dora Price playing the part of Ruth Raeburn in a highly efficient manner. Mr. Edward H. Hamilton, as the Rev. Stephen Maxwell, acts in manly fashion and with great success. Mr. Charles Conway plays the heavy part of Leslie Verney with judgment; and Miss Alice Defoe works well with him as Vera Delorme. Mr. Herbert I. Walton as Lieut.-Colonel Sir Stanton Faringdon has not much to do, but he does it well; and Mr. Reginald Payne is all that can be desired as Philip Faringdon. Mr. H. de Ville, as Jake Smith, Verney's accomplice, proves himself a sound actor; and Mr. Vincent Hales is good as Detective Grey. Miss Lillian Rose is a capital actress as Little Phil. Abundance of comedy is furnished by Miss Nell Ingram as Polly Perkins, Mr. Fred Rignold as P.C. Peter Jorkins, and Mr. Horace Buckley as Holy Joe, and they contrive to convulse the "house" with merriment. Mr. Herbert Ashton also does well as Simon Downy, and Mr. Tom Richardson makes a good Warder. The drama is well dressed and mounted, the Haunted Mill and the Old Bridge being especially fine, and a successful future may be predicted.

"THE TIGER'S DEN."

A Drama, in Four Acts, by Charles Freeman, Produced at the Theatre Royal, Stratford, on Monday, May 6.

Fifty Fafty ..... MR. CHARLES FREEMAN
Capt. Alfred Roper .. MR. CHARLES LODGE-PERCY
Capt. Dodd ..... MR. WILL GRIFFITHS
Dick Herring ..... MR. WILL MCNALLIE
Samuel Gog ..... MR. FRANK COSTON
P.C. 95 ..... MR. JOHN HAYES
Jack Fafty ..... MR. G. K. ASHLEY
Detective Moss ..... MR. MARK GRAYLAND
Jennie Jenkins ..... MISS LILLY WALKER
Mother Fafty ..... MISS HENRIETTA SCHRIER
Ella Heatherington ..... MISS FLORENCE TENCH

Mr. Charles Freeman has given us an exciting melodrama in The Tiger's Den. We learn that twenty years previous to the opening of the play Fifty Fafty, a notorious scoundrel in North Shields, had murdered a man and his wife at the goldfields in Australia after an unreciprocated attempt at making love to the woman. He takes charge of their baby girl and brings her up as his child, and she later finds employment in North Shields as a barmaid. Fafty's own son, Jack, has been separated from his father from boyhood. Having for several years followed the life of a sailor, he now returns home, hoping to give his parents a surprise visit. He begins to celebrate his home-coming in the usual Jack Tar style at the public house where his foster-sister, Ella, is employed. He tells her who he is, and adjures her to keep his identity secret from his people for the time being. Unrecognised by the latter, he obtains lodging at the "den" kept by Fifty Fafty, and is murdered during the night by that worthy and his amiable spouse. Subsequently Ella comes to them and inquires after the stranger, discovers the foul deed that has been committed, and then informs them that they have killed their own son. Then sensation follows sensation in the attempt by Fafty to evade justice. Mrs. Fafty is eternally haunted by the apparition of a black dog, the form she believes the ghost of her dead son has taken. The elusive Fafty escapes from the detectives on several occasions, and when he finally calls in the aid of a taxidermist, who hides him in the stuffed body of an elephant to be shipped to a foreign port, it looks as if the law were to be deprived of a victim after all. But things turn out differently, and the wicked people in the play meet with their deserts.

Mr. Charles Freeman works wonderfully hard depicting the villainies of Fafty, who is a very terrible person in his hands. Miss Florence Tench gives quite a pleasing presentment of the heroine, Ella, and one realises that here is an actress of exceptional worth, who would make a success of a superior part. Miss Henrietta Schrier as Mother Fafty gives us a most objectionable old hag, and acts well in the rôle. Mr. Will McNallie as Dick Herring and Miss Lily Walker as a maid-of-all-work are extremely amusing; and Mr. G. K. Ashley furnishes a spirited Jack Tar as Jack Fafty. Mr. Mark Grayland as a detective, Mr. Charles Lodge-Perry as the gallant Capt. Roper, Mr. Will Griffiths as an old Salt, and Mr. Frank Coston as the taxidermist sustain their characters in commendable fashion.

"SIR ROGER DE COVERLEY."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—Our attention has been called by our client, Mr. A. F. Cross, the managing-director of the Prince of Wales Theatre, Nuneaton, to the notice which appeared in your paper of the 11th inst. of a ballet de action, entitled Sir Roger de Coverley, which is being produced at the Empire.

From this notice it appears that the ballet infringes the copyright which our client has in a comedy of the same title, which received the Lord Chamberlain's licence in February, 1902, and was produced shortly afterwards.

Although we are aware that in the production at the Empire there is no dialogue, the characters, scenes, and incidents bear a remarkable resemblance to those in our client's piece, and he will take such action as he may be advised to enforce his rights.

Yours truly,
CLAY AND ATKINS.

Nuneaton, May 16, 1907.

AN appeal on behalf of the Hospital for Consumption will be made at a meeting over which the Lord Mayor will preside at the Mansion House on May 31, at three o'clock. The pressing needs of such an invaluable institution should recommend themselves to all classes of the community, among whom such good work has been achieved. The committee of management do not plead for help to pay off existing debts, as the hospital has no liabilities, but for increased income, which is sadly needed, mainly for the maintenance of their sanatorium at Frimley for open-air treatment and for convalescent patients. The income of the hospital has very materially decreased since the institution of King Edward's Fund, as is shown by the fact that in the ten years previous to its inauguration £295,458 was received from subscriptions, donations, and legacies, while for the last ten years, since its existence, only £256,875, including £8,291 from the King's Fund, has been received from the same sources, approximately a difference of £40,000, or an average of £4,000 a year. Proof that the utmost economy is practised in the management is shown by the fact that the average cost per bed in 1905 was only £73, the lowest of any of the leading London hospitals. Notwithstanding the addition of 110 beds in the Sanatorium to 318 in London, the ever-growing demands on the parent hospital have not decreased, there being at the present time no less than 400 patients, the largest number at any one time in the history of the hospital, waiting their turn to be admitted.

MISS TERRY'S MARRIAGE.

The fierce light which beats about the "stars" of the stage does not allow them to take the important step of matrimony without publicity and comment; but the interest which is felt in actresses' marriages is fully warranted by custom. Even ordinary people are anxious to advertise their weddings; and the practice of proclaiming them in advance, and having them described in print afterwards, is too general for any observations on a theatrical marriage to be considered impertinent. It was quite natural, however, that Miss ELLEN TERRY and Mr. JAMES CAREW should have preferred to keep private the fact of their union in America. Reporting in the United States is done very thoroughly; indeed, some may think it is even overdone, and the enterprise of the American interviewer is apt to invade the honeymoon unpleasantly to those not inured to the methods and ways of the Transatlantic Press. It must be admitted that curiosity as to Miss TERRY'S third marriage is excusable and natural. We are all so anxious that she should be happy, we all feel so much affection for her personally, that we were anxious to know all that could be known concerning her third —and probably last—choice of a husband.

Each of Miss TERRY'S matrimonial experiments is calculated to increase our sympathy and regard for her personally. Miss TERRY has recently stated that her union with GEORGE FREDERICK WATTS was a "most unhappy one." The matrimony of a frank, impulsive girl in her teens with a serious painter more than thirty years her senior was one of those "mistakes," however, which do the errormakers more credit than many wiser arrangements; and when we remember how great an artist WATTS was, and when we look upon Miss TERRY'S portrait in the said teens, we can easily understand the "mistake"—and the unhappiness. For there is, perhaps, no such purgatory as the legal connection of two people who appreciate each other's qualities, but find that it is just those qualities which, being essentially antagonistic, make life together impossible. GEORGE ELIOT, in "Middlemarch," depicts such a union in the history of Dorothea Brooke and Mr. Casaubon; but the "real inwardness" of the WATTS-TERRY marriage will never be described. The friends who are in possession of the facts are faithful and discreet; and we can hardly expect Miss TERRY to open long-closed wounds in an autobiography in order to supply "documents" for realistic fiction.

And what better choice could have been made by the coldest and most prudent person than Miss TERRY'S second marriage, when she became the wife of Mr. CHARLES WARDELL, known to playgoers as CHARLES KELLY? An officer in a crack cavalry regiment, and the son of a clergyman, he was thirty-eight and Miss TERRY twenty-nine when they took each other "for better or worse" in 1877. Mr. KELLY was no trifler with histrionic work, but a sound and talented actor, with a thorough knowledge and experience of his profession. He had already been nine years on the stage, and had appeared at most of the leading London theatres. He was the original Richard Arkwright in TOM TAYLOR'S drama Arkwright's Wife; and appeared at the old Court Theatre as Lord Melton in Mr. CHARLES F. COGHLAN'S drama Lady Flora; and was also the Mr. Sullivan in the adaptation of La Partie de Piquet, called A Quiet Rubber. It seems almost incredible that the stage could have done without Miss TERRY for seven years; but that was the period which elapsed between her temporary retirement and her reappearance at the Queen's Theatre, in the February of 1874, as Phillippa Chester in a revival of CHARLES READE'S Wandering Heir. Mrs. GEORGE CRAN, in the recently published Life of ELLEN TERRY in Mr. JOHN LANE'S "Stars of the Stage," has some interesting remarks on this period of retirement. Mrs. CRAN writes: "Here there seems to be fresh proof of that curious want of ambition to which ELLEN TERRY confessed later on. She had played each part as it came in her way as well as she knew how, but each part was not to her as a battle won to conquer an empire. She did not see that empire in her dreams. She never had the slightest craving for glory. She renounced her career at the age of twenty without any suspicion that she had anything to renounce. For six years she lived in the country, putting all that energy and vitality which she was afterwards to devote to her art into her life.

"It is said that CHARLES READE, when hunting in Hertfordshire, met her by chance in a country lane, and told her in his rough yet kindly way that she was a fool to have left the stage. 'Why don't you go back?' 'I don't want to.' 'You will some day.' 'Never.' Then, mindful of certain financial troubles threatening her rural peace, ELLEN TERRY added: 'At least, not until some one gives me £40 a week.' 'Done!' said CHARLES READE. 'I will!'" READE thus recorded the event in his diary: "ELLEN TERRY. A young lady highly gifted with what VOLTAIRE justly calls le grand art de plaire. Left the stage for some years. . . . Her expression kills any pretty face you see beside her. . . . She is a pattern of fawn-like grace. . . . A very charming creature."

Upon Miss TERRY'S marriage to Mr. JAMES CAREW the only comments can be congratulations. Age is not to be estimated by years, but by character; and there are some natures—and Miss TERRY has one of these—which never grow old. There can be no better chance of married happiness than when both parties to the contract are in complete sympathy in aims, tastes, and temperament. Mr. CAREW has stated that he "first fell in love with Miss TERRY'S art, and then with herself." A sounder foundation for a life of married happiness could hardly be made.

DRESSES AT THE PLAY.

The dresses are a leading feature of Strongheart at the Aldwych. In the first act Miss Boland as Dorothy Nelson wears a grey tailor-made cloth gown, with a little tight-fitting coat, the strappings of which are carried round the shoulder. With it the actress wears a grey-brown shot straw, relieved by an electric blue ostrich feather and loops of bluish-grey shot ribbon. Miss Boland's evening gown in the third act is of shell-pink mousseline-de-soie, which is worn over a slip of mauve satin, the contrast softened by folds of pink and white chiffon. The plastron in front, which widens out from the Empire bodice, shows an embroidered design in ivory blonde. Tiny pink chiffon rosebuds and leaves are festooned round the skirt by strands of pink ribbon.

Miss Marjorie Wood also wears a handsome evening dress of delicate blue crêpe-de-chine, the corsage relieved by a berthe of white point lace. Beneath the full kimono sleeves show undersleeves of very pale pink chiffon, and the skirt has the spaces between the pleats adorned with enormous appliqué lozenges of blue panne, of which the waistband is also composed. The green cloth morning gown worn by Miss Wood in the first act is embellished with a silk roll collar and enormous pearl buttons, while the hat is of warm yellow straw trimmed with a cluster of green cherries and ribbon of the same hue.

Miss Ravenscroft's wine-red gown of mousseline-de-soie is worn over a slip of soft pink satin and lightened with ribbon of the same colour, whilst a chic note of contrasting colour is struck by the sailor hat with its black wings and lace veil and bold touch of blue. The gown worn by Miss Thornton is a dainty creation in blue frieze, trimmed with alternating rows of black and silver braid, to which the vest of cream net supplies an acceptable relief.

SAD DEATH OF MR. CHAS. A. LEICESTER.

We regret to record the death, through a regrettable bicycle accident, of Mr. Charles A. Leicester, an actor well known throughout the profession. On Wednesday afternoon, accompanied by Miss Florrie Groves and Mr. J. Terry Dillson, all being members of the Her Luck in London company, he was cycling back to Barrow-in-Furness, having been on a visit to Mr. and Mrs. Kirk. As the party were passing through the village of Gleston, near Dalton, about three and a half miles from Barrow, they had to mount a very steep hill. The brakes attached to Mr. Leicester's machine failed to act; he thereupon called to Miss Groves to keep clear, and ran into the wall which bounds one side of the road. He was violently thrown against the brickwork, and fractured his skull. Mr. Leicester was conveyed to the hospital at Barrow, and remained unconscious until his death at five minutes to eight on the following morning. The house-surgeon, Mr. Douglas Tremayne, and his friend and fellow-actor, Mr. Chas. Stirling, were with him to the end. The deceased, who was playing the part of the Hon. Fitzgerald O'Connor in Her Luck in London on tour, was honoured and esteemed by all who knew him, and regarded as a son by the family for whom he had been manager for just over twelve months, the anniversary having been celebrated only a fortnight ago, at the Alexandra, Hull. He was to have been married during the vacation to Miss Florrie Groves, daughter of Mr. Kirke, and it was being arranged that the banns should be called on Sunday at Birmingham, his native town.

THE Musical Journal tells a capital anecdote, which it attributes to Dr. Zechariah Buck, the famous organist of Norwich Cathedral. A family of the name of Waters was always late for the cathedral service. On a particular Sunday they all trooped in just as the choir was beginning to sing the Psalm appointed for the day. The opening words were: "Save me, O God! for the waters are come in."

"THE DRUMS OF DOOM," a drama in one act, by Gerald Villiers Stuart, and The Bread-Winners, a musical comedietta in two scenes, by Gerald Villiers Stuart and Howard Cochran, were produced for copyright purposes at Wyndham's Theatre on May 9.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

PARIS, THURSDAY, May 9.—The plot of the new farcical comedy brought out at the Athénée is not particularly novel, which accounts for the fact of the work having scored only a moderate success. The story is as follows:—André and Line Martorin have been married four years. They are rich, they love one another, but suddenly a calamity befalls them. The banker who manages their fortune absconds, and the young people are left penniless. Dunned by the tradespeople, harassed from every side, misery stares them in the face, when Line is informed that her maiden aunt has died, leaving her all her fortune. But the old lady—a man-hater—has stipulated that her niece could not enter into possession of the property if she had a husband. "That's easily settled," says Robert Decoq, André's lawyer and friend; "all you have to do is to divorce, and the moment Line receives her money you marry again." André and Line do not quite approve that scheme, but the creditors become so threatening that they resolve to follow Decoq's advice; and the obliging Decoq suggests that André is to make a rendezvous with a lady, whereupon Line will come with the police commissary to capture them flagrante delicto, and thus obtain her divorce. But who is to be the lady—the co-respondent? Here, again, Decoq overcomes the difficulty by giving them the address of a certain Nichette des Horizons, an amiable demi-mondaine. Husband and wife agree to this, the former swearing that he will not give way to temptation, and that everything will only be pro forma. André makes an appointment with Mlle. Nichette, but his jealous young wife, who does not want to run any risks, takes the place of the chambermaid in the apartment where her husband meets the lady, and, by coming into the room at inopportune moments, prevents things from taking another turn than the one originally arranged. Mlle. Nichette, who is not in the secret, cannot understand what all this means. In fact, she is rather indignant, and walks away in a huff. But, just as she takes her departure, the police commissary comes, and instead of Mlle. Nichette finds Line, and is bamboozled into the belief that Line is Nichette. He also informs André that he has just arrested a banker, the same who ran away with André's money; and as the property was found intact André and Line are once more rich and no longer require the old aunt's legacy. The play might, and ought to, have ended here; but the authors foolishly added a third act, wherein we see Line wanting to divorce her husband because he showed himself too enterprising with Mlle. Nichette. That act is a fatal mistake. The farce was well acted, especially by M. Le Gallo in the rôle of André.

"LA CLEF,"

Play, in Four Acts, by M. Sacha Guitry, produced at Réjane's on May 4.

Camille Bourly ..... M. TARRIDE

M. Sacha Guitry, the author of La Clef, son of the famous actor-manager of the Renaissance, is a witty, talented youth of whom we had reason to expect great things. Unfortunately, like many young men of the day, he pretends to take a cynical view of life, and the personages he presents to us are so revolting that we ask ourselves whether he ever came across such creatures, and, if so, whether it was worth while to parade them before us. For humanity's sake, we hope that the story he tells us is an inexperienced boy's improvisation. His hero, Camille Bourly, a Montmartre singer, is the lover of a rich Society woman, or, rather, what the author calls by that name. One night she informs him that she intends to divorce her husband, and that the moment she is free she will marry Camille. For the out-at-elbows Camille this is good news, and he readily consents to become her husband. Their marriage will take place in a couple of months, but Camille is so eager to leave his miserable garret that he asks his "fiancée" to give him the key of her apartment, and let him come there whenever it suits him; but Germaine refuses. She says it would not be "proper"; but, in reality, she wants to retain her freedom. She already looks upon Camille as her husband, and has a new lover in view—Michel de Maubourg, a young fool, who has a liaison with a little Countess. The Countess, having wind of the affair, warns Camille that Germaine betrays him, and hands him a closed envelope: "If you want to know with whom Germaine deceives you all you have to do is to open this envelope." But Camille is not at all anxious to know. He does not want any trouble that may prevent his marrying Germaine, and, with the unopened envelope in his pocket, he starts with Michel and Germaine on a yachting cruise. Once out at sea and, as Camille thinks, far from the seducer, he breaks the seal, and to his horror reads that the lover in question is the man now sitting alone with Germaine in the latter's cabin. What happens? Nothing. Michel returns to his Countess, and Camille does not become the husband, but will remain the fiancé, of Germaine, who now gives him the much-coveted key. We would have preferred to see Mme. Réjane in another rôle than that of a pseudo-society lady wherein she has no opportunities of displaying her talent. M. Tarride, too, did all he could with the unpleasant part of Camille. M. Signoret and the others also worked with a will, but they could not save the piece.

"ARIANE ET BARBE-BLEUE."

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

PARIS, THURSDAY, MAY 16.—Maurice Maeterlinck is not only a poet, he is a philospher, and the pretty story of Ariadne and Bluebeard contains a deep moral. Bluebeard has married for the sixth time, and he takes his new wife, Ariadne, to his castle, where he hands her six silver keys and a small gold one. The latter opens a closet which he forbids her to enter. But Ariadne does not trouble about the silver keys, and goes straight to the forbidden closet. She is not prompted by curiosity. She objects to being a man's slave, and hopes that with the help of the golden key she will know what has become of the other five wives, and will come to their assistance if they are not dead. When Ariadne opens the door of the closet she hears the plaintive cries of the five women, but at that moment Bluebeard arrives and reproaches her for her disobedience. Nothing daunted, Ariadne tells him that she performed her duty. When, however, Bluebeard wants to punish her for her temerity, the mob, hearing her cries, storm the palace. They seize Bluebeard, and his life hangs by a thread. At that moment Ariadne interposes, and at her bidding the mob withdraw. Overcome by Ariadne's generosity, Bluebeard leaves the castle without saying a word, and Ariadne takes a lamp, enters the secret closet, and perceives five human forms, the unfortunate wives. Their names are Sélysette, Mélisande, Ygraine, Bellangère, and a fifth, Alladine, who speaks a strange language which nobody understands. After much trouble Ariadne guides the women out of the enchanted room. They are happy, and adorn themselves with the beautiful clothes and jewellery with which the rooms are filled. Suddenly a loud noise is heard. It is Bluebeard, who has been set upon by the mob. Wounded and sore, he is carried into the palace, where the five wives crowd round him. Ariadne, anxious to leave that terrible place, calls upon her companions in misfortune to follow her into freedom; but the five women shake their heads. To them freedom and independence are meaningless words. They kneel down before Bluebeard, preferring to remain the slaves they were before. M. Dukas has written some appropriate music to this story, but it is lacking in charm. The subject might have inspired him more. The interpretation was in every way satisfactory.

The Comédie-Française has placed Monsieur Alphonse on its répertoire, and revived the work with great success. It is one of Alexandre Dumas fils' best productions. Brought out in 1873, at the Gymnase, it met with an excellent reception, but, for some unknown reason, it was cast aside, although the expression "Monsieur Alphonse" is still commonly used for a man living at a woman's expense. The plot is very simple. Octave, a good-looking, unprincipled scoundrel, has seduced a young girl of good family, who has given birth to a child, Adrienne, put out to nurse with a farmer's wife. The affair has been kept very quiet, and the young girl has married M. de Montaiglin, a retired naval officer. Octave has taken a fancy for his child, and under the name of Monsieur Alphonse, pays the farmer's wife an occasional visit. But Octave, in want of money, becomes engaged to a Madame Guichard, a woman much older than he, an ex-servant, whom her master married in extremis, leaving her a considerable fortune. In fact, Octave has already borrowed several sums from her, and not being able to repay her offered her his name. Unfortunately little Adrienne is in the way, and Octave does not know how to deal with her. But Madame de Montaiglin, listening to the dictations of her heart, confesses to her husband the fault she committed when she was a girl, and he not only forgives her, but consents to adopt the child. As to the handsome Octave, his elderly fiancée is so disgusted with him that she breaks off the engagement, and leaves him to look for another victim. The piece was magnificently acted by Mme. Kolb, Sorel Bovy, and MM. Duflos and Grand.

The Comédie-Française also gave us Les Fresnay, an amusing one-act trifle by M. Fernand Vanderem, wherein the author ridicules those of the "smart set," who, disregarding duty, hold that we are justified to live our own lives as fancy takes us. Imbued with these ideas, Edmond Fresnay advises Yvonne Dumontier to leave her husband, whilst Jacqueline Fresnay counsels Raoul Dumontier to desert his wife; but all they attain is that the Dumontiers, drawn closer together, turn their backs for ever on the dangerous Fresnay couple.

L'Otage, a comedy in three acts, by M. Gabriel Trarieux, produced at the Odéon, has been the cause that M. Antoine and M. Gémier (his successor at the Théatre Antoine) have become sworn enemies. This comedy, originally called La Robe Blanche, had been accepted by M. Antoine while still manager of the little playhouse in the Boulevard de Strasbourg. M. Antoine had asked M. Gémier to take it over, but the latter refused to do so, alleging that he had already accepted a work on the same question by M. Paul Hyacinthe Loyson. M. Antoine was very much annoyed, and when he heard that his successor was about to hold the dress rehearsal of M. Loyson's play, he made up his mind to produce M. Trarieux's L'Otage before his opponent was ready. It was a big effort, but M. Antoine, setting to work rehearsing day and night, won by a neck, i.e., by four-and-twenty hours. All this is no doubt very amusing, but truth compels me to state that the game was not worth the candle. L'Otage is a dreary problem play, wherein we asist at a grave misunderstanding arising in Serge Santeuil's family, owing to his being virtually a freethinker, whilst his wife is somewhat priest-ridden; and the worst feature about the work is that the author carefully refrains from expressing an opinion, leaving it to the audience to decide the question. This is a grave mistake. Audiences, as a rule, leave what brain they possess in the cloak-room with their coats and umbrellas. They will listen and look, but the author must do the "thinking." Moreover, M. Trarieux does not explain his ideas very clearly, and when the curtain drops, we are not quite certain whether he means to prove that a man will never be able to shake off the religious tyranny of his wife.

M. Paul Hyacinthe-Loyson's play, Les Ames Ennemies resembles L'Otage in so far as it deals with the same question. The author is the son of the famous preacher Father Hyacinthe, who once created a great sensation by throwing up his cassock and marrying an American lady. His son is not devoid of talent, but he has neither skill nor the knowledge of dealing with such a difficult problem.

RICHARD STRAUSS'S Salome, which shocked the gentlemen who protect the morals of New York, has been produced here, and scored a distinct success. I am afraid that many of the beauties in M. Strauss's score were not sufficiently appreciated by the fashionable crowd that filled the Châtelet Theatre; but they pretended to be interested, and applauded the admirable interpretation. The work itself has already been described by your Berlin correspondent, and the artists, among whom is that splendid singer, Mlle. Destinn, are known on your side of the water. It only remains for me to say that we owe a deep debt of gratitude to the organisers of this performance, who afforded us an opportunity of listening to a truly great composition. Moreover, it is gratifying to see that "jingoism" here is dying out, and that German artists can now sing on a Paris stage in their own language. A few years ago this would have been impossible.

H. LAZARUS AND SON, the well-known theatre furnishers, of Great Eastern-street, E.C., supplied 1000 tip-up chairs for the best reserved seats at the Military Tournament, Olympia. The chairs are made on a new principle to suit the purpose required—viz., for taking to pieces and refixing quickly, the standards being white enamelled, and the upholstery is in art colour green pegamoid. The enterprising firm have also increased the extensive pit seating at the Lyceum, the work being carried out without interfering with the performances. Among other undertakings of Messrs. Lazarus is that of supplying the Bishopsgate Institute with their celebrated movable tip-up seats, luxuriously upholstered in velvet.

SANGER'S Amphitheatre, Ramsgate, will be again open this season, under the management of Mr. Henry Bowman, who is arranging for some excellent touring attractions.

50TH PERFORMANCE.

Mr. Walter Howard's stirring romantic military play has fully justified the anticipations created by its triumphant production at the Lyceum by Messrs. H. R. Smith and Ernest Carpenter. At the fiftieth performance last Saturday the whole of the house was closely crowded. This, surely, should be a good augury for the future of London's West-End popular drama house, and it must be a matter of intense gratification to the present lessees that they have succeded, by their enterprise, in converting a theatre that has been regarded as a "white elephant" into a successful and popular establishment.

Mr. Norman Partriege continues to command our admiration for his portrayal of the brave and sorely-tried Eric Strathmere. His acting throughout is marked by forceful expression, vigorous enunciation, and clear delivery, and the character, heroic and self-sacrificing as it is, cannot fail to interest one's sympathies, especially when presented in such able fashion by Mr. Partriege.

Miss Valli Valli cuts a very pathetic figure in the rôle of Lionel Strathmere. The affection of the audience goes out to the boy, who is prepared to run almost any risk on behalf of his noble brother. Miss Valli enacts the part of the manly, straightforward little Englishman with a fervour that is felt by everyone in front of the house, and in the death scene she is particularly affecting.

Miss Nora Kerin's Princess Iris is a fine study in tragedy. Her portrait of the woman who witnesses the degradation of her lover by a man who would usurp his place, who agrees to her lover's death rather than disappoint his hopes and enter into a dishonourable alliance with the blackguardly Prince Ulric, is convincing, and is never carried to an excess of emotion. It is a brilliant piece of work.

Mr. Eric Mayne has a sound reputation as an actor, and there is no denying that in the part of Prince Ulric of Ravensburg he furnishes a character which is uncompromisingly strong in its baser qualities. In Mr. Mayne's hands Prince Ulric is purposeful in everything to which he turns his attention. Villain though he be, one can hardly help admiring him for his soldierly definiteness of determination and his promptness in action, and Mr. Mayne may be congratulated upon carrying out the author's ideas in a most creditable manner.

Mr. Frederick Ross, as Prince Othmar, treats us to a really capital performance. We seem to be introduced to something that is far more than a mere simulacrum—this Prince Othmar, a brave man in a predicament, constantly attempting to divert the unscrupulous intentions of his shameless cousin and superior, is a thing of flesh and blood, realistic to the very sound of the voice which gives an indication of his age. It is a highly commendable presentment.

Mr. Scott Craven, in the part of Prince Maurice of Saxonia, has not so much to do as the members of the company to whom we have already referred, but what he does is done well. He may be said to fulfil one's preconceived ideas as to the manner in which this foreign prince should conduct himself, and Mr. Craven bears himself with quiet dignity, his whole demeanour savouring of the aristocrat.

Mr. Fred Grove causes some amusement as the peppery old General Gessler, whose "no-surrender, keep-on-fighting" instincts are so much at variance with the wishes of his brother officers. His sudden but short quarrels with Colonel Esterhazy, a part ably played by Mr. Lionel Gadsden, cause a good deal of gentle merriment.

Miss Marie Rignold presents the arts and wiles of the scheming Shulah in a most effective way. There is no ranting, no shrieking, no ultra-feminine outbursts of fury against the Princess, whom she is trying to drag into dishonour. No; Miss Rignold's Shulah seems the least excitable of her sex, and, indeed, arranges her wicked plans in an almost matter-of-fact manner, which is quite as effective, and, we should imagine, much more natural than the style to which we have alluded.

Miss Maude Aston and Miss Lulu Louden as the Princess's maids and Mr. Harry Barford and Mr. Gus Oxley as the servants to her highness afford a considerable portion of the comedy, and act well in their respective parts, as do also Mr. Edmund Waller as the military surgeon and Mr. S. Major Jones as the friendly Sergeant Kaspar. Miss Madge Beresford adequately fulfils the requirements of the rôle of Corona, the Princess's "double."

AMUSEMENTS IN ROTTERDAM.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

ROTTERDAM, MAY 15.—A series of performances has taken place at the Grand Theatre here of Der Ring des Niebelungen, with its prologue, Das Rheingold, by the opera company of the Elberfeld Stadtheather, under the management of Herr Julius Otto.

THE last weeks of the regular season at the Grand are devoted to a succession of benefits for the most promising members of Manager Van Eysden's Dramatic Company. The beneficiary of this week has been Fritz Tartaud, the popular leading man of the company. The play revived for the occasion was Haar Terugkeer (Her Return), a Dutch version of Bernstein's Le Bercail. Mr. and Mrs. Tartaud repeated their clever impersonations of the two leading characters.

THE Royal Dutch Dramatic Company of Amsterdam played a version of Tolstoi's novel, "Anna Karénine," at the Tivoli Theatre last week.

MR. FRED KENTON, on the 10th inst, at the Salford County Court, recovered £8 for breach of contract from the Regent Theatre and Assembly Rooms Company, Ltd. The contract was to the effect that the plaintiff should appear at the Regent Theatre, in Salford, for a week's engagement beginning on Jan. 20 last., but at the last moment the defendant company raised a question as to the performance of a previous contract; but this, his Honour considered, had nothing whatever to do with the matter.

ONE of the last, if not the last, contract signed by the late Mr. G. Adney Payne was L. Austin Millais' wordless playlet, The Stolen Duchess, which, owing to his sad death, has been confirmed by Mr. Henri Gros.

MISS ANNA DE GREY, Secretary of the Music Hall Ladies' Guild, desires to thank the Huxter Bros. and the Craggs for donations of clothing and Mr. F. H. Pedgrift for letter for the Consumption Hospital.

HARRY CLYO'S variety company is meeting with success at the Theatre Royal, Colne, this week. The company comprises Abel and Welsh, Arthur Richards, Renee Walon and Boy Willie, Titan, Mlle. Telka, Nellie Nora, Joe Cookson, and Clyo and Rochelle.

MISS FRANKIE NEWCOME, comedienne, who has been playing in serious pieces at the theatres, has returned to the variety stage, and is appearing this week at the Pavilion, Leicester, where she is scoring by her vivacity in new songs.

THE installation meeting and banquet of the Chelsea Lodge was held yesterday at Frascati's, the principal duty of the Lodge being to instal Theodore Schreiber ("Serpentello") into the Worshipful Master's chair.

VARIETY GOSSIP.

Mr. Adney Payne's remains were enclosed after the inquest in a shell, and brought to the deceased gentleman's residence at 127, Bedford Court-mansions, W.C. The funeral will take place to-day. Prebendary Glendinning Nash will conduct a service at Christ Church, Woburn-square, at 10.45, and at the conclusion the mourners will at once proceed to Finchley Cemetery, where the interment takes place. The coffin, which is of oak, bears the inscription :—

George Adney Payne,
Died 15th May,
Aged 60 years.

Miss Marie Lloyd, who has always taken a deep interest not only in the Music Hall Benevolent Fund, but in all schemes of professional charity, will occupy the chair at the Fund's annual dinner at the Trocadero on Sunday, June 9, when she hopes to have the whole-hearted support of her brother and sister artists. On this occasion ladies will for the first time be invited to attend. The appeal of the popular chairwoman will have the official support of the Variety Artists' Federation, whose committee, secretary, and chairman are working heart and soul with Mr. Horace Marriott in the good cause. It is pathetic to note that the circular is signed by G. Adney Payne, who had been elected president of the year. It was being posted as the sad news of the "guv'nor's" lamented death became current. The Fund had no greater friend.

Sir Edward Moss, while en route (motoring) to his Middleton estate on Tuesday last, paid a flying visit to the Palace, Carlisle, and expressed himself much pleased with the Palace structure and the entertainment. He witnessed two turns that have served the Moss-Stoll combine so often, Mr. Fred Elton and Mr. Frank Leon, whose agent, Will Oliver—a very old associate of the famous firm—was present. Signor Pepi was naturally very pleased at the surprise visit and the complimentary remarks passed by Sir Edward.

Mr. Fred Baugh has received a notification from the Lord Chamberlain that the composite form of entertainment at Hoxton's own theatre, the Britannia, does not comply with the conditions attached to the licence. Drama and varieties flourished for thirty years during the sole régime of Sarah Lane, and for a quarter of a century before that under various Lord Chamberlains. Why the fiat has now gone forth to discontinue at a working-class house a wholesome form of entertainment that supplies the necessary diversion for thousands of toilers it is impossible to surmise. Mr. Baugh, who is managing the house for the Macnaghten Circuit, we fear will have to close down—at any rate for a time.

"When Knights Were Bolder," a musical comedy fantasy by Messrs. Wimperis, Davenport, and L. Godfrey-Turner, was produced at Devonshire Park Theatre on Monday, with Miss Agnes Fraser (Mrs. Walter Passmore) in the rôle of Lady Lavinia Mostyn. The idea of the sketch is similar to the little play written by Mr. W. S. Gilbert thirty years ago for the German Reeds, entitled Ages Ago, the chief situation being further elaborated in the comic opera Ruddigore.

Mr. John Le Hay comes to the Metropolitan on Monday next, without the historic "rotten cotton gloves," but with the farcical episode, Poor Beggar, which has not been seen yet up West. He is supported by Miss Mary Duggan and Mr. Charles Cautley.

Miss Evie Greene, like Miss Marie Tempest and Mr. Hayden Coffin, will make the Palace Theatre the arena of her début in variety, and will commence an engagement on Monday with Mr. Alfred Butt, who has also obtained permission for Miss Greene to sing during her engagement at the Palace any of the songs that she sang when she was at Daly's. She will, therefore, have an excellent répertoire from which to choose.

Coster songs are spoken of as likely to be a big boom in the States presently, and already the advent of Mr. Gus Elen is being awaited with interest, and now that the American ear is getting well attuned to the Cockney accent, many of the celebrated comedian's numbers are bound to be foregone conclusions as to popularity there—notably the songs of that great melodist the late George Le Brunn. Miss Kate Carney, it is estimated, would make a stupendous hit with one or two of her low-life scenas, like "The Brighton Promenade" and "The Blue House Laundry."

The bioscope operators of the Palace Theatre have been extremely busy during the past week. The Royal visit to the City was presented to the audience the same day, and owing to the excellent weather a splendid record has been obtained of the race for the Jubilee Stakes.

Among the attractions of the Oxford Whitsuntide programme are Alec Hurley, Will Evans, Sam Mayo, Lily Burnand, The Gothams, Tom Foy, My Fancy, Sandford and Lyons, Geo. H. Elliott, Herbert La Martine, Datas, Resua Trio, Foreman and Fannan, The Three Laurels, and others.

Mr. Joseph Wilson announces another strong Whitsuntide programme at the Tivoli. Mr. Harry Lauder, Fragson (the entente cordiale comedian), and George Robey remain to delight their many admirers. Little Tich and Miss Annie Purcell are the newcomers. Miss Purcell will sing a new military character song, "The gay Hussar." Tom Wootwell, Dan Crawley, Kurkamp, Will Van Allen, and others complete the bill.

It is said that M. Victor de Cottens, who, with the assistance of Mr. Arthur Shirley and Mr. Roland Carse, wrote the successful Revue for the Coliseum produced last year at Easter, is in London arranging for the production of a new Revue. The house of its production is not yet settled.

As we are going to press the Euston is celebrating its sixth anniversary. One performance only is being given, and five hours' continuous show is announced by Mr. Fred M'Avoy.

The Variety Artists' Federation will hold a special general meeting at the Empire Theatre, Camberwell, on Sunday, June 2, at 4 p.m., when the principal business will be a revision of the rules.

"Sir Roger de Coverley" has been considerably strengthened since its successful production at the Empire, and is sure to be enormously popular with Whitsuntide holiday makers. Miss Ada Reeve remains in the programme with the brilliant Americans, the Le Pages.

The twenty-second anniversary of the Paragon will be celebrated on Friday, June 7, when a programme of vast proportions will be presented to a crowded house under the direction of Mr. Charles Beecham.

The Royal Standard Whit-Monday company will include the following artists :—Mr. Wm. Holles and Miss Nannie Goldman and company in Mr. Arthur Shirley's sketch, The Stepmother, Sam Mayo, Jack Lorimer, Fredrica's dogs and pony, the Breton Troupe in The Tramp's Pic-nic, Lilian Lowe, Arthur Aldridge, Bert Brantford, Lidden and Hayward, Agnes Asher, the Daintons, Kathleen Cogan, Will Farrell, the Woolhaffs, Daisy Hicks, and many others.

Miss Marie Tempest was invited by Mr. Walter de Frece to lay the commemoration stone of the new Portsmouth Hippodrome on Friday (yesterday). The new house opens on Monday on the twice-nightly plan.

Mr. Ben Parks, formerly conductor at the Palace, Southampton, leader at the Hippodrome, Southampton, under Mr. Shackleton, and conductor at the Palace, West Bromwich, will succeed Mr. Shackleton as conductor at the Southampton Hippodrome next Monday. Mr. Parks is well known in musical circles, and his appointment is a popular one.

Mr. A. H. Burdett, of the box office, and assistant to Mr. Howell, at the Hippodrome, Southampton, has been given the appointment of assistant-manager at the new Hippodrome, Portsmouth. Mr. Burdett was very popular in Southampton, and on leaving he was rewarded with a purse of gold, subscribed for by a few admirers, including the staff of the Hippodrome. Mr. Fred Ball, from Boscombe, is the new assistant-manager at the Hippodrome, Southampton.

Mr. Chas. Schuberth, the popular resident-manager of the Palace Theatre, Bath, has been the recipient of hearty congratulations this week, Mrs. Schuberth having presented him with a son on the 12th inst.

Mr. R. A. P. Williams, lessee and manager of the Gaiety, Dundee, has invested in a very handsome and elegant motor-car. After a few lessons from an experienced chauffeur he is now quite an adept in its working. If he only manages his car half as well as he does the Gaiety there is no fear of serious consequences.

Mr. George Nicholson, part owner of the Hippodrome, Stockton-on-Tees, who was seventy-three years of age, succumbed on Thursday, May 9, to acute bronchitis, after a few days' illness. He was highly respected by his many friends, and universally admired for his genial disposition and amiable manner. Great sympathy is felt for his widow and his son, Mr. Robt. A. Nicholson, the present owner and general manager. The interment took place on Sunday at Stockton-on-Tees. Deceased, who was a prominent Freemason, was buried according to Masonic rites.

The negotiations by the company controlling the Grand Theatre, Nottingham, with Mr. Walter de Frece, as we announced some time since, fell through. Now Mr. Oswald Stoll has stepped in and bought up sufficient shares in the house to control the voting power in the company, so that the theatre will remain as at present, and not be brought into competition as a music hall with Mr. Stoll's Nottingham Empire Palace.

The subscription list of the Palace Theatre and Hippodrome, Burnley, Ltd., will close on Monday. The capital is £15,000 in 15,000 ordinary shares of £1 each, of which 12,000 shares are offered for public subscription. The company has been fortunate in securing the services of Mr. Macnaghten, who has agreed to act as managing-director for a period of five years, and all bookings will be made in conjunction with the Macnaghten Vaudeville Circuit. Popular prices will be the rule, with two complete performances nightly. Building operations will commence immediately, and it is anticipated that the theatre will be ready for opening not later than the middle of December next. The site in St. James-street (commonly called Munn's Corner) has been agreed to be purchased from the Burnley Corporation by Mr. Macnaghten for the sum of £7,633, at which price the same will be transferred to the company. It is estimated that the cost of erection, including the price to be paid for the land and promotion and other expenses, will be £24,000.

At the Salford Police Court on Tuesday, William Spearman, formerly manager of the Islington Empire, was charged with absconding with £34, the belongings of Mr. Matt Raymond, 56, Great Queen-street, W.C. Prisoner was managing Mr. Raymond's picture show at the Royal Assembly Rooms, Salford, and was trusted with the amount named. He absconded in March, and was arrested in Liverpool. The Magistrate sentenced him to three months' hard labour.

Mr. Henry Kemble, the genial and popular manager of the Palace Theatre, Cork, is to be the recipient of a handsome testimonial at the end of the month. The subscriptions are being headed by the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor, the ex-Lord Mayor, and the élite of the town.

At the Palace, Manchester, on Friday, the 10th inst., a most success matinée performance was given in aid of the Crimean and Indian Mutiny veterans by the directors of the Manchester Palace of Varieties, Ltd., the following artists kindly giving their services : Mr. H. B. Irving, Mr. Frank Cochrane, Mr. Harry Rogerson, La Troupe Espagnole Juanitos, Kendrick and Laura, the Jollians, Leslie Paget, Lou Langley, the Attractas, Frank Hale, Monaco Girls, Alf. Ripon, Guy Ryder, Marie Blythe, J. C. Scatter, Gregson and Goodfellow, J. C. Morriss, Minnie Sharratt, Baker and Lindsay, A. Magnus, Nancy Wagstall, Helen McGregor, and Harry Willatts. Mr. Nelson Barry, late manager of the Palace, delivered, with touching effect, "Lest We Forget," lines specially written for the occasion by Mr. H. Ross Clyne.

Tom Owen, the popular Welsh comedian, will re-open the Kursaal, Mumbles, on Monday with a strong variety company.

Mr. Fred Coles' friends and admirers have resolved to recognise in a substantial manner their great appreciation of his sterling qualities and unfailing courtesy on the occasion of his regrettable retirement from the Lyric Theatre, Liverpool, owing to ill-health. An influential committee has been formed, and Mr. Joseph Barton, of 22, Walton-road, Kirkdale, is the hon secretary

Miss Florence Somers, comedienne, has been specially engaged to appear in her latest success, "The sunshade girl," at the London Pavilion and the Granville, Walham Green, on May 20.

Notwithstanding the fact that it is the week before the holidays, packed houses have ruled at the Grand, Clapham, where Mr. John Lawson is presenting The Unwritten Law. Miss Buena Bent repeats her triumph as Evelyn. Holborn Empire and the Canterbury see this money-maker next week.

That excellently written and admirably staged musical comedy sketch, A Lost Coon, terminates its present tour this week, at the Palace of Varieties, Hammersmith, and on Friday next Miss Dinah Morris and her company leave England to fulfil an engagement at the Coliseum, Vienna.

Olrac and Milton's classical gymnastic act will be seen in London in December, having been secured for the Gibbons halls.

The joint meeting of the members of the Amalgamated Musicians' Union (London branch) and the London Orchestral Association, held last Sunday in the Queen's Hall, was addressed by Mr. Harry Mountford, and among the other speakers were representative members of both societies, including Mr. Orcherton, secretary, L.O.A., Mr. J. B. Williams and C. Jesson, A.M.U. Mr. Taylor presided.

Mr. Jos O'Gorman, with his characteristic generosity, has subscribed £10 to the Harry Grell Fund.

Mr. R. G. Knowles will make his reappearance in this country at the Palace on June 3. It is Mr. Butt's intention to give Mr. Knowles an opportunity of elaborating his humorous lecture, "Old Worlds Through New Eyes," at a series of special Palace matinées.

Mr. Fred W. Millis, the popular ventriloquist, we are sorry to hear, has had to undergo rather a critical operation this week at the Gordon Hospital, Vauxhall Bridge-road, where he would be pleased to see any of his friends next week. The visiting days are Thursdays and Sundays from two to five p.m.

Miss Vesta Victoria still continues to "make good" in the States with Harrington and Tate's wonderfully popular "sequel" song, "I've told his missus all about him," and the sales of the American edition are "very fine and large," to the mutual satisfaction of the owners of the copyright, the Monte Carlo Publishing Co., and Mr. Fred Day (representing Messrs. Francis, Day, and Hunter in America).

Mr. Horace Goldin relates an amusing experience of his visit to the Chinese Theatre in San Francisco. In the lobby were a number of Chinese pedlars. From one of them the conjurer bought an orange and cut it open. With an exclamation of delighted surprise he drew a five-dollar gold piece from the pulp and held it up to the Chinaman. The latter's eyes bulged from their sockets, and a pained look of disappointment crossed his expressionless face. Goldin bought three more oranges, and from each he drew a shining fiver. By this time the perspiration rolled in beads down the Celestial's face, and when Goldin wanted to buy another half-dozen for a dollar he gathered up his stock, muttering, "Me no wantee sellee." A few minutes later he retired into a corner, and, with the air of a conspirator, began to cut up the oranges. One after another they went, and his look of disappointment became so tragic that Goldin had to solace him with a dollar.

Only a privileged few of the public have ever heard Mr. J. W. Rowley sing "The Village Blacksmith." For him, however, it is a peculiarly appropriate song, for he swung "his heavy sledge" forty years ago for the last time when he left the forge to get his living behind the footlights of the Alhambra Music Hall, Wakefield. Later—in 1872, as a matter of fact—he was billed at the Canterbury as one of the leading star comics of Great Britain.

The design of the bill was circular in form, and from the centre to the circumference the names of the six leading stars were printed, each name forming, as it were, a radius, so that none could predominate. The artists were George Leybourne, Arthur Lloyd, Henri Clark, Jolly John Nash, Fred Coyne, and J. W. Rowley. The bill was made out by Jolly John Nash, and below we print the design :—

As Mr. Rowley reflects, thirty-five years is a fair spell for a head-liner, though he can go much further back; for at the age of ten he sang and danced "The Perfect Cure" for the late J. H. Stead at the Casino, Leeds, where the Theatre Royal now stands. Even more remote than that, was his first appearance on the stage when he was just over one year old. He was carried on to the stage in Bradford in the famous legitimate play Pizarro. Jack Rowley is heading the bill this week at the County Theatre, Reading.

The latest additions to the Palace programme are Mr. R. H. Douglass, in his clever monologue entertainment, and Mr Jack Lorrimer, Scotch comedian. On Whitsun Monday a special matinée will be given, in which all the present features of the already crowded programme will be included, and also Miss Daisy Dormer and Frank and Jen Latona; but it is noteworthy to add that the "Musical Matinées" which were such a great feature last season, are now being repeated each Saturday, with a special selection from the well-trained orchestra.

Mr. Mark Sheridan, who is the chief attraction at the Hackney Empire next week, has played many rôles, and that of raconteur fits him exceedingly well. He tells a story of a Grantham theatre proprietor's farewell which will bear repeating, though it needs the quaint personality, the gestures, and expressions of the comedian to fully appreciate its humour. The little wooden theatre had existed a season, but the box-office had not been over-worked. The final night came, and the broken-hearted owner made his farewell speech. "I must thank you," he said, "for the way you have rallied round this temple of Thespis. It is not a great theatre, I admit, but it is the best I could afford. I thank you, people of Grantham, for the way you have patronised me; but, Heaven help me, if I had built this place on the Goodwin Sands I should have had more support from the shipwrecked sailors."

Miss Sable Fern, who is pursuing a triumphant tour in the provinces, has to do much strenuous work on account of the immense popularity of her songs—mostly from the pen of her husband, the clever song-writer, Mr. Frank Leo. Recently at Signor Pepi's house at Carlisle she was singing no fewer than eight songs each night

Very pleasant were the duties of the Brethren who were commanded by W.M. E. Golding, St. John's Lodge No. 795, to attend their duties at the regular Lodge held at the Roebuck Hotel, Tilehurst, on Wednesday last. Brother Golding is a director of the Camberwell Palace. All the Brethren attending the Lodge assembled under the clock at Paddington Station at 11.50 a.m., and proceeded by saloon carriage to Tilehurst. After a good lunch had been partaken of, the business of the Lodge was proceeded with. W.B. J. W. Martin, P.A.G.D.C., the Deputy Provincial Grand Master, was present. After the labours of the Lodge had ended, the Brethren went for a three hours' trip up the river, returning to dinner at 7 p.m. After an excellent repast an entertainment was provided by Bro. Frank Neiman, of the Chelsea Lodge, at which was introduced Mr. Ernest Leathly and Mr. Tom Mellor. A very pleasant evening having been spent, the Brethren returned by saloon carriage to Paddington Station.

A satisfactory and marked daily progress towards convalescence is reported from Falmouth of Mr. William Francis, Mr. David Day's partner being once more able to get about after his long and serious illness.

We hear of many cases of dire distress in the music hall profession, but of none sadder than that of the widow and children of the late Harry Kenyon. The poor fellow had been ailing for a long time, and his slender resources had become exhausted. He died last week of double pneumonia, leaving a widow and three children, and one about to be born, totally unprovided for.

The Music Hall Benevolent Fund came to the rescue, and buried poor Kenyon, and the Music Hall Ladies' Guild's Secretary, Miss Anna De Gray, has taken charge of the wife, and will look after her during her confinement. Miss De Gray is also doing what she can for the three children. The late Mr. Kenyon was a Brother of the St. George's Masonic Lodge, Glasgow, the Brethren of which, we hope, will come to the assistance of the widow and children. No reader of this paragraph who loves deeds of charity should pass it by without determining to help this deplorable case. Mr. F. H. Pedgrift, of The Era, will see that any contributions sent to him will be faithfully applied.

A great achievement was accomplished by the Empire Theatre with their Biograph at Kempton, when twelve operators took the whole of the race for the Jubilee, showing every incident of the struggle from start to finish. The picture is being shown every evening at the Empire.

Mr. Frank Fillis, the circus entrepreneur of South Africa, is about to float a company in the Rand for the erection of a hippodrome similar to the building in Cranbourn-street. As at the famous Moss house, aquatic spectacles will form part of the scheme of entertainment, and the floor of the arena will therefore be made to sink, and tanks will be arranged for the production of waterfalls.

Mrs. Brown-Potter, who has been so prominent in the music halls of late, in her sketch Mary, Queen of Scots, sails by the "Guika" from Southampton to-day, opening in Cape Town on Saturday, June 15. The engagement is for twenty weeks, and will take Mrs. Potter up to her engagement with Mr. Stoll, opening at the Hackney Empire in November next. Miss Dorothy Rundell is a prominent member of the company.

Mrs. Potter's répertoire includes The Duel, now running at the Garrick Theatre, and The Great Conspiracy, from the Duke of York's Theatre, both of which will be seen later on the Moss-Stoll tour. The Union-Castle authorities have given the popular actress special facilities for rehearsing on board, for which excellent arrangements have been made by Mr. Gibb.

Disappointment has been rife this week in Birmingham at the absence of Miss Marie Loftus, who was to have been at the Empire, but was unable to appear through severe hoarseness. Miss Loftus may take comfort from the fact that her absence has been keenly felt by the Birmingham public, who have never wavered in their support and admiration of the popular comedienne.

Mr. Pony Moore has suffered a severe bereavement in the death of his eldest daughter, Mrs. Mary Jane Rackstraw, who passed away on Saturday last after a long illness, which she bore with great patience. The remains of the deceased lady were interred in the family grave in Brompton Cemetery on Wednesday. Among those at the graveside, and who also sent wreaths were :—Geo. Rackstraw, sen. (husband), Mr. G. W. and Mrs. Moore, Mrs. Eugene Stratton (sister), Mr. and Mrs. G. Rackstraw, jun., Miss Rackstraw, Mrs. Charles Mitchell (sister), the Misses Sharpe, Miss Lancaster, Mr. and Mrs. Youngman, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Nutt, Mr. Geo. Newman, Mr. John Hannow, and Mr. and Mrs. Joe Elvin.

The Chief Constable of Hull made three visits to the Hull Hippodrome on the occasion of a recent exhibition of living statuary there, and as a result of his conversation with Mr. Graham (the manager), that gentleman volunteered to withdraw the exhibition.

It is with much regret that we have to chronicle the death, which occurred on May 6 at Maesteg, South Wales, of Mrs. W. Scott, the wife of Captain Scott, of circus fame. The deceased lady was one of the oldest of the circus stock, and within a few days of her demise took a very prominent part in the management of their circus, now touring through Wales.

The funeral took place at Maesteg, South Wales, and was attended by the bereaved family and a large circle of friends. A number of beautiful wreaths were sent, including one from her daughters, Mrs. E. Hanneford, Mrs. C. Beckett, and Mrs. R. Yelding; the Bros. Scott; artists and band of Scott's Circus; artists and band of Hanneford's Circus; manager and staff Poole's Theatre, Maesteg; Mr. and Mrs. Sanders; Mrs. Kinder; Mrs. Lewis; L. Williams and staff.

English and French business men cordially fraternised at the Empire on Friday night (the 10th), when was given a great gala performance, to which the City of London International Commercial Association had invited the Comité Républicain du Commerce de l'Industrie et de l'Agriculture. Everywhere reigned merriment and goodwill and enthusiasm. Beautiful flowers in the French national colours embellished stalls, boxes, and circle; the Union Jack and the Tricolour were on all sides. It was a memorable scene—an evening to remember with gratitude, and when the first few bars of the "Marseillaise" were heard one felt indeed that another milestone on the road to complete understanding had been passed.

The latest quotations for music hall shares are as follow :—Alhambra, 1½; Canterbury, ½; Empire (15s. paid) 1⅝, ditto (10s. paid) 1½; London Pavilion Ordinary 4¾, ditto Preferred 5; London Coliseum, ⅜; Metropolitan, ⅝; Moss' Empire 4⅞, ditto 5 per cent. Mr. Fred Winn is now out of all danger, and desires through our columns to return thanks to his friends for the many letters and telegrams of congratulation and inquiry sent to him. The Light in the Window is still burning.

The 511th meeting of the Executive Committee of the Music Hall Artists' Railway Association was held on Wednesday afternoon, when the following members were present : Messrs. Joe O'Gorman, W. H. Clemart, Harry Blake, Harry Bancroft, Charles Coborn, J. W. Cragg, Chas. McConnell, Arthur Rigby, Bernard Stavordale, Albert Voyce, Jeff Vendome, and C. Douglas Stuart (secretary). Mr. O'Gorman presided for a portion of the proceedings, and Mr. Harry Blake afterwards. On the proposition of Mr. Clemart, seconded by Mr. McConnell, it was unanimously decided to send telegrams of condolence from the committee to Mrs. Payne, Mr. Walter Payne, and Mrs. Walter Gibbons on the sad death of Mr. George Adney Payne. The offer of the Variety Artistes' Federation to share in the expenses of the Association's offices in Glasgow was accepted. Mr. A. Dieppie, of the Deerhound Hotel, Coatbridge, was appointed as agent of the Association in that town.

Miss Daisy James, the popular variety comedienne and representative of the Gibson girl on the lesser stage, is sailing for America on Saturday next, from Southampton.

Mr. J. C. Coe has been holding an amateur carnival this week at the Palace of Varieties, Hammersmith, and several excellent new turns have been discovered. To-night (Saturday) the final trial will be heard, and prizes distributed to the successful competitors.

"The Unwritten Law," is the chief attraction of the Canterbury Whitsuntide bill. Mr. John Lawson will appear with Miss Buena Bent in the sensational sketch, which is said to depict, "with the utmost fidelity, the unparalleled prodigality of man."

Mr. Alec Hurley has postponed the production of his forthcoming Jap-coster musical comedietta, by Messrs. Harrington and Tate, entitled Cockneys in Japan, till a few weeks after Whitsun, so that this important production may be adequately rehearsed and the "business" fully worked up before presentation in the West End.

Mr. Augustus Greco has now recovered from his indisposition, and on Monday his many friends will be pleased to see him again in the conductor's chair at the Stratford Empire. During his illness the orchestra has been directed by his brother, Walter Greco.

Miss Ethel Ra-Leslie, who finishes to-night her sixth Moss and Stoll tour, commences her London season on Monday. Her tour has been one continued success. After fulfilling her London engagements Miss Ra-Leslie will take a well-earned rest on the Continent, previous to rehearsing her great scena.

We regret to announce the death, on Thursday morning, May 9, of Mrs. Thiel, known professionally as Miss Nellie Welling, wife of Leonard Thiel, at Milford, Surrey. The deceased lady was a niece of Mr. H. T. Brickwell, formerly of the Garrick Theatre, and had starred as Lady Holyrood in Florodora with the late E. J. Lonnen. She had also considerable experience of the halls. She was connected with Thiel's "Pom-Poms" up to last Christmas, at which time she was taken ill, death being due to consumption. The funeral took place on Tuesday from 13, Anhalt-road, Albert Bridge road, S.W., the body being interred at Brompton Cemetery. Much sympathy will be felt for Mr. Thiel, who was called hastily from an engagement in the North, only to arrive two hours after his wife's death.

Mr. James McCarthy, the resident-manager of the Britannia, by the courtesy of Messrs. Barrasford and Macnaghten, was accorded a well-deserved benefit on Friday, May 10. At both houses crowded audiences testified to the popularity of the manager. Mr. Thomas Barrasford, although present, delegated to Mr. Fred Baugh the duty of making the presentation of numerous tokens of esteem, amongst which were a gold watch and medal, presented by Messrs. Barrasford and Macnaghten, a handsome gold Albert by the staff, a gold ring by Mr. Fred Baugh, a silver-mounted umbrella by the supers engaged, an umbrella from Messrs. Seaman and Hayes, and a substantial cheque running into three figures as the result of the benefit. "Mac" received telegrams from a large number of the leading professionals who were unable to be present. Amongst the extra turns who appeared were Mr. Charles Austin, Mr. and Mrs. St. John, Messrs. Seamen and Hayes, the Boy Kennedy, Mr. David O'Toole, and several others.

Miss Nellie Ridgway, who has just arrived from a tour round the world, is styled a comedienne in mid-air. She sings and dances on a wire in various costumes, and her novel methods have made her a very great favourite at the Empire, Camberwell. Messrs. Neiman and Co. are to be congratulated on obtaining so clever a client.

Mr. Fred Lindsay, who is to appear at the London Hippodrome on Monday, is to give a display of what in Australian parlance is called "whip-cracking." Mr. Lindsay is an Australian born and bred, and is not in any way connected with the stage; but the Hippodrome management have induced him, solely on account of the great interest taken in Colonial affairs at the moment, to give an exposition of the handling of the Australian stock whip. Nowhere in the world can another man be found who can even approach the skill of this gentleman. With his whip at twenty-five feet distance Mr. Lindsay can cut in half a cigarette, held in the mouth of an attendant. At a similar range he can extinguish a lighted candle, and then with a different crack cut the candle in half. He takes the ash off a cigar whilst it is being smoked, but his lash is nevertheless quite harmless when he wishes to make it so. For instance, he flogs a man with terrific force without hurting him. Then he can tie his whip in a knot round a man's arm. This act, if unskilfully performed, would cut the arm off. As it is, the man does not even feel it. The whip wielded by Mr. Lindsay cuts an ordinary wine bottle in two as cleanly as though it had been done by machinery.

Mr. Albert Toft, the eminent sculptor, has prepared for the London Hippodrome a series of representations of living statuary, entitled "Makers of History." Historical episodes in the lives of soldiers, sailors, statesmen, politicians, and actors will be realised by living models amidst appropriate surroundings. For instance, Lord Beaconsfield's immortal phrase, "Peace with Honour," will be dealt with in a very original way; and the late Sir Henry Irving, whose genius raised the actor's art to a glorious position in all English-speaking countries, will receive at Mr. Toft's hands one of the most remarkable appreciations on record.

Up to the present time Britain has neglected to raise a monument to the memory of one of her most gallant and illustrious sons. Mr. Toft will rectify this grave omission. "He gave his country an Empire and the people of that Empire peace and justice." The hero of this tribute is, of course, Lord Clive, maker of British India. But it is not only with makers of history in the past that Mr. Toft will deal. Men of the present time whose work the newspapers of to-day immortalise will have a share of his attention. The Right Hon. John Burns, for instance, will be portrayed marching at the head of a procession of London dockers to Trafalgar-square on the afternoon of the ever-memorable Nov. 13, 1887. The various stage settings in which the statuary will be shown are the invention of Mr. Frank Parker.

Mr. Albert Toft, whose statue of "Spring" ornaments the Birmingham Art Gallery, has three exhibits—the greatest number allowed—in this year's Academy. Born at Birmingham forty-five years ago, Mr. Toft gained a National Scholarship at the Newcastle-under-Lyme School of Art at the age of seventeen. He then studied at the Royal College of Art, London, and was shortly after apprenticed to Josiah Wedgwood and Sons at Etruria as a pottery modeller. Mr. Toft's works have places in the permanent collections of Birmingham, Newcastle, Liverpool, Leamington, Nottingham, and Bamra, India. His busts include those of the late W. E. Gladstone, Cunningham Grahame, Seymour Hicks, Ellaline Terriss, Winifred Emery, and many others. The necessary introductory matter for Mr. Toft's act has been written by Mr. Fred Bowyer.

SONGS, WRITERS, AND SINGERS.

If anything was further needed to show the tenacious hold that Messrs. Francis and Day's songs now have on the great American music-loving public, the encomiums everywhere of the Press of that country would be a clinching settlement to doubters, and that important organ the Chicago Sunday Examiner, in a recent issue, prints the following remarks on the subject:—

"The new vogue of comic songs started in with 'Waiting at the Church,' which Miss Vesta Victoria introduced with such tremendous success, and which she has more than duplicated this year with her famous 'Poor John.' Both songs are published by Francis and Day, who also issue the story song, with its delicately pointed finish, as introduced by Miss Alice Lloyd, typified by her 'Tourist and the Maid,' 'May, May, May,' &c. But the greatest surprise of all to the publishing world was that Francis, Day, and Hunter should capture a purely American 'hit' in the new song written by the famous American team of Jerome and Schwartz, entitled, "My Irish Rosie.' It was conceded that the English house might introduce English novelties successfully, but that they should by American methods make an American song famous in Chicago, New York, and Boston within the space of a few weeks was the unexpected—which happened."

On Monday last Miss Ruby Helder, the lady with the phenomenal voice, created quite a sensation at the Empire by her rendering of Edward Montagu's "For King and Sireland," the new Imperial Anthem. From so delicate and frail-looking an artist the great house expected nothing more out of the ordinary than a thin soprano voice, and the astonishment can be better guessed than imagined when the powerful tones of a pure baritone filled the vast auditorium. At the conclusion of the stirring number, specially written in honour of the visit of the Colonial Premiers to the Motherland, Miss Helder was recalled twice, and in response to an imperative recall appeared before the curtain yet again. On the Stoll tour that splendid artist, Mr. Ian Colquhoun, is singing the song with acclamation. It is published by Messrs. Francis and Day.

Mr. Harry Randall's latest songs, "No More gardening out of the house for me!" and "All he's left me is the old cracked basin that we strain the 'taturs in," the latter by T. W. Connor, are about to be published by Mr. David Day's firm. Mr. Randall is now safely installed in a new and beautiful home West Hampstead way.

Mr. Mark Sheridan has acquired three songs from the pens of Alf Rick and Maurice Scott, to wit, "There's no harm in kissing a lady," "Out came my little box of ointment," and "Song Mixtures." The chorus song written by the same writers entitled "Swing me higher, Obadiah," is going great in the hands of Miss May Mars and Miss Mabel Thorne. It is published by the Star Music Publishing Company.

Among the latest songs acquired by the Shapiro, Von Tilzer Music Co., Ltd., are "He's one of the boys in our Police Force" and "Mary from Tipperary" (Percy Edgar and Kenneth Lyle), both of which will be introduced by Miss Katie Butler; "Boys will be boys," by Cecil Liddon, which is being featured with great success by Miss Mabel Thorne; and another song by those prolific writers, Lawrance, Mellor, and Gifford, entitled "Way down the old canal."

"Let Me Return to Dreamland" is the title of a new ballad written and composed by Percy Edgar and Cecil Lidden. Arthur Aldridge will shortly introduce this song at the London Pavilion. This charming number is of the "free" variety, and will be published by Shapiro, Von Tilzer.

Miss May Mars has been scoring nightly at the Oxford with her new song, "In my Aeroplane for two" (a honeymoon in the sky). The Shapiro, Von Tilzer Co. have secured the publishing rights.

Miss May Mars has also been scoring heavily this week with Castling and Godfrey's dainty Indian song, "You shall have a Shalimar." The Star Music Co. are the publishers.

At the Palace, Stoke Newington, Miss Dora Lyric, the popular comedienne, made a really big hit with Harry Castling and Maurice Scott's ditty, "What's the good of knocking at an empty house?" This is another of the Star Music Co.'s successful sixpenny editions.

Miss Nell Emerald, who has been delighting Metropolitan audiences by her vivacious rendering of Messrs. Francis and Day's coon number, "Push off, Mr. Johnson," is about to essay an entirely new number, published by the same house, the music by Herman E. Darewski, jun., the name of which is "This coon ain't a-gwine home no more," an exemplification of the Shakespearean line, "Conscience doth make cowards of us all."

Mme. Patti on Wednesday last, just prior to her departure for Paris, was, at her hotel, presented by little Max Darewski with a specially printed copy on thick art paper of "I dreamed of a beautiful garden," the song specially composed for the great diva by the youthful genius, and embellished with a reproduction of the portrait of herself presented by the cantatrice to the boy. The song is published by Messrs. Francis and Day.

Herr Julian W. Kandt's charming valse lente, "Toujours à Toi," will be played constantly by the composer's band at Weston-super-Mare during the present season, and the publishers, the Monte Carlo Publishing Co., who are issuing this number in their "Sixpenny Successes" series, are to be congratulated on having secured one of the potential musical "winners" of the present year.

Messrs. John P. Harrington and Jas. W. Tate, who have supplied Little Tich with his new character study, "The General," which this talented artist purposes producing at all his engagements next week, are busily engaged on several other novelties for the same performer, particularly on a successor to the "Serpentine song, "My sweetheart had been in the sun" (also written by Mr. Harrington), which Mr. Tich so long found an admirable vehicle for his vocal and terpsichorean eccentricities.

No. 74 of the Monte Carlo Publishing Co.'s "Sixpenny Successes" series is a most novel song of the Swiss Tyrol, recording the adventures of a young English tourist, who, encountering a beautiful "Switzer" maiden tending her goats in the picturesque land of William Tell, is so captivated by her jödelling powers that he straightway proceeds to fall in love with her, and proposes marriage, with (to him) most satisfactory results. This daintily romantic number, which is certain to be one of the "hits" of the coming season, is entitled "Dear little Tyrolese," and is written and composed by Messrs. John P. Harrington and Jas. W. Tate.

The Monte Carlo Publishing Co. have, during the past week, accepted from Messrs. Ballard Macdonald and Donovan Meher (who were responsible for the same firm's sterling success, "My tiny firefly") no fewer than four new songs, two of which they are issuing immediately, viz., "Will of the wisp" (an old title in a new setting), and "Goo, Goo," which latter is being specially "featured" by Misses Dorothy L. Clarke and Clarice Mayne.

DEATH OF MR. ADNEY PAYNE.

The news of the death of Mr. George Adney Payne was read with consternation and keen regret in the evening papers on Wednesday; and artist and proprietor must equally deplore the great loss the world of the halls sustains in the death of one who has been in the forefront of variety enterprise for the last thirty years. Though the deceased gentleman met with such severe injuries in the motor accident of Sunday, May 5, at Tunbridge Wells, it was felt that his splendid constitution would pull him through; and Mrs. Payne, who nursed him to the end, in her letter to us last week was able to write both hopefully and cheerfully of the rapid improvement he was making. This continued until Wednesday morning early, when, in Mrs. Payne's own words in her last touching letter to us, "He was looking so well that the doctor had promised he should be put on a couch which was being prepared for him in the adjoining room. I was saying how lovely it would be to see him sitting up, and he was quite like his dear old self. His breakfast came up about twenty minutes past nine, when he ate and enjoyed a bit of sole. After he had finished breakfast I was sitting by his side eating mine when he commenced to breathe heavily and rapidly got worse. The doctor was summoned immediately, and he saw at once that my poor darling was sinking. Ten minutes afterwards he passed away peacefully with his hand in mine. I am sure that was his one wish—to die quickly and peacefully. I cannot realise he is dead. We were so happy! I seem to hear his little whistle calling me, as he did not like me to move from his side. All his relatives had been to see him, and all his children. I am so thankful to think of this.

THE LATE MR. GEORGE ADNEY PAYNE.

I do pray that I shall bear up. God rest his soul, his end was peace."

It is with a profound sense of the distress that is universally felt in the world of entertainment that the writer pens some particulars of the striking and strenuous career that has been cut short so tragically. George Adney Payne, who was born in 1846 in the camp at the Curragh, was the son of a soldier, his father being a quartermaster-sergeant in the Scots Greys, a famous regiment in which the son enlisted. The commercial instinct, however, caused him to feel the irksomeness of barrack life, though he loved regimental athletics, and became an excellent boxer and an expert swordsman. He therefore left the Army, and joined his father in the wine trade at Greenwich. Here he met Charley Crowder, who had been running the Rose and Crown (purchased by him from J. F. Emmerton in 1870) as a superior free-and-easy. Mr. Crowder persuaded young Payne to join him, and, the Greenwich hall being sold to Mr. A. A. Hurley, the two purchased for £25,000 from Mr. William Lusby the "winter and summer palace" named after that gentleman that he had built on the Eagle Gardens in the Mile End-road. This was in 1878. Lusby's was the largest music hall in the East, and when burnt down in 1884 it was immediately rebuilt, and renamed the Paragon. In 1882 Crowder and Payne bought the Canterbury, which they re-opened on Nov. 20 of that year. The Canterbury had been in a bad way since the departure of Mr. Edwin Villiers. It was secured by a company, for which Mr. James Guiver was manager. That gentleman resigned on July 2, 1881, and was succeeded by Mr. John Baum, who was responsible for some excellent productions of ballet. The Crowder and Payne régime undoubtedly brought prosperity to it. Mr. Crowder's health failing, the Canterbury and Paragon were turned into a company, with Mr. Payne as managing-director.

In the early nineties Mr. Payne became associated with Mr. Henry Newson-Smith, who may be said to have conceived the germ of the Syndicate, when he assisted Mr. Edwin Villiers in the formation of a company to purchase the London Pavilion. The music hall boom, as it was called, had just begun to make its influence felt, and there was a good deal of reckless speculation. With the popularity of the halls growing apace it was not to be wondered at that the Strand—the great amusement thoroughfare—was chosen for the site of the Tivoli, built and opened on May 24, 1890. The new establishment, placed under the management of Mr. F. J. Potter, who came from the Gaiety, was not a success, and was sold by the order of the mortgagees at the Mart in 1891, when Mr. Adney Payne and Mr. Newson-Smith purchased it. A company was formed under the title of the New Tivoli (Limited), and the hall was reopened on July 4, under a working agreement with the London Pavilion, Mr. Charles Morton being chosen as the manager.

In 1892 Mr. James Kirk, a prominent licensed victualler who had bought in October, 1890, the nineteen years' lease of the Oxford for £27,100, obtained a considerable extension of that lease, and then disposed of the property to the Syndicate governing the Tivoli and London Pavilion. The old Oxford was pulled down, rebuilt, and reopened on Jan. 31, 1893. Thus was established the foundation of the Syndicate, a combination destined, in London at least, to work a revolution in the conduct of variety establishments and in the style of entertainments given thereat.

The retirement of Mr. Newson-Smith in 1895 brought Mr. Payne into greater prominence, and his business capacity, energy, experience, and strong personality singled him out as the guiding spirit of modern music hall enterprise. It is singular, therefore, to read at the present day an account of an extraordinary general meeting of the Oxford, Limited, specially convened to consider a resolution for the removal of Mr. Payne's name from the list of directors. The motion was very properly rejected by a large majority.

In January, 1897, special honour was paid to Mr. Payne by proprietors and the profession on the occasion of his jubilee. On the 26th of that month he gave a large party at his residence at Tulse Hill, and was presented with a fine collection of books, the presentation being made by Mr. Henri Gros. The enterprise of the deceased gentleman in the suburbs has been shared by others; and we need only refer to it by mentioning that at the time of his death he was managing-director of the Oxford, the Tivoli, the Canterbury, and the Paragon, and was joint managing-director with Mr. Henri Gros of the Chelsea Palace, the Euston, the South London Palace, the Walthamstow Palace, and the East Ham Palace. In addition, he was chairman of the company owning the Metropolitan, and a director of the Empress, Brixton.

His name recently came prominently before the public in connection with the music hall war, the group of houses controlled by the syndicate of which he was the head being picketed by the V.A.F. on the night after those of his son-in-law, Mr. Walter Gibbons, had received similar treatment. He was twice married. When he came of age he wedded Miss Marian Ford, the daughter of a gas engineer, by whom he had one son, Mr. Walter Payne, and three daughters, the eldest of whom is Mrs. Walter Gibbons. In November, 1898, he married Miss Ethel Earle.

He was once questioned by an interviewer about his hobbies. "Work," was the reply. But Mr. Payne always loved his days of training with the Hertfordshire Yeomanry, of which he was a member for seventeen years, and was proud of being the winner of thirty prizes for the best turned-out man and horse. Of late years he had taken much interest in horticulture and fruit-growing, and was a keen picture buyer, as the walls of his beautiful house, St. Malo, Herne Bay, testify. He was on the best of terms with his managers, whom he met every Friday at his offices at Durham House-street, and the kindness and consideration of "the guv'nor," as he was affectionately called by them, will be never forgotten.

The inquest on Mr. Adney Payne was held on Thursday evening at the Mount Ephraim Hotel, Tunbridge Wells, where the deceased gentleman was taken after meeting with a motor-car accident last Sunday week. Although severely injured, he had made very fair progress until Wednesday morning, when he suddenly passed away at breakfast. Mr. T. Buss was the Coroner, and Mr. Philip Ellis was chosen foreman of the jury.

The widow, Mrs. Ethel Adney Payne, said that on the 5th inst. she, in company with her husband and some friends, left Herne Bay in a motor-car. Witness was driving.

The Coroner: Have you any experience of driving motor-cars?—I have driven about 11,000 miles.

Continuing, Mrs. Payne said that nothing happened on the road down to Tunbridge Wells.

The Coroner: When you were approaching the point at which the accident occurred, did anything happen to distract your attention?

Witness replied that she was coming by Kingswood estate when a cyclist came out of a road on the left-hand side. In trying to avoid him she ran into the bank. She saw it would be sure death for the cyclist if she did not run into the bank. The car turned over, and her husband was pinned underneath.

The Coroner: Was your husband riding behind you?—He was sitting at my side.

What part of the road were you in?—I was in the middle of the road. I had already slowed up, because I was very particular about not making a dust for the people coming from church.

Did you notice any other traffic at the time?—No; there was nothing to confuse me.

And the car answered to your movement?—Yes. I had to take the car round rather quickly to avoid the cyclist. I tried to avoid him, with the result that the car overturned on the bank.

Your husband was pinned under you, and could not extricate himself?—I could not tell you that. I was on my back. I could not move.

You had taken that road before?—Yes, we had been there a dozen times.

You were not at all confused at that time?—Oh, no.

Your husband was brought here, and was going on well until yesterday, when he unfortunately died?—Yes.

The Foreman: You had already reduced speed before you saw the cyclist?—Yes.

Had you not reduced speed you would have gone into the people who were walking at the time?—Well, I do not say we should have done that. I was blowing the hooter at the time.

Continuing, the witness said she was going at nine miles an hour when the car turned over. One of the wheels broke.

John Ernest Jewell, who was in the car at the time, said that nothing happened on the way until they got to Pembury-road. The pace was about eighteen or twenty miles. He had driven with Mrs. Payne on several occasions, and had never known her to have an accident before. He was sitting behind the driver. Witness did not see the cyclist because he was talking to Dr. Hill at the time. The outer cover of the wheel broke when the car turned over. Mrs. Payne increased the speed of the car just before the accident to avoid the cyclist.

William Bridger, the cyclist, said he was riding out of Kingswood-road into Pembury-road at about eighteen miles an hour. He did not see the car until it was close on him, and did not hear any hooter sounded. The angle was rather dangerous at that spot. The car escaped him altogether. He did not ring his bell at the corner, but had done so previously half-way down the road.

Thomas Scott deposed to hearing a shout, and looking up saw the car almost on top of him. He was sitting on a seat close to the corner at the time. He heard no sound of a hooter.

Police-constable Taylor stated that he saw the car coming down the road, and noticed the cyclist proceeding from Kingswood-road. The car, in turning to avoid the cyclist, was completely overturned on the bank. The cyclist appeared to have lost his nerve.

Dr. Vise gave medical evidence. He rendered first aid to Mr. Payne, and subsequently found that he had broken three ribs and had internal injuries. He attributed the sudden death of Mr. Payne, after making several days' satisfactory progress, to a clot of blood on the heart.

A verdict of accidental death was recorded.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—The loss of Mr. George Adney Payne will, I am sure, come as a great blow to the majority of artists. To me this week in May, 1907, will not readily be forgotten, for in it I have lost poor Henry Dundas and George Adney Payne, the two men who first brought me forward as a writer, viz., in The Daughter of England, at the Canterbury years ago. C'est ainsi qu'en partant, je vous fais mes adieux. HERBERT SHELLEY.

Empire Theatre, Dublin, May 16.

Miss Maud Buchanan, lately playing leads with Mr. Percy Norman and Mr. J. A. Campbell, and Mr. Charles R. Hann, nephew of Walter Hann, the well-known scenic artist, and late of the Adelphi Theatre, &c., will shortly produce for the halls an entirely new and original comedy sketch, abounding in humorous situations, entitled Ghosts.

Mr. Sydney Payne, who has been touring on the Moss and Stoll circuit during the winter as conductor for Betta the Gipsy, has been specially engaged by Mme. Esty to conduct her Trovatore scene at the opening of the Portsmouth Hippodrome on Monday next.

Sandy McNab, Scotch comedian, and his company, in their Scotch sketch The Egyptian Mummy, open on the Stoll tour on the 27th inst.

THE BIOSCOPE IN EDUCATION.

When first introduced to the public notice the cinematograph was very much regarded as a scientific device by means of which an audience, old or young, could be amused for a more or less brief period. And if the apparatus had been confined to the purposes of amusement its popularity might, perhaps, have waned; but new uses have been found for it. In a little book just published by Mr. Charles Urban, F.Z.S., there are set forth a variety of the uses to which the instrument may be applied to "science, education, and matters of State." This seems a pretty wide claim, but it is perfectly justified by Mr. Urban's book. Former cinematographic exhibitions of individual scientific subjects in places of amusement were intended as an introduction, and served their purpose in attracting and compelling the attention of scientists and experts. So, when a demonstration is made of some elaborate physical or chemical experiment, if a series of photographs be taken by suitable apparatus, we can have endless reproductions of experiments, many of which are so costly or intricate as to preclude their production on ordinary lecture tables. The perfected cinematograph of to-day secures 1920 pictures a minute, thus recording the very slightest motion of the demonstrator and his subject, and the processes, magnified and projected with absolute accuracy, and with a sharpness unexcelled by any still photograph, are invaluable to students who have no opportunities of witnessing the actual demonstrations or phenomena.

Even in elementary education the possibilities are enormous. Let us take the subject of geography, for instance, which used to consist simply of the assimilation by the pupil of long series of names and figures. By the use of the cinematograph the teacher can in very truth carry his scholars round the world from China to Peru. Instead of learning dry, unmeaning facts, every lesson is linked on to a living representation of the country and the people to which the lesson applies. So also with history. With films as varied as a library of books, pupils need not read about historical scenes: they can see them actually in progress. All the advantages of a well-mounted historical play, or such pageants as those of Sherborne and Warwick, Jeanne d'Arc, the Passion Play, &c., can be placed at the disposition of every child in our public schools.

Again, there is a wide field in the scientific world as applied to our naval and military matters. Thus, the launching of a great battleship is a matter of extreme study on the part of her designers. By means of the cinematograph an absolutely accurate record can be obtained of the movements of the hull from the time the dog-shores are knocked away until she is water-borne. To effect this, two cameras, at least, are trained on the vessel to be launched, one covering a sweeping view of the vessel from the bow end, and the other from the stern; both cameras are located so that every movement attending the work is covered as much as it possibly can be, so that in case of accident the blame, if any, may be properly placed.

As regards the Army, the authorities, recognising the advantages of the cinematograph as a powerful agent in recruiting, have subsidised one or more of the caterers for public amusement who exhibit pictures of both services, and the importance of the cinematograph in demonstration of cadet training, firing, and physical exercises is fully recognised by Field-Marshal Earl Roberts, who encourages its adoption in every possible way, as a means of improving the soldier's knowledge of his calling.

The field of medical science, too, promises to afford a wide scope for the use of the apparatus. One of the most important parts of the training of a doctor is the witnessing of operations. The cinematograph now renders it possible to reproduce endlessly, under circumstances which permit of most close and leisurely study, scenes which formerly could only be witnessed in the operating theatres of our hospitals.

The secrets of the microscopic world are gradually being revealed, and the wonderful influence which bacteria exercise on our everyday existence is being brought home to us. Utilised in conjunction with the cinematograph projector, germs and microbes, magnified to gigantic dimensions, are shown in full activity. The magnification varies from 2,000,000 to 76,000,000 times, according to the extent of magnification on the film, which varies from 25 to 850 diameters. In its application to the study of the life history of insects the cinematograph is of the first importance to the Board of Agriculture, to horticulturists, and to agriculturists. By its means are recorded, not only the transformations from the egg to the perfect stages of the insect's existence, but also can be witnessed the manner in which, at different stages, it attacks crops. Great facility is given, too, by its means, to the study of the movements of insects and plants in relation to special adaptation and environment.

These, then, are a few of the very interesting developments of the fascinating study of the use of the cinematograph to which Mr. Urban directs attention in his book. And those immense educational spheres which have been hitherto confined to individual students will be now brought realistically before large audiences.

Mr. W. V. Frame, known as "Hoochay," opens his Stoll tour on Monday at the Empire, in "Auld Reekie," and then crosses the Border to Manchester.

Miss Amy Marsden, who has been dangerously ill with peritonitis, is progressing favourably, and will resume business on June 10, on the Stoll tour.

"The Era" can be obtained at the principal bookstalls throughout the provinces.

"CARMENCITA" AT THE OXFORD.

Musical Tragedietta, adapted from the French of Prosper Merimée by Louis Cohen, incidental music and songs composed by Herman Finck, produced at the Oxford, on Monday, May 13.

Don José .....Mr. Sidney Watson
Garcia .....Mr. Wilfred Howard
Dancaire .....Mr. Jamie Dallas
Lucas .....Mr. E. A. Hill-Mitchelson
La Carmencita .....Miss Amy Augarde

Even before the days of Æschylus and Euripides the elemental human instincts of love, hatred, and revenge were favoured subjects for tragic drama; and if the moderns, in their treatment of the triad of passions, have lost much of the dignity of the ancient Greek authors, they have added something of picturesqueness and romance. These qualities are to be found in Prosper Merimée's story of Carmen, the strength of which is well reflected in Georges Bizet's score, the beauty of which alas! was only fully recognised after his death. Mr. Louis Cohen, taking the last phase of the story apparently, has called his adaptation of it Carmencita, and this was produced with undoubted success at the Oxford on Monday evening. The volatile and reckless cigarette-maker, who trifles with man's love as a mere plaything, has come under the malign influence of Garcia, a hideous one-eyed gipsy, who uses her as a decoy to rob victims, and then shares with her the lucre acquired by her ill-regulated seductiveness. While she is bargaining with the Romany for her share of the plunder Don José, the erstwhile smart officer, stands apart, a sullen figure. He is roused from his apathy by the taunts of Carmen and the gipsy, and sits down to cards. A fierce quarrel results in a knife duel between the latter and Don José, who returns the victor in time to witness an interview between Carmencita and her latest lover, the bull-fighter. The latter escapes, and with the entrance of the discarded one upbraidings and imprecations fill the air. Don José, roused to fury by Carmencita's declaration that she hates him, stabs her to death, the bull-fighter rushing in too late to save her. On this tragic ending the curtain falls.

In the name-part Miss Amy Augarde has a part entirely after her own heart. The seductiveness and recklessness of Carmencita are admirably limned in the earlier phase of Mr. Cohen's powerful sketch, and the passion and fury which precede the final catastrophe are no less insisted on by the actress, who looks very charming in a picturesque Spanish costume. As a singer Miss Augarde does complete justice to the two numbers written for her by Mr. Herman Finck, in whose score we find the true Iberian lilt and entrain, and especially is this the case in the opening number. The melody of the card song, in which Carmencita foresees her doom, is plaintive in character. Mr. Sidney Watson as the moody lover capably handles a difficult part; Mr. Wilfred Howard makes a truculent Garcia; Mr. Jamie Dallas a humorous Dancaire, and Mr. E. A. Hill-Mitchelson an effective Lucas. The little tragedy is well mounted, and its production under the capable direction of Mr. Blyth-Pratt was a complete success on Monday, the strong situations holding the audience completely. Mr. Louis Cohen, who has learnt how to write melodrama in that best of all schools—experience—has added another to the limited number of good sketches with music, and, if we mistake not, we have in Mr. Herman Finck a promising young composer, who only requires his opportunity to turn out a very successful comic opera. The music of the piece was well directed by Mr. George Burgess, the orchestral chief at the Oxford.

"IN AT THE FINISH."

Frace, by Nagi Laczi, produced at Hammersmith Palace of Varieties, on Monday, May 13.

Mlle. D'Alberg's great success in a speechless drama has apparently tempted her to try a similar experiment with a farce, and a large amount of success attended the production of the above sketch on Monday last. The action takes place in an actress's boudoir, in which a bath is hidden by a screen. The lady has two fervent admirers, one a Count and the other a Pierrot. Her maid intimates to the Count that he can only hope for some encouragement from her mistress if he gives her (the actress) something substantial in the way of presents. He departs, and the Pierrot enters and receives a similar suggestion—this time from the actress herself. The Pierrot, being left alone, partially attires himself as a female and hides in the bath-room. The Count returns, bringing with him a bouquet and several rings and bracelets. The Pierrot's hands appear from between the curtains, and on them the Count, thinking they are the actress's, places the rings and bracelets. A knock at the door causes the Pierrot to come out, and he hides the Count in the bath-room. As the actress appears Pierrot dashes forward and presents her with the jewellery he has just collected from the Count, and the curtain falls on the Pierrot receiving the reward of the actress's love, while the Count is discovered in the bath with the sprinkler showering water upon him.

Mr. Cecil Kyrlie makes a humorous and grotesque Count, and Mr. Stephen Hall is a smart Pierrot. The actress is capably performed by Miss Ethel Eden, and Miss Berenice Maxwell makes a pert and vivacious maid. Mr. Algernon H. Linde has composed the incidental music, which is most appropriate, the music fitting in excellently with the action of the sketch.

THE HARRY GRELL FUND.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—Will you kindly grant us space in your valuable paper to put the following case before our brother and sister artists?

Mr. Harry Grell, formerly of Grell and Gray, has been unable during the past year to work through illness. This illness culminated on Friday, April 26, in paralysis of the brain, which has necessitated his removal to Brook-street Infirmary. He has a wife and two daughters, aged five and ten respectively, entirely dependent on him. We appeal most earnestly to our brother and sister artists for help for this very sad case. We realise that of late the pressure of contributing to charities has been very great, but we have gone thoroughly into this case, and can assure "all" that it is most deserving and "urgent." Contributions will be thankfully received and duly acknowledged in The Era.

(Signed) JOE O'GORMAN,
FRED GRAY (late partner),
ALBERT LE FRE.

The Era, 5, Tavistock-street, W.C., May 17.

Miniature Marie was quite delighted with the sheaf of cable messages from her brother and sister artists on her twenty-first birthday (April 12). She thanks them all for their kind wishes. Marie had a large birthday party, at which her African friends drank her health and wished her long life, and she was presented with a pretty birthday cake 3ft. high. Around the base were written these words: "To our jolly little English girl, Marie." She also had many presents, among them being a handsome diamond ring, a gold necklace with a gold-mounted green-stone drop, a gold photo frame, a gold-mounted belt, a miniature silver clock, a gold and ruby brooch, and a silver fitted dressing-case.

We regret to hear that Mr. Andie Caine was taken very ill at the Empire, Burnley, and was immediately ordered to Blackpool by his medical adviser. He is suffering from an attack of influenza and tonsilitis.

LONDON VARIETY THEATRES.

SADLER'S WELLS.

One of the leading attractions in the current programme at Sadler's Wells is the appearance of Miss Dolly Elsworthy and company in the Parisian sketch entitled Nana. The plot is suggestive of the well-known David Garrick story, and also of the episode in the life of the famous actress Nance Oldfield, and on which the one-act play of that title was founded. Armand Duval, a young Frenchman of good family, has fallen in love with the actress Nana, and is quite prepared to make her his wife. When his father discovers that his son has become infatuated with a woman whose past comes under the description of "shady" he pays a visit to the actress in her dressing-room at the Olympian Theatre, where she is engaged, and begs her to give up Armand, as such a marriage would be fatal to the young man's prospects in life. Nana has a real love for Armand, and for his sake she resolves to sacrifice her own feelings. When the young man next visits her he finds her engaged in writing a letter to the Count de Varville and obtains possession of it. Nana declares that it is her intention of becoming the Count's mistress, and Armand, furious at her apparent duplicity, bitterly denounces her conduct and leaves her. The actress falls ill, and Armand's father having informed him of the plot by which the separation with Nana was brought about, they visit the dying young woman. After a scene charged with deep pathos throughout Nana expires in the presence of the man she loves. Miss Dolly Elsworthy plays with much feeling the part of the actress, the dying scene proving very effective. Mr. J. Wilson displays the requisite earnestness in the rôle of Armand Duval; and Mr. J. Howard is well placed as Duval père. Mr. N. Grimson furnishes a telling sketch of Alphonse Prudhomme, an unfortunate dramatist whom Nana assists by the purchase of one of his comedies. Mr. M. Storey as the Count de Varville and Miss C. Rivers as Louise, Nana's maid, complete the cast.

Mr. Herbert Clifton, in the character of a ragged street urchin, mimics Harry Lauder, and by clever management of a falsetto also gives excellent imitations of Miss Gertie Millar and other well-known musical comedy actresses. Mulvey and Miriam appear with success in their comedy act, The Studio, the gentleman appearing as an artist, who patters much more than he paints, and the lady representing his model. They conclude their lively turn with a song and dance. The Lynches score with a picture-song, "Just for the sake of society," the chorus being heartily taken up by the audience, led by the lady vocalist. Mr. Milner Verren is also well received for a sentimental song; the Nettas, duettists, win appreciative applause; Miss Cissy Lupino, a young quick-change artist, affords evidence of her ability as a dancer; the Sisters Edwards, vocalists, dancers, and drummers, and Miss Jennie Venton, comedienne and dancer, meet with deserved success.

To lovers of the romantic drama Dandy Dacre, which is being played by the author, Mr. Leonard Mortimer's, No. 1 company, cannot fail to afford complete satisfaction. Mr. Mortimer himself as the hero, Joseph Willin, does justice to the part, and he is excellently supported by Mr. Reginald Weighhill as Sir Michael Collyn, Mr. Edwin J. Collins as Richard Dacre, and Mr. Arthur Bawtree as Paul Hiensen. Good work is also done by Miss Edith Lewis as Alma, Paul's sister, and Miss Ida Clifford as Lady Eva Collyn. The piece is admirably staged, and the plot, which illustrates the maxim that "a true soldier sacrifices all for his country's cause," was followed with close interest. The bill also includes a series of pictures entitled "The Haunted Motor," shown by Raymond's Bio-Tableaux. The "model orchestra" is conducted by Mr. Payne, and Mr. Pete Murray efficiently fulfils the duties of acting-manager.

THE SOUTH LONDON.

Local amateurs have had an excellent chance of distinguishing themselves this week at the South London, where the enterprising manager, Mr. Wm. Payne, has organised a competition for the best rendering of any of Mr. Tom Leamore's songs. South Londoners are evidently a little coy, for at the second house on Wednesday Mr. Payne had to lament the lack of competitors. He pointed out that ten prizes were offered, including three from the management, consisting of a sovereign, ten shillings, and five shillings, the remainder being from local tradespeople, and urged the members of the audience to make an effort. A response was forthcoming in three aspirants for the promised reward, one of whom, however, succumbed to an attack of stage fright and put off his appearance. The other two, one of whom displayed no little talent in "The Park Keeper," were chosen to compete in the final last (Friday) evening. Mr. Tom Leamorg, who received a hearty welcome, had himself contributed two selections. One is always sure of some novel creation from Mr. Leamore, and in "What a friend" he touched a caustic note that struck home, while in "The Old-fashioned story" there are happily pauses for laughter, which were duly filled in by the audience, who also found the refrain sufficiently tuneful to take it up with heartiness.

Love-lilts of "Louisa" and of "Liddy" are sung with infinite zest by Mr. Herbert La Martine, who receives the reception reserved for an old favourite. The difficult and intricate steps with which his singing is accompanied are executed with amazing neatness and grace, and the artistic turn is greeted with long and loud cheers. Thunderous applause is also lavished upon Lotto, Lilo, and Otto, whose intrepid feats on cycles are watched with delight. The humours of the policeman are highly relished, while the cleverness of his escapades are also recognised. Great fun is made out of the polo match, and when in the end the chief performer mounts to the handlebars of a tandem machine, standing on its back wheel, and at this precarious height rides without holding, round the stage, the applause is tremendous. Carrie Laurie's Juveniles have to respond to many recalls for their clever singing and dancing, and the continuous comicalities of the youthful scholar cause unlimited mirth.

A pretty appearance and dainty style recommend Miss Queenie Essex to favour, and she pleases with her song, in which the query, "Isn't that a girl all over?" is asked. Later on, Miss Essex utilises her tuneful soprano in a cultivated rendering of the ballad, "Dear heart," which gains great appreciation. Cole and Rags have innumerable devices for creating mirth, in which they thoroughly succeed. Their comedy juggling is distinguished by not a little skill, which is deservedly recognised. Miss Maud Courteney, to whom reference is made in the notice of another hall, appears with equal success at the South London; Mr. Bert Terrell, a double-voiced vocalist, sings jödels in the character of a Swiss and a Dutch boy; and Ruffell's Bioscope depicts a thrilling fight between Indians and white men in the backwoods as well as the amusing adventures of a man with a ladder. Mr. Charles E. Howells leads his musical forces with credit, and also accompanied the competitors on the piano when the band parts were not forthcoming.

RICHMOND THEATRE.

As usual here, a good bill has attracted greatly increased audiences. The Sisters Lytton are clever duettists, and sing their way into public favour. Mr. Oswald Marshall is droll enough in his sketch, A Hot Time; he is efficiently assisted by a lady, but as her name is not on the bill we are unable to give her the honour which she merits. Miss Marie Empress, always a favourite here, sings with good effect "The British Girl"; her second contribution, "Just a little bit," evokes much applause, and merits it all. Then the Gibraltar Girls, managed and conducted by Mr. Frank Somerville, take the stage, and vocalise pleasingly and fence better; their sword exercises are done quite smartly; Mr. Somerville may be complimented on the liberal way he has costumed his company. Mr. Hesketh Meade's fine voice is heard to especial advantage in "The Village Blacksmith," the song being cleverly illustrated by the Biograph. The Gordon Leicester Sketch company rattles through the comedy (in point of fact, it should be called a farce), Who is Sylvester? This little piece, from the pen of Mr. Frank A. Morgan, consists of a series of complications and innumerable disguises. By far away the best work is done by Miss Cecile E. Anson, who, as a garrulous maid-of-all-work, Maria Timms, causes screams of laughter; Mr. Claude Dampiere is especially good as a fire-eating Colonel Horton; and Miss Grenville is distinctly humorous as Julia. Miss Irene Vene is charming as Dolly; and everyone works indefatigably and wins the hearty applause of an amused audience. Messrs. Carden and Haines, announced as Australia's vocal entertainers, prove that our colonial artists can turn out of a lot of good work. Very charmingly does Miss Rosamund Bury sing "Whispers of Love," and she is enthusiastically applauded. The Bros. Mills display their undoubted ability on the trapeze, and work admirably together. Mr. Harry Cadle's productions are always amusing and often interesting, his latest, described in the language of Cockayne, "The most gorjus pantermime, Mick Whittintun." It may be said of Mr. Cadle's company of juveniles that they are as precocious as they are clever. They act, sing, dance, and fool around generally to the manifest delight of the audience. Vernon's Bioscope concludes an exceptionally entertaining bill.

CAMBERWELL PALACE.

Food for laughter is provided in abundance for the residents of Camberwell, who this week find The House Boat moored at the palatial hall so ably administered by Mr. P. A. Lennon. The vessel is manned by Mr. John Leopold's company, which throughout long years has held an enviable reputation for acrobatic skill combined with humour. The best efforts of the troupe are put forth in their present production, and audiences are twice nightly sent into throes of merriment as well as admiration at the extraordinary feats performed on board the house boat up the river. The famous family fully sustain their reputation, and loud cheers are showered upon them. A concession to the craze of the hour is made by the engagement of the Four Golden Ayeshas, who furnish a series of nude statuary in bronze. The poses are graceful and effective, while a figure which reclines on a shelf at the base remains rigid right up to the end.

The mirth of the evening is largely contributed to by Rich and Rich, who supply a wealth of humour in their cross-talk, their ornithological encounter taking the ear of the house, which is highly appreciative throughout. Verno and Voyce give their "Admiral and Newsboy" duet, which is quite a romantic tale in song. Mr. Verno's robust baritone still rolls majestically in his songs, and the newspaper medley rendered by Mr. Voyce is loudly cheered. A cordial welcome awaits the Poluskis, who, by desire of the management, as they assert, present a new show. Their method of procedure is very diverting, and the duet which they profess to render is highly relished by the audience.

Ballads of well-won popularity are submitted by Miss Lilian Lowe, who gains loud tokens of admiration for her delivery of the old-time refrain, "I never knew till now how much I loved you," and for the equally familiar "Song that reached my heart." Miss Lowe has a powerful voice and excellent enunciation, but if she took her songs a little quicker it would improve their rendering. Miss Maud Courtney engages the attention of all with a number of yarns, and has also a topical song with the refrain, "Wouldn't that be a dream?" The young lady has a piquant Yankee twang and an ingenuous smile that speed her in favour, and her tasteful costume adds to the attractiveness of a turn that is greatly enjoyed. Mr. Bert Brantford's impersonation of a sweep who is mistaken for a coon has the welcome element of novelty, and the step-dance with which it is embellished is very cleverly executed, and thoroughly deserving of the plaudits it obtains. Vernon's Imperial Bioscope depicts a series of startling adventures which befall the purchaser of a ladder; and other contributors to a well-filled bill consist of Mr. Jack Lorimer, the jovial Scotsman; Miss Marie Reeve, and Mr. Charles Clark. The excellent orchestra controlled by Mr. Leon A. Bassett performs its duties admirably.

EMPRESS, BRIXTON.

Mr. Nelson Francis, the popular manager here, has arranged for his patrons this week an exceptionally interesting programme, which is being enjoyed by well-filled houses. A prominent place must be accorded to George Mozart, a real Brixton favourite. It is his first visit to the hall since his return from the land of the almighty dollar, and on the evening of our visit he was in his happiest vein. In his humorous impersonations he imitates ladies of different ages buying tickets for the theatre, and he shows his observation of character and his experience of life when he contrasts the young man waiting for his sweetheart with the husband waiting for his wife. His "Mudlark village band" also adds considerably to the hilarious nature of his turn. The mimicry of Mr. George Newburn includes faithful imitations of several of our leading comedians. Amongst others may be mentioned Walter King, Mark Sheridan, R. G. Knowles, George Lashwood, and Harry Lauder. Lily Lonsdale, a charming vocalist, sings a couple of numbers with capital effect, being heard to special advantage in "Dreams." Loud and prolonged applause rewards her efforts. A couple of fine acrobats are the Picquays, husband and wife, who are presenting a number of most difficult tricks, which they accomplish with an ease that is surprising. Their work is neat and facile in the extreme. Their turn concludes with some clever hand dancing by the gentleman. Katie Butler, a fascinating comedienne, is causing roars of laughter by the drollery of her numbers, which are entitled "Oh, aye" and "He comes out again to-day." The latter especially is a clever song, and its scoring power is greatly enhanced by the whimsical way in which it is rendered. Farr and Farland are full of funny patter, which is smartly given, and they fairly make the house roar. The way they work up their different sallies is smart, and they have a most enthusiastic reception. As a finish to their doings they play on banjoes with much facility and charm that popular overture, "Poet and Peasant."

Hardeen, the handcuff king, is fairly mystifying Brixtonites by the rapid manner in which he succeeds in releasing himself from any hand or legcuffs that may be placed upon him. Dan Hendy, an acrobatic dancer, is scoring well, and Kathleen Gray is heard to advantage in a couple of numbers. Percy Hannan is the possessor of a good voice; and Isabelle Dillon sings with excellent effect a couple of songs, and increases her attractiveness by some neat dancing, and shows herself to be no mean exponent of the art of terpsichore. The McConnell Trio have a very amusing number; and Fred Eustace and company are presenting their thrilling and entertaining sketch, The Amber Light, of which we have already written favourable notices in these columns. A capital evening's amusement is brought to a conclusion by a most interesting series of pictures on the Bioscope, entitled "The Automobile Thieves."

THE PARAGON.

The destruction of Pompeii was the fascinating theme on which was founded one of the most popular of the late Bulwer Lytton's novels; and the well-known athlete known as Ben Hur has availed himself of the opportunities for highly effective spectacular display which the grim story of destruction and death presents. A tableau represents the Eruption of Vesuvius; and the audience are led to assume that there was only one survivor of the terrible catastrophe, Glaucus, a man of immense strength. In this character Ben Hur introduces an interesting exhibition of Græco-Roman poses, affording convincing evidence of the truly remarkable degree of physical perfection that can be attained by a course of training assiduously pursued. The play of muscles in the back and shoulders is quite wonderful. In the scene representing the Villa of Glaucus eight Roman gladiators and centurions, in the imposing and picturesque costumes of the period, make their appearance, and take part in the subsequent performance. Ben Hur then gives an exhibition of weight-lifting. One of his feats is to lift and bear aloft with one hand a gladiator clad in armour. He follows this up by lifting two of the warriors of the period; and finally he bears a load consisting of heavy weights and six men in armour. A sack-lifting competition also excites considerable interest as well as amusement. Members of the audience are invited to take part in the competition, Ben Hur offering the sum of £5 to any man who succeeds in performing the same feat with the sack of sand that he himself accomplishes, three prizes being also given by the management for the best attempts by those who enter into the competition.

Mr. John Le Hay is appearing here in the farcical musical episode, entitled Poor Beggar. In the leading part the well-know comedian gives a most laughable embodiment of the beggar, whom the lady is compelled to kiss. The unpleasant-looking mendicant sets a value upon the kiss, and makes a bargain with the lady, but is saved the ordeal by the timely arrival of her sweetheart. The lovers are well played by Miss Mary Duggan and Mr. Charles Cautley.

The masses appreciate good music, and selections from Verdi's opera, Il Trovatore, presented by Mr. Charles Fisher's "Pocket Opera" company, are listened to at the Paragon with evident delight. All the favourite melodies are introduced. Mlle. Zelle Lucano successfully doubles the parts of Azucena and Leonora, singing the music with excellent effect. She is admirably supported by Mr. Michael Dwyer as the Count di Luna and Mr. Charles Fisher as Manrico. A very acceptable turn is given by the Selbinis, who are expert cyclists, and also perform many difficult feats, consisting of head-to-head balancing, juggling, acrobating, and posturing. Every member of the troupe contributes to the success achieved, and the performance generally wins the warm approval of the audience. Miss Lily Burnand, one of our most popular comediennes, has made a big hit with her latest song, "Up we'll go; or, the beautiful flying-machine," which foretells of the delights of a mode of travelling which our successors will doubtless enjoy. Miss Burnand wears a charming costume, and puts plenty of spirit into her rendering of her new ditty. Miss Queenie Essex, a refined comedienne, sings "Isn't that a girl all over?" and meets with a good reception. The Mysterious Mr. "C." has a budget of funny stories to relate, some old and some new; he also scores as a vocalist by his rendering of "Killarney" and other songs. Mr. Harry Conlin and Mr. Frank Boyce, comedians, are welcome contributors to the evening's entertainment; and other attractions include Miss Daisy Stratton, a pleasing comedienne; "The Hooligans of the West," portrayed by Ruffell's Imperial Bioscope; and the Paragon Pictures. During the interval a selection, "Echo Des Bastions," is played by the orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Arthur Grimmett, a xylophone solo by Mr. J. Ball being worthy of mention. Mr. Charles Beecham, the manager here, fulfils his duties with the utmost care and courtesy.

"THE RED LETTER."

An Episode, in Three Scenes, performed at the Chelsea Palace, on Monday, May 13.

Samson Whyte .....Mr. H. Leslie Bell
Harry Shaw .....Mr. Fredk. Wilson
Cecil Bartnell .....Mr. Frank Chapman
Constable .....Mr. George Harrison
Evelyn Shaw .....Miss Lilly Pearl

The dramatic elements of a notorious case have been cleverly extracted and compressed into an exciting sketch from which objectionable features have been eliminated without disturbing the thrilling effect of the whole. The audience on Monday were deeply engrossed in the skilfully connected incidents, and thoroughly appreciated the terse and epigrammatic dialogue, in which no taint of offence could be found. The names of the principals have been slightly altered, but it is easy to discover in Harry Shaw the resemblance to the unhappy man now awaiting trial for murder. The millionaire visits Samson Whyte in his office in the Roof Garden Theatre, and agrees to lend him a sum of money on condition that he leaves New York. Shaw is on his way to Pittsburg, and takes an affectionate farewell of his wife Evelyn, who is appearing at the theatre. Whyte induces Evelyn to allow him to escort her home, and the ride in a cab to Shaw's residence is depicted on the cinematograph. During the journey Whyte kisses the young wife, and on arriving at the house in Madison-square he reminds the girl of their former relations, when the sound of a footstep is heard and Whyte makes his escape through the window into the arms of a police-officer. While Whyte is endeavouring to persuade the constable that it is his own house Shaw suddenly returns, having missed his train, and Whyte declares that there is a burglar in the house, and that Mrs. Shaw is in danger. Meanwhile Whyte's secretary, who is a member of a gang of thieves, has entered the house for the purposes of robbery, and having secured a case of jewels is about to decamp when his exit is barred by Mrs. Shaw. The thief soon disposes of her by strangling, so that when Shaw and Whyte enter they find Evelyn lying dead. Shaw accuses Whyte of the murder and also of stealing the banknotes which he lent him. Whyte produces the red envelope containing the notes, and asserts that Shaw gave them to him, also declaring, with a sneer, that he had accompanied Evelyn home at her own wish. He is in the midst of his taunts when Shaw, suddenly producing a pistol, shoots him dead and is taken into custody by the policeman, who has been a witness of the scene. The success of the sketch was due in a large measure to Mr. H. Leslie Bell, who carried himself well in the part of the unscrupulous Samson Whyte, playing with cool assurance, and causing no little amusement by the cynical humour which he imported into the rôle. Miss Lilly Pearl made a pretty Evelyn, and acted the trying part with delicacy and grace; and Mr. Fredk. Wilson's vigour and intensity were invaluable in his portrayal of the millionaire. All the characters had a hearty recall at the close of the sketch, which is effectively mounted, the interior of Shaw's house being furnished in artistic style.

Two disappointments occurred in the ordinary programme on Monday, but Mr. J. Norman Berlin, who has for so long been discharging the managerial duties of the hall, had the fact prominently placarded, and secured very efficient deputies. Little Tich, unable to appear through indisposition, was replaced by Mr. Percy Honri, who won a veritable storm of applause for his selections and imitations on the concertina, as well as for his fine singing and humorous patter. Mr. Jock Whiteford's place in the programme was taken by Burns and Danvers, who made an unmistakable hit with the ballad singing by the lady and the diverting eccentricities indulged in by her partner at the piano. A hilarious time was furnished by the McConnell Trio in their musical sketch, in which some good singing was also contained; and Mr. Wilson Hallett touched the chord of pathos as well as the springs of laughter by his child mimicries. Miss Elly Adair sings tunefully and dances in excellent style; and contributions to the current bill are also made by Mr. Tom Lytton, comedian; Miss Marie Elsie, burlesque actress; Miss Nora Moore, comedienne; and Jeapes' Animated Graphic.

SHEPHERD'S BUSH EMPIRE.

Mr. B. G. Maclachan, as usual, has a capital programme to offer his patrons at this handsome hall. Heading the bill is that famous pantomimist, Paul Martinetti, who, supported by an excellent company, appears in A Night Attack. Amongst those who specially distinguish themselves in addition to Mr. Martinetti are Mr. Alfred Martinetti, Miss Clara Martinetti, and Mr. John Heard. A very pleasant turn is provided by the Lindons, vaudeville entertainers, in Monks at Play. The company includes one lady and three gentlemen, all possessing good voices. An unusually good film is shown by the American Bioscope this week It is entitled "The Blind Beggar's Dog," and is a series of pictures which tell a pathetic story. Esta Stella is a dainty singer and dancer; this clever lady has an enthusiastic reception. Marzella's Birds provide an interesting quarter of an hour; the collection contains pigeons, parrots, macaws, and ravens, and the tricks they perform are wonderful. Horace White is responsible for a clever ventriloquial turn; and the Five Osranis appear very successfully in a rough-and-tumble burlesque. Millie Lindon, always a great favourite, and deservedly so, sings three songs in her own delightfully clever manner; Ross and Grayson provide a musical, singing, and dancing mélange, and cause roars of laughter. The programme is completed by Lonnen Meadows and company, in a very funny farce, entitled Kiss Your Father. Mr. Meadows appears as Felix O'Callaghan, and receives good support from Miss Ada Tilley and Miss L. Leslie and Messrs. F. Fenton, J. Joyce, and W. Dunlop. Mention should be made of the excellent orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Henry W. May. In front Mr. Maclachlan is as kindly and courteous as ever.

THE PORTSMOUTH HIPPODROME.

The new Portsmouth Hippodrome in Commercial-road, to be opened on Monday next, has been erected at a cost of about £40,000. It is one of the most sumptuous, beautifully fitted and artistically decorated places of public amusement in the country. In the designs Mr. Bertie Crewe, who was responsible for the new Lyceum, seems to have studied at every turn the comfort of those who will in the future visit the building for the purpose of obtaining an evening's amusement conducted on rational and up-to-date lines.

Entering by the stage-door in Salem-street, one is at once struck with the magnificence of the entire interior. On either side of the house are four commodious boxes, two in a tier. Above the lavishly-upholstered stalls is the grand circle, with its promenade; and higher still is a huge gallery stretching back to the very end of the building, with no fewer than fourteen rows of seats arranged in a semi-circle and placed high above one another, so that everyone can see and hear. The stage is 30ft. deep by 62ft. 10in. wide, and at the back there is a block of dressing-rooms, eight in number, splendidly fitted, heated with hot water, and lighted by electricity. The stage is cut off from the auditorium by a fire-proof curtain of double asbestos, fitted with a patent automatic sprinkler, and, as a further precaution against fire, there is a good supply of hydrants on either side.

The scheme of decoration is white picked out in gold, and the delicacy and artistic beauty of the work is naturally one of the features of the building. The ceiling is quite a work of art in itself. In the centre is a grand circle panelled by four exquisitely painted pictures, and surrounding these are innumerable hanging electric lights. The boxes are hung with rich scarlet hangings, and the seats throughout are of similar colour. The stalls are covered with a rich Wilton carpet, and the plush-covered tip-up seats are so arranged as to enable people to walk comfortably along between the rows without disturbing those who have already taken their seats. On each side of the stalls, too, there is an elaborate marble balustrade, highly polished and giving a worthy finish. At the rear of the stalls is the pit, with its continuous row of seats upholstered in plush, and with its wood floor covered with cork lino. Here, too, fine exits are provided.

The main entrance, with its beautifully polished steps, its mosaic floor, its three massive doors of mahogany, and its clouded ceiling picked out in gold, has on either side of it the pay-boxes, and from the vestibule entrance is made to the foyer by a flight of steps. This part of the building is also artistically decorated, and the floor is covered by Wilton carpet. On the right is the stalls bar fitted with a public telephone call office, and replete with lounges. From the foyer another staircase leads to the circle level, backed by a wide promenade, separated from the seats by a fine barrier of polished mahogany, and the entire floor is covered with a Wilton carpet, the tip-up seats being of scarlet plush.

The circle saloon is a very fine apartment, measuring 40 feet by 20 feet, and magnificently fitted. The windows are of stained glass, and the hangings and decorations are of a most costly character. In the centre of the circle is a specially-fitted biograph box with a fire-proof chamber.

In the gallery, too, the convenience and comfort of audiences have been a first consideration.

At the Pierrot Pavilion, Northwich, Mr. Glanmore Jones is presenting a goodly array of talent this week. Miss Lou Langley is a winsome soubrette; Mr. Walter Sutton has some clever laughing songs; Mr. Barry Gilmore's eccentricities still find great favour; Mr. Fred Temple's sweet tenor voice is heard to advantage in well-chosen songs; and Mr. Darren Llewellyn, the Welsh baritone, who came here with a great reputation, has most worthily maintained it. The items provided by the popular duo, Messrs. Glanmore Jones and Lindon Wyatt, also much enhance the value of a highly entertaining programme.

At the Aberystwyth Coliseum during this week Mr. Catlin's Royal Pierrots are occupying the boards previous to commencing their season in the Castle grounds, for which they have been engaged by the Corporation. The company provides a first-class entertainment, the artists being Messrs. Archibald Gervase, Fred Taylor, Coningsley Brierley, Wal Kent, Chas. Tyers, Thomas E. Witty, and Mr. T. W. Johnson, together with his piccaninnies.

The Rev. Ethelred Luke Taunton, a Roman Catholic clergyman, living at Coram-street, Russell-square, was seized with an attack of angina pectoris while attending Messrs. Maskelyne and Devant's entertainment at St. George's Hall on Thursday afternoon, the 10th. He fell from his seat, apparently in a fit, and was removed to hospital, where it was found that he was dead. A verdict was returned of death from natural causes at the inquest.

"THE ERA" SHILLING FUND FOR THE MUSIC HALL HOME.

Mr. Barrasford and Miss Vesta Victoria join in a strenuous appeal for the generosity of the profession in support of The Era Shilling Fund. When, twelve months ago, we brought before our readers the claims of this deserving charity, a very considerable sum of money was collected in separate shillings. That last year's appeal, however, and most of the money obtained by it, are, as Miss Marie Lloyd would say, "a thing of the past, old dear."

Subscriptions announced 2426½ shillings.

THE ALHAMBRA IMPROVEMENTS.

How has it all been done without any closure, or without the public having the faintest notion of the alterations, constructive and decorative, that have been going on, as it were, under their very nose? These are the questions that Mr. Alfred Moul, the managing-director of the Alhambra, and Mr. George Scott, its manager, have had to answer scores of times during the last week, when the habitués of the oldest home of ballet in Leicester-square have gazed with wondering eye at the combination of beauty and luxury that presents itself to the eye of the spectator gazing at the vast and lovely house from the back of the conductor's chair. The same house, but how different! Every tier, from the grand circle upwards, has been improved almost beyond recognition. In addition to being wholly redecorated, a new installation of seats with arms has been made, the rake of the amphitheatre being treated so as to afford an unobstructed view of the stage from any position. To this part of the house access is gained now by two much-improved entrances and staircases, both having been entirely rebuilt in accordance with the specifications of the London County Council.

A conspicuous improvement has been made in the balcony, a very popular part of the house. The Mauresque style of architecture lends itself admirably to rich schemes of embellishment, and the decorative display in the splendid lounge, now practically remodelled, at once strikes the visitor as being superb. Especially tasteful are the electroliers, which are modelled like the hanging branch of a pear tree, with the incandescent bulbs to represent the fruit. Another immense improvement is to be found in an elevated and a spacious cinématograph chamber, with an electrical equipment which is believed to be without its equal in the world, and which is in all respects commensurate with the standard excellence of the "Urbanora" exhibitions. The old balcony entrance which previously led to this part of the house has been completely demolished, and an entirely new and much-needed entrance hall and staircase, the latter leading to the arcaded annexe which opens directly on to the balcony tier, have been created.

The exit accommodation has been materially augmented by the conversion of a staircase, which had for some time been used as a temporary entrance, into a second new balcony exit; and there is now a pass staircase to the grand circle, for the use of visitors wishing to transfer.

The sighting facilities of sitters in the grand circle left something to be desired, and this part of the house has been reformed altogether, structuarlly and decoratively. While the front has been considerably lowered, the altitude of the risers of each row of seats has been readjusted, thus greatly improving the view of the stage, as well as enhancing the acoustic properties. Here in the buffet bar the decorative design and the Mauresque scheme of ornamentation, carried out in cream and blue lustre tiles, have reached the last word in ornate richness. A most valuable appanage of the Leicester-square entrances is the equipment of a new vestibule, which enables the visitor to go direct to the stalls from the Square without climbing the staircase to the grand circle and descending therefrom. The fauteuils have been sumptuously reupholstered in dark blue velvet, a lovely contrast to the rich red carpeting; but while the comfort of the richer patrons of the house has received special attention, the proletariat in the pit have not been in any way neglected. A new entrance, 9ft. wide, with a spacious lobby, leads directly into this part of the theatre, and in a comfortable tip-up chair the pittite will now take his pleasure gladly, contentedly, even enthusiastically.

The entire work has been carried out under the supervision of Mr. W. M. Brutton, the Alhambra Company's architect.

"ANCIENT BRITONS."

A New Sketch, Written by Herbert C. Sargent.

Obadiah Bates .....Mr. John Humphries
Jessie .....Miss Iris Coley
Dr. Jack Beaumont .....Mr. Bay Russell

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

This smartly-written trifle, which was originally produced about a month ago, has throughout the week shaken audiences with laughter at the Empire Theatre, Liverpool. The theme is altogether out of the common, which fact, no doubt, explains why it has been so well received. Briefly, the story is that a well-to-do though somewhat eccentric old man named Bates nurtures the notion that people are not as perfect, or circumspect, as they should be, claiming that the ancient Britons were the "correct thing." He displays some antipathy to a young doctor named Beaumont, who has avowed his regard for Jessie, the old man's daughter, and threatens him with pains and penalties should he dare to make further advances. Although the scheme propounded by Beaumont to "sicken" his desired father-in-law of his bias in regard to ancient Britons is somewhat far-fetched, it causes screams of laughter, and makes a happy twenty minutes' turn. The doctor supplies Jessie with a drug, which, slipped into the old man's whisky, causes him to become dazed and drunken, and whilst in that condition Beaumont undresses him behind a screen and attires him in the "garb" of an ancient Briton. The doctor and Jessie appear in similar "costumes," when Bates awakes, and, on being threatened with injury by his fellow "Britons," consents to the marriage of his daughter with his enemy, Beaumont. Wherever presented the merry little sketch is bound to prove an acceptable item, particularly when to Mr. Humphries is allotted the rôle of Bates. His opening remarks, contemptuous of the present-day mode of living and dressing, were extremely funny. Then, again, Mr. Humphries' work in indicating the gradual effects of the potion dropped into his liquor was particularly well done. Mr. Russell did excellently as the amorous doctor; and Miss Coley's efforts were of great value in the successful interpretation of the sketch.

Leicester.

THE Great May Fair opened its season here on May 9 for six days. The ground is, as usual, under the proprietorship of Messrs. P. Collins and Son, with Messrs. Syd Jefferys and J. H. Humphrey acting as ground managers. Among the new additions to this popular fixture are P. Collins' Gordon-Bennett racing motors, P. Collins' helter-skelter lighthouse, J. Collins and Sons' racing motors. Other roundabouts are P. Collins' racing cockerels, J. Collins' horses, J. Collins, jun.'s, twin yachts, and Arthur Twigdon's gondolas. The shows comprise Procter's circus, A. Twigdon's cinematograph exhibition, Barker's electric coliseum, Hasting's midget show, Professor Lenard's natural history exhibition, Professor Cullis's boxing booth, and others. We have the usual variety stalls, shooters, throwing games, cokers, &c. The business has been very good.

Colne Fair.

THE amusements at this fair were provided by Mr. Wm. Shuttleworth, the well-known Lancashire showman, who exhibited miniature motor cars, juvenile horses, park swings, and throwing games.

Congleton.

IMMEDIATELY following Macclesfield is Congleton Fair. The shows continuing this round were Relph and Pedley's, with their cinématograph and razzle-dazzle; Edmund Holland, with gallopers; Charles Relph, with freak show; John Whiting, with Japanese cars; Hurst's three-saddle birds; W. Chaplain, with miniature horses; Marsden, White, and Jewell, with shooters; and the attendant throng of amusement caterers, with throwing games, some thirty in number, from Macclesfield and other fairs on this round.

Mitcham Fair.

ONE gratifying result of the return of a progressive majority on the Mitcham Parish Council is the recognition by that body of the fact which the Showmen's Guild has so persistently kept before the public, that the people of Mitcham have rights which can neither be ignored or stolen from them without a vigorous protest and struggle. In pursuance of the policy of the Guild to keep the matter well before the people of Mitcham, and to fight for the retention of the fair, the following letter has been sent to the Parish Council by the Executive Committee of the Showmen's Guild.

May 15, 1907.

To the members of the Mitcham Parish Council.

GENTLEMEN,—As representing the organised showmen we venture to lay before you reasons for continuing Mitcham Fair. We frankly recognise the very obvious reasons for removing the venue of the fair to a better site. We wish to emphasise the fact that during the agitation last year, that culminated in the High Court proceedings, that the showmen have never opposed the removal of the fair; but that their objections have been to its practical abolition at the fiat of the Mitcham Conservators.

The showmen, in protesting as they did against the action of the Conservators, defended not only their trade interests, but also the rights of the people of Mitcham in their ancient pleasure fair.

Recognising as they do that all pleasure fairs exist at the will of the people, and that for the purpose of their trade, as caterers of popular amusement, they must always carry with them the good opinion of the general public, they made an appeal to the people of Mitcham on the Sunday of the last Mitcham fair. At that meeting, attended by four or five thousand persons, a popular expression of opinion was obtained, and although an opportunity was afforded for the expression of the contrary opinion the vote of Mitcham was unanimously in favour of retaining the fair. The showmen also recognise that the people's fairs should be under popular control, and that the profits arising from the letting of the fair ground should go to the easement of public burdens, and they are hopeful that your council may be able to come to an arrangement with the Conservators whereby the fair may be continued on that portion of the common lands known as "The Three King's Common."

Briefly, the showmen submit the following points for your considerations:—

1. The fair has not been abolished, and cannot be without the consent of the people of Mitcham constitutionally obtained.

2. That the powers vested in the Conservators are primarily intended for the preservation of the common rights of the people of Mitcham, and all that the Conservators, by their special Act of Parliament, obtained was powers to carry out improvements for the benefit of Mitcham. Of necessity, valuable vested interests, such as those held by the Lords of the Manor, had to be provided for, and this was done by the clauses in the Act providing for compensation to vested interests.

3. There is a statute which properly provides for the abolition of fairs. In that Act full provision is made for the expression of public opinion, and the showmen submit that until the machinery of that Act is set in motion by your Council, and public opinion properly expressed, the Conservators have no power to practically stop the people's fair at their own will and pleasure. They, therefore, submit that you, as the custodians of the people's rights, should ask the Mitcham Conservators to remove the fair to the "Three King's Common," and either accept the customary tolls for the benefit of their own funds, or pass over such tollage to the relief of the rates.

The Showmen's Guild is prepared to give to the Conservators and to you full guarantees as to the good order and government of the fair, the respectability of the amusement caterers, the up-to-date, interesting, and modern character of the entertainments. They will provide for, and maintain, perfect sanitary arrangements, and guarantee to leave the ground perfectly clean and free from all litter. They are ready to submit prior to the beginning of their business every show and form of amusement on the fair ground, and to accept the decision of any properly-appointed representatives of the people and the Conservators as to the satisfactory nature or otherwise of the shows and entertainments.

The great desire of the Guild is to co-operate with public bodies in conserving the rights of the people in their pleasure fairs and local holidays, and, at the same time, to raise the tone and character of the show business, so as to merit popular approval, and to keep the shows and entertainments thoroughly up to date.

Signed, on behalf of the Executive of the Showmen's Guild,

President, GEO. SANGER.
Hon. Chaplain, T. HORNE.
Hon. Treasurer, F. H. PEDGRIFT.
Hon. Secretary, T. HURST.

Morpeth May Fair.

THE shows, riding machines, and other novelties at this Northumbrian fair included Cotterell's Coliseum of up-to-date living pictures and varieties, Millar's cinématograph theatre, Westrow's freak exhibits and novelty booth, Murphy's switchback, rifle saloons, bottle smashers, emma sheets, and cokers by Messrs. Lane, Toogood, Newsome, and Millar.

Swaffham Fair.

THE amusements at this fair included hobby horses and swings by the local caterer known as "Uncle Toby." There were toy stalls and throwing games by other local providers. We have a note from the courteous clerk to the District Council informing us that the July and Harvest Fairs are the most popular with the people of Swaffham, and that there is but little interest manifested in the May or November fairs.

Macclesfield Fair.

IMMEDIATELY following the May Festival at Knutsford is Macclesfield, on the Cheshire round. Many of the concerns therefore found at Knutsford go on to Macclesfield. The shows included Relph and Pedley's and Colonel Clarke's cinématograph theatres, and Charles Relph's freak exhibition. The riding machines were J. Whiting's Japanese cars, Relph and Pedley's razzle-dazzle, E. Holland's galloping horses and swings, T. Hurst's racing birds, and I. Richards's steam yachts. The providers of shooting concerns were G. Marsden and Mrs. Jewell; gem horses, miniature motor cars, by Chaplain and Whiting; throwing games, variety, and other stalls were provided by Messrs. Harrington Bros., Jones Bros., Omerod, Beckett, White, Jewell, Lynch, and Whiting.

Aylesbury Fair.

CHIEF among the attractions at Aylesbury were C. Thurston's helter-skelter, or slipping the slip, and Messrs. Smith and Whittle's No. 1 grand star switchback; both of these machines did excellent business. Prof. Elliott's boxing saloon was also accorded a fair share of public patronage.

Abingdon Fair.

THE amusements were provided by the local caterers, Messrs. Jennings, Spurritt, Smart, Buckland, Clarke, Barnard, and Attwell, who exhibited galloping horses, roundabouts, swings, rifle saloons, emma sheets, cokers, and throwing games.

Hereford Fair.

LIKE most of our old English cities, Hereford welcomes the travelling showmen. This year the May fair attracted the very best novelties on the Welsh and Border rounds. These were the magnificent cinématograph theatres of Messrs. Wadbrooke, Jacob Studt, Chipperfield, and Testo; Prince Samouda, with temple of magic; Buckley, with trained animals and birds; Barber's freak show; and the boxing and athletic saloons of Messrs. Taylor and Frank Gess. The riding machines were a record aggregation:—Jacob Studt's motors, switchback, and steam horses; H. Studt and Sons' motor cars, Marshall Hill's steam horses, Purchase's and S. White's big boats, Freeman's juvenile motors, White's helter-skelter, and Hill's slipping the slope and park swings. The fair-ground varieties and throwing games were by Messrs. Stevens, Stanley, Butlin, J. North, Taylor, and Davies.

Wishaw, N.B.

A GREAT crowd of Scotch concerns were at this popular fair. Paulo's circus, Macknay's illusion, Salvonias' grand circus, Hutin's rifle experts, Prof. Moore and school of boxers, the Welsh colliery exhibition, J. Wilmot's steeplechasers, W. Wilmot's leaping horses, Howard's steam boats, and manual swings by Messrs. Thomas and Wilmot. The photo. booths of Messrs. Kelly and Gowdard, the shooters of Messrs. Strand, McIndo, Carrick, Wright, Day, Dawson, Blake, Brockley, Kennedy, Smith, Morris, Freeman, Stevenson, Anderson, Matchett, Thomas, Horne, Knowles, Knight, and Ratliffe. The ground was admirably planned and set out by the town surveyor, Mr. Rogers, whose courteous treatment of the showmen has made him a universal favourite.

North Walsham.

THURSTON AND SONS visited this town, and afforded abundant delight by their magnificent set of electric motor cars. The other caterers included Mr. Stocks, with steam horse set, high flyers, and bottle battery.

The Servian Baby.

A TINY scrap of humanity peeped into existence at the Balkan States Exhibition in the dawn of Friday last. It was a little Servian lady, the daughter of Stana Z. Zodorowich (gipsy mother) and Zivoin (peasant dancer). Already elaborate preparations are being made for the christening, to which a large number of invitations will be issued in the Balkan Village.

President Kemp.

AT the Temperance Hall, Leicester, this week, the above is paying a first visit with the Chrono-Megaphone (Gaumont's patent) singing and talking machine. The entertainment is a capital one.

The Showmen's Guild.

WITH the consent and co-operation of the Vicar of Preston (the Rev. H. S. Butler, Honorary Local Chaplain), the Rev. T. Horne, the Organising Chaplain of the Guild, will hold a meeting in the afternoon, and conduct a service in one of the shows on the fairground at Preston Whitsun Fair next Sunday. The afternoon meeting will be for showmen only, and an address on the work and present position of the Guild will be delivered by the Rev. T. Horne. The chair will be taken at 3.30 prompt, and matters of importance will be brought before the meeting. All showpeople, whether members of the society or not, are invited to attend.

Active Defence Work.

STILL pursuing the active propaganda of Trade Defence on the fairgrounds of the country, the Showmen's Chaplain, after Preston, will hold meetings at Birmingham Fair on the Sunday after Whitsunday. If his annual visit to hold meetings in Wales permits, Mr. Horne purposes paying a flying visit to Penzance and rouse up the West of England showmen to a proper sense of their duty and privileges in the great movement of defending the trade interests of the Showman World.

Boston Fair.

As usual, the local showmen—Messrs. Ben Howden and Son—with Aspland's magnificent motor and gondola machine, were the big attraction of the fair. To everyone's regret, Ben Howden and Son's colossal and grand cinematograph theatre was not ready for its anticipated opening night at the "Home Fair" of the Howden's. The Mayor and Corporation had consented to honour their distinguished townsmen by patronising the opening performance of the new Howden and Son's cinematograph, and its place on the fairground was transferred by Mr. Howden to Crighton, whose cinematograph show is a well-known feature at the Lincolnshire fairs. The other big shows were Tuby and Sons, Enoch Farrer's, Dr. Lawrence's and J. Proctor's cinematograph and variety theatres. These concerns put before the public a splendid variety of up-to-date films. On the machine list were, in addition to the Aspland's set, Councillor Tuby's motors and four abreast gallopers; Smith and Warren's jumping horses; Houldsworth's whirling the whirl; sideshows, varieties, and throwing games by Messrs. Ling, Shaw, Webb, Farrer, Lewis, and others.

Staines Fair.

AT this south country fixture were Biddall's Royal Bioscope, Professor Elliott's assault-at-arms, and several novelty booths. The riding machines were J. Gale's switchback, J. Thomas's three sets gallopers, steam-horses, ostriches. Park swings and shooting ranges were provided by Messrs. Andrews, Thomas, Gwilliam, Mrs. Saunders, and other caterers. On the principal day of the fair business was considerably marred by a sharp thunderstorm.

Leintwardine Fair.

THIS interesting village festival was in the hands of the local showman, Strickland, who provided roundabouts and other fairground varieties.

Private Business at Evesham.

SHOWMEN visiting Evesham for business at other times than the Hiring Fair, must bear in mind that a resolution has been passed by the Evesham Town Council that all music must cease at ten o'clock, except on the "Mop" night and the night following. This new regulation is the outcome of a series of complaints by residents around Merstow Green, the chief complainant being the Vicar of Evesham. Of course, this resolution can only be enforced if it is embodied in the terms of agreement accepted by showmen when taking sites on Merstow Green, or on other land controlled by the Corporation. On private land the new regulation cannot have any force.

Maidstone Fair.

PURCHASE'S world-famed menagerie, with M. Marco, Captain Beaumont, Miss Lawrence, and Albert Williams, in animal taming and training, with lions, wolves, hyænas, serpents, and sea lions, formed the chief attraction. The machines were provided by J. Pettigrove and Sons, boxing booth by Bonniface and Adams, shooters and varieties by Messrs. Penfold, Bishop, and the Pettigroves.

Stafford Fair.

AT this old pleasure fair the principal show was Sagar's palace of delight. The machine novelties were P. Collins's motor-cars; W. Davies's four-a-breast horses, twin yachts, juvenile horses, midget boats, and park swings; J. Humphreys, jun.'s, variety stalls, Hayes's overboat, Stokes's Aunt Sallies and coker sheets, and other fair-ground varieties by various caterers.

Maidenhead Fair.

OWING to the great success, the grand carnival, which was reported last week on the Moor, Maidenhead, is held over for another week. The élite of the town assemble every evening, and join in the "fun of the fair."

"White City" Licence.

MR. J. CALVIN BROWN, managing-director of the "White City" at Old Trafford, has stated that the management will not at present press their application for an excise licence. The directors have considered the opposition brought before the magistrates, and have decided to allow time for the justices to observe the class of entertainment it is intended to provide. An application will be made at a later date, when they hope the conduct and the class of the place will weigh with the Bench.

Neath.

MESSRS. BOSTOCK AND WOMBWELL'S Royal No. 1 double menagerie paid Neath a visit after about six years' absence. Some of the finest collections of lions, tigers, hyænas, wolves, zebras, giraffes, camels, elephants, monkeys, birds, &c., were to be seen at this well-known exhibition. The performing Polar bears, the only ones in Great Britain which perform, was alone worth a visit. Another worthy exhibit is the largest dog and smallest pony travelling. The magnificent band well known as Wombwell's Box Hat, played some excellent selections at intervals. The management are to be congratulated upon the clean and healthy condition of the animals.

AFTER an absence of four years, Messrs. Bostock and Wombwell's Royal Menagerie opened a four days' visit at the Veitch Field, Swansea, on Wednesday, and are getting large audiences.

THE annual statute fair was held at Grimsby on Tuesday, but was spoiled to a large extent by the rain, which fell nearly all day. However, there was, in the circumstances, a fair attendance of the public, and the various attractions, though not so busy as was hoped, had a fair amount of patronage. In the old market were Messrs. G. T. Tuby and Sons' motor-cars, and Mr. Lock's roundabouts, and in the Bull Ring Messrs. Tuby's roundabouts were pitched, besides the usual array of swing boats, shooting galleries, &c.

IT is with deepest sympathy we have to record the death of Mrs. Scott, wife of Mr. W. Scott, the well-known circus proprietor, who died very suddenly at Maesteg on May 7. The funeral took place at the cemetery on May 10. Among the floral tributes were beautiful wreaths from her sons and daughters, "to our beloved mother"; Mrs. James Scott, a wreath; from her grandchildren, a wreath; Mr. and Mrs. Hanneford, a wreath; Mr. and Mrs. Yelding, a wreath; from the band of Scott's Circus, a wreath; orchestra and artists, Hanneford's Circus, a wreath; manager and staff, Poole's Theatre, Maesteg, a wreath; artists, Hanneford's Circus, Ireland, a cross; the staff of W. Scott's Circus, a wreath; Mr. and Mrs. Blatt and Della Walsall, a wreath; Mr. and Mrs. Sanders, a wreath; Mr. Williams, auctioneer, and members of his staff, Maesteg, a wreath.

ANSWERS TO SHOWMEN.

W. S.—We have made full enquiries, but, unfortunately, there is a considerable element of doubt. It all depends whether the competition or the game comes under the Lottery Act, and it would materially help us in making further enquiries if you sent particulars of the game for which you desire to give away cigarettes as prizes. It is quite clear that you cannot sell cigarettes without a licence, and it is also clear that you cannot hold a travelling licence. Licence-holders must have a fixed place of business. There is a temporary licence granted for seven days, and this would have to be applied for, for each place where you set up business. Tobacco licences and all information concerning them are obtainable at any Post Office.

MITCHELL AND KENYON (Blackburn).—We regret to say that we do not know of an agency of the nature you specify. It is the usual custom for firms dealing largely with the fairground business to send an agent to the principal fairs for all the purposes of their trade.

A monster programme has been arranged both indoors and out for the Whitsuntide attractions at the Crystal Palace. In the Centre Transept there will be three grand variety shows, including the Phillipi Brothers (acrobats and equilibrists), the Brothers Webb (musical clowns), the famous Bob Hanlon Troupe, Lavater Lee, the droll, with his dogs and highly-trained mule, and Marjutti, the graceful bender. In the theatre, Mr. Bannister Howard has secured what should prove to be a remarkably interesting novelty, in the children's Forte Thieves pantomime, from Drury Lane. In the Centre Transept a military concert will be given by the grand organ and massed bands, and the many attractions in the grounds will include the third Annual Tradesmen's Horse Show and Parade for challenge cups presented by the Crystal Palace Company. A balloon ascent by Mr. Spencer will take place at 2 o'clock, and the Anerley Bicycle Club's athletic and cycling meeting an hour later; all the best riders will compete. The ostrich farm is also among the vast aggregation of shows, and Messrs. C. T. Brock and Co. will give a magnificent display of fireworks at night.

MR. EDITOR.—SIR,—In your report of the Hippodrome, Wigan, last week, you mention us as Clyo and Pochelle. It should have been yours faithfully, CLYO and ROCHELLE, Theatre Royal, Colne, May 14.

THEATRICAL EMPLOYEES' BENEVOLENT FUND.

The dissolution last year of the Dramatic and Musical Fund led to the termination of the Benevolent Fund, which that society maintained from year to year by the proceeds of the annual dinner that in past times received very influential support from the theatrical profession at large and members of the kindred professions. Considerable sums of money were raised and distributed from year to year, and while, in recent years, the fund rendered less services, it did, no doubt, confer valuable assistance to sections of employees not otherwise able to obtain help in time of need. The dissolution of this Benevolent Fund induced the committee responsible for the Theatrical Sports to arrange to set aside any balance derived from the sports to form the nucleus of a National Benevolent Fund, to be used "to assist employees, men or women, in need, whose case is recommended by a subscriber to the prize fund of the sports, or donor of a prize, or by any theatrical or music-hall association unable, by reason of restrictions imposed by its rules, to assist such cases."

It was also decided to transfer the balance derived from the annual concert given in the Royal Opera House last December by the National Association of Theatrical Employees, to this national fund.

The fund is a charitable fund, pure and simple; and while any employee whose case is recommended as above, may obtain assistance from it, the fund is primarily intended for those who are not eligible to join any existing association, and who, by reason of irregular employment and other adverse circumstances, are not able to provide against the day of sickness or other cause of want.

The fund will be administered, free of cost, by the National Committee of the National Association of Theatrical Employees, under whose auspices the sports will be conducted. This committee is a thoroughly representative body. Mr. James Cullen, master carpenter, St. James's Theatre, is the president, and the committee includes representatives of all sections of the working staff.

Having regard to the purpose of the fund, and to the fact that there is every reason to believe that it will be properly administered and every precaution taken to guard against imposition, it is to be hoped that the sports will have a greater measure of support than has been the case in previous years, although in recent years the events comprising the programme have been keenly contested by a numerous body of competitors.

The committee which will arrange this year's sports is being completed, and Mr. F. H. Pedgrift, of The Era, has kindly consented to act as the honorary treasurer, to whom donations for the prize fund may be sent. It is probable that the date selected will be Tuesday, July 9, or the 16th, and the ground will be, as last year, the Stamford Bridge Sports Ground, Fulham-road, as this ground is more convenient, and, in many respects, the most up to date as regards the necessary accommodation for both competitors and spectators.

A meeting of the Sports Committee will be held next week, and it is desired that those who will assist the committee will send in their names to the honorary secretary, at 29, Wellington-street.

The sports are open to theatre managers and their assistants, actors, and theatre and music-hall civilian employees, the term "employee" to mean anyone employed in any stage department, musicians, attendants, and dressers, and who have been engaged in any such capacity for at least thirteen complete weeks during the past twelve months. Entry fee for one event, 1s.; for every additional event, 6d. Competitors entering two or more events, free admission to the grounds. Tug-of-war team, 2s. 6d.

SUGGESTED LIST OF EVENTS.

One Mile Cycling Handicap.

50 Yards Boot Race.
100 Yards Scratch Consolation Race. Open to those competitors who have not won a prize in the other events.

Any suggestions regarding the competitions to be finally selected will be considered.

The "Era Challenge Shield" for the Tug-of-War competition, is now on view at The Era office. The holders of this shield—the famous Dublin team—will not compete this year.

Donations for the prize fund, or prizes for competitions, will be much appreciated by the committee, and a copy of last year's balance-sheet sent on application to the honorary secretary.

LONDON MUSICIANS.

As was intimated in these columns a week ago, the joint meeting of the Orchestral Association and the Amalgamated Musicians Union, held on Sunday evening, in the (small) Queen's Hall, unanimously endorsed the resolutions submitted on behalf of the committee of each of the two Societies.

Mr. S. Taylor, of the Orchestral Association, presided.

Among the speakers were Mr. J. B. Williams, general secretary of the A.M.U., Mr. C. Jesson, L.C.C., London secretary of the A.M.U., Mr. Orcherton, secretary of the London Orchestral Association, and Mr. Harry Mountford, with whom was Mr. Fred Harrison, of the V.A.F.

The resolutions were as follows:—

1. That the members of both Societies present do hereby instruct their respective executives to draw up a working agreement for joint action by both Societies.
2. That both Societies bind their members not to play for less than 35/- per week of six performances. Extra performances to be paid pro rata
3. That after a date to be agreed upon by the executives of both Societies, the members of both Societies agree not to play with any musician in any Metropolitan theatre or music-hall who is not a member of either society

There was a large attendance.

STAGE STAFF GOSSIP.

The death of Mr. G. Adney Payne will be much regretted by music-hall employées, as he was known to them as a considerate and kind-hearted employer, and, probably, the most popular manager connected with the syndicate halls.

The arbitrator's award may be delayed a few days in consequence of the death of Mr. G. A. Payne, as there were several small points to be further considered with Mr. Walter Payne, who, naturally, will be engaged in other matters. The award may, however, be expected in a few days, and in connection therewith the following correspondence will be found interesting. The representative of the National Association of Theatrical Employées and the witnesses brought to support the claims of the employees in the electricians' department laid stress upon the responsibility and the duties of the electrician in charge, the County Council regulations were referred to during the hearing, and the point in dispute is decided by the letter from the L.C.C., and supports the contention of the employees and their representatives:—

National Association Theatrical Employees,
29, Wellington-street,
Strand, London, W.C.
May 4, 1907.

Dear Sir,—I am desired by my Committee to ask if you will kindly inform me whether, in Clause 54 of the Council's regulations relating to "The Protection of Theatres, &c., from Fire," the words "an electrical installation" means the ordinary electric light apparatus used in Music Halls for stage effects and to light the building; and also, whether the words, "a properly qualified man," mean a qualified electrician?

The clause referred to reads as follows:—

(54) The generating plant and switching gear shall be in the hands of thoroughly competent manipulators, and the engine-room (if any) shall be inaccessible to the Public, and shall have at least one independent entrance. Where there is an electrical installation a properly qualified man must be in charge.

Yours sincerely,
William Johnson,
General Secretary.

Mr. G. L. Gomme,
Clerk of the London County Council,
Spring Gardens.

London County Council,
County Hall, Spring Gardens, S.W.
May 14, 1907.

T.M.C. 8/5 (20).
28309.

Sir,—In reply to your letter of the 4th instant, regarding the intepretation of No. 54 of the Electric Lighting Regulations of the Council, I have to state that the regulation in question is intended to apply to all premises in which there is an electrical installation, whether the generating plant is on the premises or not. The expression, "a properly qualified man," means an attendant who would be able to deal with any urgency repairs and alterations, such as are required almost daily in Theatre installations.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant,
G. L. Gomme,
Clerk of the Council.

The General Secretary,
National Association of Theatrical Employees,
29, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C.

The annual financial statement of the No. 1 branch of the N.A.T.E. is now published; the gross receipts, with the balance carried forward, were £1626 13s. 8d. The total payments, including £80 in death benefits, £25 17s. 6d. in sick benefits, and £23 12s. in grants from the Benevolent Fund was £544 10s. 1d., leaving a balance of £1082 3s. 7d.

A meeting for the benefit of the widow and children of George Clarke, late property dayman at the Comedy Theatre, will be held on Sunday evening at the Salisbury Hotel, St. Martin's-lane, when those who have subscription lists in aid of this fund are requested to report. Mr. Dion Boucicault, who has previously taken great interest in the welfare of the dependents of men who have been in his employ, will administer the fund. The application for subscription in aid of the widow and the five children, who are unprovided for, is under the patronage of Mr. Dion Boucicault, Mr. Arthur Chudleigh, Miss Marie Tempest, Mr. Leonard Lillies, Mr. J. Clifford Brooke, Mr. Buchanan McRae, and the ladies and gentlemen of Truth company. The committee of the N.A.T.E. have voted £2 2s. from the National Benevolent Fund, and regret that the state of the funds will not permit them to donate a larger sum. Messrs. A. Palmer, (master carpenter) and T. Morgan (property master of the Comedy Theatre) are joint hon. secretaries. Mr. Palmer will be the chairman of the meeting on Sunday, and will be supported by Mr. W. Pullinger (master carpenter of the Garrick Theatre), Mr. J. Fraser, Mr. T. Morgan, and Mr. F. Darby.

The committee of the Bioscope Operators' Association met on Tuesday at 29, Wellington-street, Strand, and dealt with a number of applications for membership. The rules are being drafted, and will be submitted to the next meeting of the committee on Tuesday. Cards of membership will be issued in a few days to all candidates who have been elected.

The West Ham and East London Hospital benefited by a charity matinée at the Stratford Borough Theatre, on Thursday, under the immediate patronage of Her Grace the Duchess of Marlborough. In an interval Dr. P. J. S. Nicoll, J.P., the president, with members of the Hospital Aid Committee, appeared on the stage to return thanks to all who had proffered their services, and Mrs. Ellis Fredericks was also thanked for generously lending the theatre, Mr. Fred Fredericks, the general manager, and Mr. Frank Rothsay, the acting manager, being included in the expressions of gratitude, as were Mr. Ben Barrow, the musical director, and the members of the orchestra and the staff at the back and front of the house. The artists, who gratuitously contributed towards the splendid entertainment provided, included Miss Ada Reeve, in selections from her répertoire, which were keenly enjoyed and vociferously applauded; Mr. Malcolm Scott, whose occupancy of the stage was accompanied to a continuous ripple of mirth; Mr. Arthur Cartwright, the Charlie Chetwynd of Mr. Mouillot's Girl Behind the Counter company, who was in fine voice with "The Bandelero"; and Miss Louie Collier, who gave a magnificent rendering of "Il Bacio." From the Stratford Empire, by permission of Mr. Stoll, came Miss Marguerite Broadfoote, whose delightful contribution was warmly appreciated; and Miss Grace Merton, who sang "Dear heart" very nicely. Miss Claire Romaine, a great Stratford pantomime favourite, was most cordially received in "Keep away from the girl" and "I'm getting a big boy now"; Miss Rose Hamilton scored heavily in a Chinese ditty. Mr. Ottley Cranston rendered the "Toreador" song from Carmen in brilliant style; Mrs. L. Simpson sang very charmingly; and Mr. Edgar Romaine was well to the front with a motor scena, Come Along, Little Girl.

Valentine Merelli, who won ephemeral fame by her flight with Jean Gallay, the forger, on board the yacht Catarina, had a narrow escape at Alfortville on Monday. La Merelli during the rehearsal of a piece with the sensational title of Le Boudoir des Fauves (The Boudoir of the Wild Beasts), was lying on a divan between two lionesses, when one of the latter got out of hand, attacked her, and inflicted a severe wound. The lion-tamer, Marck, arrived in time to save her life.

SYDNEY, April 2.—Mr. William Anderson brought his dramatic company to the Criterion Theatre on Easter Saturday, inaugurating a season with The Village Blacksmith. Miss Eugenie Duggan was, as usual, the leading lady, and as Kate Strong she won the sympathies of the audience. Mr. George Cross had been specially trained for the interpretation of John Strong by a series of lessons in horseshoe-making and in wrestling. His acting was excellent throughout. Miss Ada Guildford's embodiment of the girl victim was full of pathos, and she scored an artistic and popular success. Mr. Laurence Dunbar was the scoundrel, Captain Leo, and with Mr. Edmund Duggan as the catspaw, Lucas Marler, a pair of downright stage villains were presented. Mr. Bert Bailey made Billy Twig most amusing, ably assisted by Miss Lena Langridge; while Mr. Temple Harrison and Miss Georgie Leighford did well as the ultimately repentant old couple. Mr. Rege Robins painted the scenery.

"Mother Goose" at Her Majesty's and Robin Hood at the Royal are attracting record business. On Saturday Raffles will be staged at the last-mentioned house, with Mr. Julius Knight as the venturesome cracksman, a much less romantic thief than Robin Hood. In this production Miss Marion Grey will make her first appearance in the Australian metropolis.

"Mrs. Gorringe's Necklace," with its finished acting and up-to-date humour, is filling the Palace. Miss Beatrice Day, Miss Bessie Major, and Mr. Herbert Flemming being cordially appreciated. Next week Dr. Wake's Patient will be revived.

The Tivoli's bill includes little Eileen O'Neil, a clever juvenile instrumentalist; Miss Ida Ingersoll and Miss Brightie Smith, serios; Harry Sadler, comedian; Charlene and Charlene; Master Joseph Dewhurst; Arthur Sharples; Fred Bluett; Fanny Powers, and a host of others in a capital Eastertide programme.

The National Amphitheatre has a long list of artists, including the Brothers Bovis, Carden Wilson, Charles Pope, the Stacpooles, Dick Stead, Lily Hulbert, and others.

Wirth's Circus seats 5,000, and is crowded at every performance. Foley's Circus is doing well. The Haymarket Hippodrome has a sensational drama, Hands Up, founded on the Kelly Gang's career, and Edison's popular pictures are shown at the Queen's Hall. The Oxford Theatre has pictures and vaudeville.

MELBOURNE, April 2.—Her Majesty's Theatre.—Lessee, Mr. J. C. Williamson; Business-Manager, Mr. George Tallis.—Parsifal is proving a strong attraction at this theatre, the house being filled nightly. Miss Brune as Kundry has ample opportunity of displaying her talent, and is ably supported by Mr. Kingston and the rest of the company. The production is lavishly mounted, and bids fair to have a record run.

Theatre Royal.—Lessee, Mr. Bland Holt; Business-Manager, Mr. Christie Simonsens.—The stirring melodrama Revenge was staged for the first time on Saturday evening, and drew a large house. Mr. and Mrs. Bland Holt and the rest of the company met with a most enthusiastic reception, this being their first appearance in Melbourne for over twelve months. Mr. Baker and Miss Ross in the leading parts do excellent work, while the comedy is supplied by Mr. Bland Holt. Some fine scenery has been specially painted for the piece, and, taken on the whole, Revenge is quite up to Mr. Holt's previous productions.

Opera House.—Proprietor, Mr. Harry Rickards; Business-Manager, Mr. Fred Aydon.—The Bicknells, whirlwind dancers, made their reappearance on Saturday evening, and were accorded a good reception. The bill just now contains a number of interesting turns, including Brinn, the cannon manipulator; Cassie Walmer, singer and dancer; Frank Hartly, juggler; Gracie Graham, serio; Signor Antonio and his clever animal act; Miss Eileen Lyons, vocalist; and a host of others. The business during Easter week has been exceptionally good.

Gaiety Theatre.—Manager, Mr. Joe Solomons.—A complete change of programme was submitted for Saturday evening, and included the Volteens, Clara Keating, Claude Sullivan, Blutch Jones, Nellie Hill, Son Sapir, Olive Newman, Frank Yorke, Charles Naylor, and Harry Hill.

MELBOURNE, April 9, 1907.—Opera House.—Proprietor, Mr. Harry Rickards; Business-Manager, Mr. Fred Aydon.—The chief attraction at this theatre just now is Bonita, lady rifle shot. This young lady possesses extraordinary skill, firing from a number of difficult positions with remarkable accuracy. She is assisted by Carlo, the human target. Another turn which meets with great approval is that of Cleopatra, snake enchantress.

SYDNEY, April 9.—Raffles was revived by Mr. J. C. Williamson at Her Majesty's Theatre on the 6th, with Mr. Julius Knight in the title-rôle. It is a one-part play, yet Mr. Harry Plimmer made a big hit with his Crawshay. Mr. Julius Knight was in his element at Raffles; and Miss Elbert Orton was a fine Mrs. Vidal. A new-comer, Miss Marion Grey, made a fairly favourable impression, but Gwendolin Couson is a most unsatisfactory part to play. Lady Melrose was played in dignified style by Miss Mary Godfrey; and Miss Elsie Wilson made all possible capital of the French maid, Marie. The foiled, self-satisfied detective, Carter Bedford, was done justice to by Mr. Robert Willis. Perhaps the most consistently-played part was the difficult one of the foolish old Lord Amersteth by Mr. Leslie Victor.

"Dr. Wake's Patient," with Mr. Herbert Flemming as the big-hearted Farmer Wake, filled the Palace Theatre on Saturday. Several changes in the cast were discovered, Mrs. Brough, Miss Emmie Temple, and Mr. Phillip Leslie being replaced by Miss Madeline Meredith (Countess of St. Olbyn), Miss May Milward (Mrs. Murdoch), Miss Ellen Gaynor (the gipsy), and Mr. Gregor McMahon (Duff Wynterdon). The dear old wife and mother, Mrs. Wake, was again represented by Miss Bessie Major. Miss Beatrice Day sustained her erstwhile success as Lady Geranier; and Mr. Carter Pickford was, as before, the Dr. Wake.

"Mother Goose" is doing phenomenal business at Her Majesty's, and Mr. J. C. Williamson deserves every success because of the thorough manner in which he stages his productions. Miss Olive Morell, Miss Florence Young, Miss Celia Ghilom, Mr. Harry Phydora, and Mr. Harry Shine keep the fun and harmony going at record speed, and the scenic and other effects are as fresh as ever.

The Tivoli has a novelty in the shape of an interesting Japanese sketch, entitled My Yokohama Queen, written by Mr. Johnny Johnson, the music is by Mr. Bert Clark (of Clark and Hamilton); King and Benson do the chief fun-making, and a capital chorus is engaged. Mr. Jack Willis, a Scotch comedian, has been welcomed. Brinn, the cannon lifter, Charlene and Charlene, Boy Dewhurst, Fred Bluett, the Gibson Girls, Fanny Powers, Nellie Kilburn, little Eileen O'Neill, Claude Lepeastrier, and Harry Sadler are still here.

Nelson's Newsboys are now at Moscow, where they were re-engaged for fifteen days after their second performance. They are going on to St. Petersburg. They tell us that a number of English and American turns are doing well in Russia. They return to London in October.

Miss Jeannie Holmes has arranged with Mr. T. E. Rawson for the entire rights of the very successful duologue, Peculiar Julia, and will shortly produce the skit at a London variety theatre.
